The starting fund of the paintings which form the National Museum of the Louvre is due to king François I (1515-1547). This prince, passionately fond of the fine arts, was not content with calling into France some of the most celebrated artists of Italy, Lionardo da Vinci, Andrea del Sarto, Primaticcio, Niccolo dell' Abbate, etc. ; but, through his agents abroad, he ordered or purchased a great many pictures, both Flemish and Italian, with which he decorated his apartments at Fontainebleau. From him have come down to us such master-pieces as la Gioconda and the Virgin with the Rocks of Lionardo da Vinci, the Holy Family and St Michael of Raphael, the Visitation of Sebastiano del Piombo, Charity of Andrea del Sarto, etc... His immediate successors, Henri II and his sons, as well as Henri IV and Louis XIII, do not appear, it is true, to have much cared to enrich this gallery ; nevertheless, the royal collection, as early as the beginning of the 17th century, counted about two hundred works and actually formed, in the palace of Fontainebleau, a Museum, to which all young French painters resorted, as to their chief place of study.

Under Louis XIV's reign, Colbert, having got from the monarch directions to complete the Royal cabinet, devoted to this task the same steadfastness and clever energy as to all the other departments he had under his management. The purchase of the splendid collection left behind by cardinal Mazarin, in 1661, and, in 1671, of that of Jabach, a banker of Cologne, who had set up in Paris, brought to the king's collection, within ten years, 647 paintings of various schools, all first rate but for a very few exceptions, and about 6000 most precious drawings. The former acquisition was made at a price of 224 573 livres; the latter, of 280 839 livres. A large number of purchases was made besides, at home and abroad, by the minister's order, with a view to complete the series; and Colbert was enabled to see, two years before his death, the King's Cabinet carried over to Paris and lodged, for the first time, in the old palace of the Louvre, in the very place where the Convention, more than a century after, was to create and organize the National Museum.

The Mercure galant of December 1681 gives the following account of the inauguration of the gallery: "On Friday, the 5th of this month, the King graced Paris with his presence, and came to the old Louvre to visit his cabinet of pictures. It is in a new apartment, near the splendid gallery called Galerie d'Apollon... What is called the cabinet of His Majesty's pictures, in the old Louvre, comprizes seven large and very high halls, some of which are more than 50 feet in length. Besides that, there are four others in the old "hostel de Grammont", that is adjoining to the Louvre. You can easily think that, when one sees so many places crowded with the pictures of the king, their number must seem to be almost infinite. They embellish the loftiest rooms even above the cornices. Besides, there are in several places screens of a peculiar kind, which are covered with them on both sides, so that, running along the wall, they form three rows of pictures. This is about the number of those by the greatest masters, which are in the eleven halls: sixteen by Raphael, six by Correggio, ten by Lionardo da Vinci, eight by Giorgione, four by the old Palma, twenty three by Titian, eighteen by Paolo Veronese, fourteen by Van Dyck, etc... His Majesty left, highly pleased to have seen all his pictures in such good state. The oldest and rarest ones are shut up in a peculiar sort of cases, flat and gilt, the outside of which is painted; and one might say that these are pictures under which other pictures are hidden. It is necessary to take such precautions for those which, having been painted many years ago, are liable to be easily spoiled." A few years later, in 1709 and 1710, Bailly, the warden of the king's pictures, drew up an inventory of them and mentioned, in this precious document, 2403 pictures.

Unfortunately the royal collection was lodged in the palace of the Louvre only for a short time. The Academy got the use of the premises to hold its "Salons", and all the pictures of the old masters were brought to the palace of Versailles, where, being scattered in the different apartments, they could not be of any use for the instruction of the artists or of the public. In consequence of protests, which La Font de Saint-Yenne expressed eloquently in his Dialogue du grand Colbert, king Louis XV ordered, in 1750, that a part of these collections should be brought back to Paris and exhibited in a public building. The palace of the Luxembourg was chosen, in which the Medici gallery, painted by Rubens, already formed a central place for study. There, then, was opened, october 14th 1750, through Bailly's care, a small museum, where the public got admittance every Wednesday and Saturday, the others days being kept in reserve for the artists. Only 110 pictures were to be seen, but they were the finest in the collection. As to the others, they still decorated the palace of Versailles, and their number was always on the increase, through the continual purchases of Louis XV and Louis XVI, both great lovers of the Flemish and Dutch schools, as their predecessors had been of the Italian one.

This state of things lasted down to 1775. At this time, count d'Angiviller, the Director of the Palaces, conceived and examined the idea of gathering up, in the great gallery of the Louvre, all the most remarkable works of painting and sculpture that belonged to the Crown. Not only his project was not carried out; but, as the palace of the Luxembourg had been ascribed to other uses, the small collection that had been visible there for more than thirty five years, was taken again to Versailles. In all those goings and comings, the king's Cabinet had undergone every kind of transformation. Durameau's inventory, which only comprises, it is true, the choicest pictures among those that were placed in the apartments, does not reckon more than one hundred and sixty nine paintings.

The Revolution was not long to take up again M. d'Angiviller's great idea. The National Assembly, the Legislative Assembly, the Convention, successively took decisive steps towards the carrying out of it. A decree, moved by Barrère and issued on the 26th of May 1791, to affect the gallery of the Louvre to the establishment of a Museum, was confirmed, by another decree, on the 26th of August in the same year. Two decrees of 1792, the one made by the Legislative Assembly on the 14th of August, the other by the Convention on the 18th of October, organized the committee which had to gather up the works. The task was interrupted for a few days, it is true, owing to the claims of the city of Versailles, insisting to have the works of art definitively installed in the same palace in which they were then kept ; but the Convention had determined not to be checked. On the 8th of February 1793, after the work of the committee was done, Barrère brought forward the project of a comprehensive decree concerning the formation and maintenance of a National Museum. At last, on the 27th of July, on the motion of Sergent, the Convention resolved that this museum should open a few days after, on the 10th of August. The inauguration, that took place on the appointed day, was, however, merely an official business. It was only from the 18th of " Brumaire " (Nov. 8, 1793) that the French Museum was open to the public three days a decade. Conformably to the decree of the 27th of July, " a sum of money amounting to 100 000 livres per annum was ascribed, provisionally, to have, at private sales, those paintings and sculptures purchased, that the Republic is interested not to leave in foreign countries. " The sum of money was considerable for the time, and far larger than the allowances which the budgets have yearly granted since to the same purpose.

The catalogue of this early museum only contained 537 pictures, most of which came from the Parisian churches or national edifices, for it had not been possible, as yet, to take back from Versailles all the pictures which were there. It was not till the month of "Thermidor", year II, that Varon, a member of the "Conservatoire", or board of trustees of the Museum, obtained the delivery of these pictures; and, from that time, the Louvre has kept most of the master-pieces that are still its chief treasure. The history of the Museum of the Louvre, during the twenty following years, under the Directory, the Consulate, the Empire, records an almost uninterrupted succession of hurried works and transient alterations, required by the glorious, but cumbersome, supply of new things which the conquering French armies constantly sent in. Every truce and treaty of peace was followed by the arrival in Paris of a number of precious pictures, which were often injured, and therefore, had to be repaired before being added to the former collections. The different works then published on the Musée Napoléon, have kept for us the memory of the unequalled collection that could be admired there till 1815. It is well known that, after Paris being occupied by the allies, most of the works of art coming from abroad were reinstated in their original country; some others were exchanged for works which had a French origin. In order to fill up the blanks produced by such a removal, they took, in 1818, from the Luxembourg, which henceforth was devoted to living artists, the set of Rubens's paintings composing the Medici Gallery, the pictures of Le Sueur on the Life of St Bruno, the Ports of France by Joseph Vernet, and a few other works that had been carried there in 1803.

Under Louis XVIII's reign, from 1817 to 1824, the collection was augmented by 111 pictures, purchased at a cost of 668 265 francs, and, under Charles X, in six years, by 24 only, with an outlay of 62 790 francs. As king Louis-Philippe granted all his attention and power to the Museum of Versailles, for which 11 millions of francs at least were spent, the Museum of the Louvre, during the seventeen years of his reign, only cost the Civil List 74 132 francs, for 33 pictures. To the second Republic it was reserved to give the Museum of the Louvre all the expansion that the space at command admitted of. A sum of two millions of francs, voted by the National Assembly in March 1848, made it possible quickly to repair and fit up the Gallery of Apollo, the "Salon carré", the Hall with Seven Chimneys, the Great Gallery, the halls looking on the river, and the halls of the Colonnade : as early as 1851, the pictures were for the first time arranged chronologically, so far as possible, in these different places. Almost at the same time appeared, with short intervals, Frédéric Villot's learned catalogues, which are still models in their kind, and the basis of our book. The Louvre had then at its disposal a yearly budget of only 50 000 francs for purchases; but the National Assembly was eager to come to the rescue, whenever there was an occasion for it; so it was that it granted 100 000 francs when the sale of the king of the Low Countries took place, and 25 000 francs for the purchase of two pictures by Géricault, the Hunter and the Cuirassier. In 1852, the yearly allowance was brought to 100 000 francs, and at the time of the Marshal Soult sale, the President of the Republic granted, by a decree, 615 300 francs for the purchase of the Conception, by Murillo.

During the second Empire, the single acquisition of the Campana Museum, in 1862, brought into the National Museums 646 paintings of the early Italian schools, out of which about 200 were to be kept by the Louvre. Besides, from 1854 to 1864, the Civil List spent 761 817 francs to buy separately 28 ancient paintings, and, from 1864 to 1870, 33 other pictures were acquired, and 72 presented by various donors.

In 1869, the legacy of Dr Lacaze brought in an addition of 265 pictures, which had to be placed in a special hall.

The government of the third Republic did not prove less attentive than its predecessors to the interests of the Museum of Painting. It must be credited for having arranged two new rooms, that of the modern French school (formerly " Salle des États ") and that of the portraits of artists (" Salon Daru "). Without mentioning some exceptional acquisitions, such as those of the Magliana fresco, of the Apollo and Marsyas, of the pictures of the Timbal collection, made by the means of special Parliamentary credits, we reckon, at the present day, since 1871, 290 pictures acquired with the regular resources of the budget of the Museums. These resources are very small, indeed, if compared to those of some foreign Galleries, and hardly enable the Administration of the Museums to come forward in public auctions, when celebrated works of a great value are brought to the hammer; but, fortunately, private generosity gives assistance to the Administration's insufficient means; so, within a few years, the legacies of count Duchâtel, MM. Gatteaux, His de la Salle, Moreaux, Hauguet, Schubert and Millet, Lallemand, M^{me} Pommery and many other liberal testators, along with the gifts presented by living donors, have brought precious additions to certain series, which are not yet completed. From 1870 to 1893, the number of the pictures presented to the Louvre has amounted to 313. The names of all the donors are mentioned in our notices.

INTRODUCTION

Two entrances lead to the Museum of Painting, situated on the first story of the palace of the Louvre. The one is in the middle of the Denon pavilion, south of Carrousel square; the other opens under the vestibule of the Sully pavilion, between the square and the court-yard (" Cour d'honneur "); the latter is more convenient and more generally used by visitors.

To follow the order of our catalogue, one must, then, enter by the gate of the Sully pavilion, ascend the Henri II staircase, and visit first the Hall n° I (called salle Lacaze), then go successively through the Halls II (salle Henri II) and III (salle des Sept Cheminées), devoted to the French schools in the early part of the 19th century, the Gallery of Apollo, the Hall IV (called Salon Carré), the Hall V (salle Duchâtel), the Hall VII (salle des Sept mètres) in which the Italian Primitives are gathered, the Hall VI (Great Gallery), which is subdivided into several sections or " travées " (the sections A and B contain the Italian paintings of the 16th, 17th and 18th centuries, the section C the French school of the XVth and XVIth centuries, and the section D, E, F, the works of the German, Flemish and Dutch masters). Turning to the North in the middle of the section D, one enters the small halls of the French school IX, X (the Life of St Bruno by Le Sueur), XI (the paintings of the Lambert Hotel by Le Sueur), XII (the Seaports by Vernet) and the Hall XIII reserved to the English school; a door, in this hall, opens on the landing of the Mollien staircase, on which another door, on the east side, communicates with the Hall XIV (salle Mollien) in which the French masters of the 17th century are represented; then comes the Hall XV (salle Denon, or salle des Portraits), on the south of which opens the Hall VIII (salle des États), which contains the works of the French masters of the 19th century, and, on the east, the Hall XI (salle Daru) devoted to the French masters of the 18th century. Leaving this last hall, one finds one's self on the landing of the Daru staircase, where three frescoes of the Italian school have been placed.

As we wished to give the public a handy work of a moderate size, it was impossible to record the three thousand pictures that compose the Louvre collection. Leaving, then, aside such works as seemed to us of a less interest, either on account of their intrinsic worth, or because of their doubtful authenticity, we have endeavoured to present, on nearly two thousand pictures, a detailed notice containing exhaustive information about dates, origin, cost of purchase, etc.; and, for the most celebrated works, we have added extracts from special books, French and foreign, conveying the estimate of the best qualified critics.

To classify the pictures, we have adopted a method which seems to us well calculated to spare the reader a great loss of valuable time and a good deal of wearisome researches. Paying no attention to the numbering of the pictures, nor to the schools to which the painters belong, we simply give our notices in the very order in which the pictures present themselves to the eyes of the visitor, who follows the direction just given above.

In case of a partial re-arrangement, if some pictures were removed from their former place, the reader will have only to refer to the Table of contents, into which all the pictures in the Museum, without any exception, are entered according to the numbering order, and in which such as have been specially noticed here are singled out by the letter C being placed before the number: he will know at once the page where the description he is looking for is to be found in the volume.

This same table, where painters are classified by schools, in the alphabetical order, according to the last Official Catalogue, will also enable the reader to find, without any difficulty, the pictures in which he takes an interest, whatever their place and number may be.

HALL I

(Salle Lacaze)

SUNDRY SCHOOLS¹ (17th AND 18th CENTURIES)

This Hall, the area of which was within the apartments of Charles V, was anciently called the High Hall (Haute Salle). In 1593, the League held their States in it; later on, it was divided into several rooms; in the middle of last century, the collection of the models of the Navy occupied the part next to the stairs; at that time, the ceiling was lower than it is now-a-days, and formed the floor of an upper story, that has been destroyed. From 1820 to the end of the Restoration, the opening meeting of the Parliamentary Session was held in this hall, which had undergone alterations by order of Louis XVIII.

M. Louis Lacaze having bequeathed, by his will, dated november 24th 1869, his collection of pictures to the Museum of Paris, with the hope that a special hall might be granted to it, the Ministry of the Emperor's Household, to conform to the provision of this will, lodged this important collection in the hall n° 1, in 1869.

357. — Le Moyne. — French. — Hercules and Omphale.

In the middle, under a red drapery hanging on a tree, Hercules is sitting, facing the front; he holds a distaff and a spindle. His head turns to the left, in three quarters profile, to Omphale, who stands, encircling with her left arm the hero's neck, and holding under her right arm a long club; on the right, Cupid, wings unfolded, leans against Hercules's leg. Background: a landscape. Dated: 1724.

1,84 m. h.; 1,49 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Executed by the painter, on his return from a journey in Italy with his friends Berger and Crozille, in 1723. — Engr. by Laurent Cars. — La Reynière sale, 1350 francs. Sainte-Foix sale, 200 francs.

2573. — Sorgh, called Rokes (Attributed to). — Dutch. — A rustic Interior.

In a room, to which light comes through a dormer-window, a woman, in profile, is seated on the left, singing; a peasant, in full face, sitting behind a table, beats time and laughs. In the middle of the foreground, a dog lies under a bench; on the right, a candlestick, placed on a cask, a pot, and shoes; on the left, a cabbage on a wooden bench.

0,24 m. h.; 0,30 m. br. W.

993. — Watteau (Attributed to). — French. — A Pastoral.

At the foot of a knoll, a shepherdess, with a yellow dress and a red bodice, sits, turning to the left, to listen to a shepherd, seen from the back, wearing pink breeches and a violet vest, who plays on the flute; on the right, a sheep and a dog. Landscape in the background.

0,50 m. h.; 0,40 m. br. Sketch.

2133. — Rubens (School of). — *Diana, sleeping.

On the left, under a drapery from which hangs a quiver, Diana is asleep, in the middle of a group of nymphs; a satyr beholds them through the foliage; at the feet of the goddess, some dogs; on the right, near a knotty tree, some heads of game; in the background, a landscape, slightly sketched.

0,35 m. h.; 0,50 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,20 m.

691. — Pater. — French. — *Dressing.

0,46 m. h.; 0,37 m. br. — Fig. 0,15 m. — Engr. by Surugue.

49. — Boucher. — French. — Vulcanus's Forges.

In the centre, Vulcanus, in three quarters profile, on the left, sits upon a rock; his head turns to Venus, who comes, on a cloud, attended by Cupid and three nymphs; on the left, a cyclop standing, looks at the goddess and lifts up a shield. Here and there, other workmen. — Signed with the initials F. B., and dated 1747.

0,46 m. h.; 0,72 m. br. — Fig. 0,22 m. — This sketch, grey upon grey, was executed the same year as the picture representing the same subject (no 46, p. 5). Sold 400 livres at the sale after the death of the painter Chardin.

* 791. — Rigaud. — French. — Cardinal de Polignac (1661-1741).

Sitting in an arm-chair, the body in three quarters profile on the left, the head turned to the right, he holds on his knees the book Anti-Lucretius, turning the leaves over with his left hand. Dressed in a red camail and a red cassock, with an embroidered alb; round the neck, the Order of the Holy Ghost; on his white hair, a red cap. — Signed on the right: LE CARDINAL DE POLIGNAC, H. RIGAUD, PINX.

1,40 m. h.; 1,40 m. br. C. — Knee-piece; life-size. — Engr. by Chéreau in 1729. Painted in 1715. It seems to be the repetition of another portrait executed in the same year, and engraved also by Chéreau in 1729, in which the ribbon of the Holy Ghost does not appear.

* 201. — David. — French. — Portrait of Bailly, President of the National Assembly, Mayor of Paris (1736-1793).

The head only, in full face, is sketched.

0,49 m. h.; 0,33 m. br. C. — Life-size. — A sketch for the Oath of the "Jeu de Paume"; was painted in 1790.

* 380. — Greuze. — French. — Head of a Lad.

2149. — Snyders. — Fleming. — The female Game-Monger.

2,19 m. h.; 1,87 m. br. — Life-size.

* 109. — Chardin. — French. — Still Life.

Upon a stone table, a cake surmounted with a branch of orange-tree, a china sugar-basin, peaches, biscuits, cherries and a small decanter with liquor in it. — Signed on the left, upon a stone: CHARDIN, 1763.

0,47 m. h.; 1,56 m. br. C.

* 378. — Greuze. — French. — Portrait of Gensonné, a Girondine Deputy to the Legislative Assembly and to the Convention (1756-1793).

In three quarters profile, to the right. Long and powdered hair.

Typogravure Georges Petit.

LANCRET.

470. — The actors of the Italian Comedy.

Buttoned-up black coat; loosely tied white cravat, and white waistcoat.

0,55 m. h.; 0,46 m. br. W. — Breast-piece; life-size.

* 46. — Boucher. — Venus with Vulcanus.

983. — Gilles.

* 2385. — Hals (FRANS). — Dutch. — Portrait of a woman.

An elderly woman stands, in three quarters profile, to the left, with a black dress and white collar, ruffles and coif; her hands are crossed upon her girdle; the left one holds a pair of gloves.

1 m. h.; 0,80 m. br. C. — Knee-piece; life-size.

* 792. — Rigaud. — French. — Jean-François-Paul de Bonne de Créqui, duke of Lesdiguières, when a child (1679-1705).

In three quarters profile, to the left; his head, covered with fair hair, is facing the front; he leans his elbow on a console, and wears, under his cuirass, a gold-embroidered yellow tunic. On his left arm, a blue cloak, and in his right hand, a marshal's staff.

0,81 m. h.; 0,65 m. br. C. — Half-fig., life-size. — Engr. by Drevet, in 1691. — Purchased for 400 francs at the Jacquotet sale, in 1842. — The young duke, who was eight years old when he sat for this portrait (1687), died of a decline, quite young, in Modena.

* 765. — Raoux. — French. — A Girl, reading a letter.

A girl, wearing a fancy dress: blue bodice, cut low; yellow sleeves and skirt; round the neck, a string of pearls, her head in three quarters profile, to the right, is reading a letter that she holds with both hands. On the right, a table covered with a green carpet, upon which is an open sweetmeat-box, embellished with a miniature. In the background, red hangings, drawn up.

1 m. h.; 0,81 m. br. C. — Half-fig., life-size. — Engr. by de Poilly and S. Cousins. — Belonged to the Lake collection.

* 983. — Watteau. — French. — Gilles.

On a knoll, the character of the Italian Comedy makes his appearance, standing, in face, all clad in white, his arms dangling by his side. In the left background, in the shade, the doctor, mounted on an ass, is laughing; on the right, Mezzetin, wearing a vest and a red flat cap, Colombine dressed in a greenish bodice with a red kerchief, and a third fellow with a queer hat. A very brilliantly lighted landscape in the background; on the right, the bust of a satyr among trees.

A middle-aged, white-haired lady, in three quarters profile, to the left, the head in face, is seated, her two hands on her knees, and holding a book; over her blue dress, adorned with bows of ribbon, a black silk mantlet is thrown; she wears a white lace cap.

0,80 m. h.; 0,65 m. br. — Half-fig.; life-size. — This portrait was once attributed to Chardin and was thought to be the likeness of M^{me} Lenoir, the lieutenant of police's wife. M. Lacaze did not think he ought to keep this designation. The fact is that the Portrait of M^{me} L... holding a pamphlet, by Chardin, Salon of 1742, engraved by Surugue Junior in 1743, under the title: l'Instant de la Méditation, has nothing in common with this picture.

*294. — Fragonard. — French. — A Bacchante, sleeping.

* 1945. — Philippe de Champagne. — Fleming. — The Provost of the Guilds and the Aldermen of the City of Paris.

In the middle, a crucifix is placed on a pedestal, adorned with a coloured image of St Genevieve and the arms of Paris. On both sides the Provost of the Guilds, the Attorney for the Crown, four aldermen and the Town's tax-gatherer are kneeling. All are clad in long black robes with a red shoulder-strap on the left. The Provost wears a great cloak thrown over his left shoulder.

2 m. h., 2,71 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Painted towards 1650; was paid 1550 francs at the Sebastiani sale (1851). "The heads are elaborately done, with a care to mark faithfully the individuality of the character. The glow of the eyes and the seriousness of the attitude give a high value to this set of figures." (MANTZ.)

* 548. — Le Nain (THE BROTHERS). — French. — A Country meal.

In a room with bare walls, seven figures are seated around a table, near a chimney. In the centre, the master, facing the front, in the middle distance, has just divided the bread; he raises his glass, full of wine, and looks at an old man sitting on the right, behind whom a little boy stands; on the left, by the chimney, upon a bench, a man sits, drinking; behind him, the mistress of the house, standing, with a red bodice and a dark skirt, and a shock-pated little fellow with a red cap, tuning a violon. — Signed, on the bench: LE NAIN, fecit An. 1642.

0,97 m. h.; 1,22 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,85 m. — Bürger proposes to call this picture: Hospitality. He adds: "The earnestness and sobriety of gestures, the sincerity of execution, the broad touches, within a strictly limited scale of colours, going from the grey to the brown, save a few lights retouched with red, all things in this picture make a strange and anomalous contrast to the pompous and theatrical art of the 17th century."

1995. — Fyt (JAN). — Fleming. — Game, and hunting implements.

In the middle, on a stone, near a basket containing snipes, a hare is hanging by a paw, and two partridges are lying; on the left, a gun against a wall, from the top of which a cat is about to jump.

HALL II

(Salle Henri II)

FRENCH SCHOOL (19th CENTURY)

This hall, which is in suite of the preceding one, was built on the spot of Charles V's upper chapel, in the old Louvre. It was comprised in the apartments of the Valois and of the first Bourbons; later on, the Academy of Sciences, founded in 1666, held its meetings in it. No trace is left of the paintings of Primaticcio, which decorated it, nor of the sculptures of the ceiling executed under Henri II. The present paintings are the work of Blondel. Between the principal subject and the two side pieces, one reads: DI HENRI II R., and above the central picture, the motto: Donec totum impleat orbem.

442. — De La Berge. — Landscape.

On the left, under a clump of oak-trees, near a cradle, a mother, seated, gives her breast to an infant, and a little girl, upright, is eating; in the middle, near a cart, a grey horse and a man on his knees. On the right, in a gorge, the village of Virieu-le-Grand, near Belley. The sky is lighted by the setting sun.

0,59 m. h.; 0,92 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,08 m. — Presented by the painter's family (1853).

* 120. — Chasseriau (THÉODORE). — The Tepidarium.

In a large vaulted hall, lighted by a round opening in the further end, some women of Pompeia take a rest after bathing. In the middle, before a brass basin where perfumes are burning, one of them stands, half naked, and stretches herself; by her right, one of her companions, seated, is seen from the back; on both sides, other young women are seated, some musing, other re-adjusting their tunics or warming their hands; here and there, slaves, attending to their duties. — Signed: THEODORE CHASSERIAU, 1853.

HALL III

(Salle des Sept-Cheminées)

FRENCH SCHOOL (19th CENTURY)

(FIRST EMPIRE AND RESTAURATION)

This hall, a part of the constructions of Pierre Lescot, formed, under the Valois, the king's bed-room and drawing-room; these apartments, lower than the present hall, were wainscoted. The second story above the royal rooms, which has been destroyed long since, was inhabited by cardinal Mazarin.

The present accommodations were made in 1850, after the plans of the architect Duban; the sculptures of the ceiling are the work of Duret.

* 354. — Géricault. — A Stable.

Two horses, the one a dark-bay, the other a white one, are in front of a stable, turned to a post-boy on the left, who holds in his right hand a straw bundle and, in the other, a pail where the white horse is drinking. In the middle distance, on the left, a farmer's man, with one arm akimbo. In the background, the wall of the stable.

0,37 m. h.; 0,45 m. br. C. — Painted about 1823. Lithographed by Volmar with the title: Deux chevaux de poste à la porte d'une écurie. Coll. of M. Coutant. Presented in 1883 by MM. Hauguët, Schubert and Millet.

* 344. — Géricault. — The Plaster-kiln.

Under a grey sky, in a cloud of dust, on the right, an old hovel, at the door of which two horses, with harness on, are eating oats, while, inside, a cart is being loaded with sacks. In the left foreground three horses have been taken out of a cart, and are eating in their nose-bags. — Signed on the left.

0,50 m. h.; 0,60 m. br. C. — After a study made in Montmartre. — Paid 1350 francs at the Mosselman sale, in 1849.

Mounted on a dapple-grey horse, which prances and rushes at a gallop to the right, he turns round to the right, sword in hand, his pelisse waving about, and endeavours to inspirit the squadron, which is seen in the middle distance. In the right background, a fight.

1,92 m. h.; 1,94 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Gold Medal in the Salon of 1812, under the title: Portrait équestre. It is really the portrait of one of the painter's friends, M. Dieudonné, lieutenant of the "Guides". — Purchased by the duke of Orleans, it was acquired by the Louvre, together with n° 341, at the sale of Louis-Philippe, for 23 400 francs.

A study for n° 339. The horse dashes to the left, and the horseman is in profile.

 188. — David (LOUIS). — The Sabines.

In the middle, Romulus, in profile, with a shield bearing the image of the she-wolf, is about to hurl a javelin at Tattius, who stoops, on the left, to shun it. Between the two combatants, Hersilia, the wife of Romulus, stands up, stretching out her arms, and several mothers are kneeling by their children. In the middle distance, one of them gets upon a pedestal, raising a babe in her arms. The background of the picture is taken up by the two armies, in which the Roman ensigns stand out on the right. On the left, the walls of the Capitol. — Signed upon a stone, at the feet of Tattius: DAVID. F. anno 1799.

3,86 m. h.; 5,20 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Massard. — This picture, inspired to David, during his confinement in the Luxembourg, by a medallion of Faustina the elder, was exhibited by the painter from the month of "Nivôse", year VIII, to the month of "Prairial", year XIII, in the Louvre (in the hall now devoted to the crayons, or "salle des pastels"). This exhibition brought 63 627 francs to the painter in five years. — Salon of 1808; got the first "mention" in the decennial competitive exhibition of 1810; purchased, in 1819, together with the following picture, of M. de La Haye, for 100 000 francs.

 187. — David (LOUIS). — Leonidas at Thermopylæ.

In the middle of a narrow gorge, Leonidas is seated near the altar of Hercules; on his right, his brother-in-law, Agis, puts his helmet on, and two young Spartans take down their weapons, hanging on a tree; in the middle distance, warriors are coming, led by the soothsayer Megisias. On the left, near a soldier who ties up his buskin, a blindman, Eurytus, brandishes a lance and four young men hold up crowns towards a rock on which a warrior writes with the pommel of his sword the famous inscription: "Passant, va dire aux Lacédémoniens que nous sommes morts ici en obéissant à leur ordre." In the right background, a path into which some mules enter with their drivers; at the mouth of the gorge, a temple, before which a sentry stands, announcing the coming of the enemy.

3,92 m. h.; 5,33 m. br. C. — Life-size. — This is the last picture that the painter executed in France. — Purchased, together with the preceding one, of M. de La Haye, for 100 000 francs.

196. — David. — Portrait of M. Pécoul, the painter's father-in-law.

He is sitting in an arm-chair, in three quarters profile, to the right, the head facing the front, dressed in a chetsnut-brown coat, with gold buttons, and an embroidered silk waistcoat; his hair is powdered. His left hand, leaning on a table, holds a snuff-box; his right one lies on the arm of the chair.

0,95 m. h.; 0,73 m. br. C. — Half-fig., life-size. — Painted in 1783. — Purchased in 1844 from M. Dequevauvilliers for 600 francs, together with no 197.

- * 747. — Prud'hon. — Justice and divine Vengeance prosecuting Crime.

In a wild country bristling with rocks and lighted by the moon, the murderer, clad in a tunic and a cloak, a bloody dagger in his hand, turns his head round, while striding off to the left. The victim lies in the foreground, his head in the penumbra, both arms stretched out crosswise. In the air, both coming from the right, wings unfolded, Vengeance, who carries in her left hand a kindled torch and thrusts her other hand forward to take a hold of the culprit, and Justice, with a stern and calm face, who keeps in her hands the scales of Law and the retributory sword are soaring.

2,43 m. h.; 2,92 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Roger and Hocquart. — Salons of 1808 and 1814. — " Sheltered under the veils of night, in a remote and wild spot, greedy Crime slaughters his victim, seizes upon his gold, and ascertains whether a remnant of life might not still supply a means to reveal his heinous deed. He does not see that Vengeance, the dreadful agent of Justice, prosecutes him, is going to overtake and deliver him up to her inflexible companion. Such is the picture that I undertake to execute within ten months. " (Letter from Prud'hon to the Prefect of the Seine, 5th of Thermidor, year XIII.) — Bespoken for the Palace of Justice, this canvas was exchanged by the Town, in 1826, for four pictures representing Christ on the cross. Of this work, a reduction and several studies or sketches are known to exist. — " We know nothing more beautiful and grander in style, in any school, than these two goddesses who slide, from so proud and tranquil an impulse, through the blue air of night; nothing more tragically ominous than the silhouette of the murderer, and more touching than the victim. his head supported by his right arm, tries to feel with his left hand the beating of his dying son's heart, who lies on his knees; on the left, a dead mariner, the upper part of the body of whom dips in the water, is wrapped in a white cloth. In the middle distance, against the mast, at the foot of which a man, bereft of his reason, holds his head in his hands, officer Corréard points out to surgeon Savigny the brigg Argus, that looms afar against a heavily cloudy sky. At the further end of the raft, a few sailors and a mulatto in full light have hoisted themselves upon casks and frantically shake about some strips of cloth; at the same time, in the middle, as to connect together the different parts of the picture, midshipman Coudin and two companions endeavour to rise and to see the rescuing sail.

4,91 m. h.; 7,16 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Reynolds and Leroy (Chalc. of the Louvre). — The scene represented by the painter took place after the shipwreck of the frigate the Méduse, that being bound to Senegal, and having on board four hundred men, was wrecked on the second of July 1816. Fifty-nine people could not find a place in the boats and took refuge on a raft, that, for twelve days, floated about, in the middle of the Ocean. Hunger, thirst, despair armed the unfortunate against one another, and they were only fifteen left when the Argus picked up the wreck. This work was executed from November 1818 to August 1819; the painter has represented himself in the sailor who is lying dead on the left. The critics were severe, and the picture got only the eleventh place in the competition for the medal of honour. In spite of the solicitations of count de Forbin, the Director of the royal Museums, the administration did not consent to buy the canvas. It was only after Géricault's death, when his gallery was sold, that the State purchased it for 6005 francs.

* 752. — Prud'hon. — Portrait of M^{me} Jarre.

* 392 bis. — Gros (B^{on}). — Portrait of lieutenant-general count Fournier-Sarlovèze.

He stands, in three quarters profile, to the right, in his uniform of colonel of hussars, with the stripes of field-marshal on his sleeves. The left wrist leans on the hip; the right hand clasps the hilt of a naked broadsword; the letter, that is on the ground, is the summons sent by the general of the enemy to surrender the town of Tuyo, a summons which the general has rejected. In the distance, the dismissed messenger withdraws between two grenadiers.

When leaving the room n° III, one crosses, on the right hand, the ancient jewels room and reaches the vestibule, or lobby, of the “galerie d'Apollon”, in which the portraits of the members of the Academy of Painting and Sculpture, painted by themselves, were placed formerly; the paintings on the ceiling are by Blondel and Couder. Above a grate in embossed iron, that comes from the castle of Maisons, an inscription reads as follows: Le Musée du Louvre, fondé par décret du 16 septembre 1792 de l'Assemblée législative, a été ouvert le 10 août 1703, en exécution d'un décret rendu par la Convention nationale.

GALERIE D'APOLLON

The Galerie d'Apollon (Apollo's Gallery), south of the lobby, was built under Henri IV. At first it was called the Kings' Gallery, on account of the portraits of kings and queens with which it was decorated. Destroyed by a fire on the 6th of February 1661, it was decorated afresh under the direction of Le Brun. About the beginning of the 18th century, it was divided into apartments, and Carle van Loo had his studio there; then, from the 28th of Thermidor to the reign of Charles X, this gallery was designed to the exhibition of the drawings of the “Musée du Louvre”; the National Assembly, in 1848, voted the repair and completion of the gallery, a work which was entrusted to Duban. When entirely finished, the gallery was solemnly opened to the public on the 5th of June 1851. It measures 61,39^m by 9,46^m. Its decorative paintings are placed in the following order: Curve above the grate: the Triumph of Earth, by Guichard, after a drawing by Le Brun; — Central part: Aurora, by Muller, after Le Brun; the Morning Star, by Renou; Apollo killing the serpent Pytho, by Eugène Delacroix; Evening, by Le Brun; Night, by Le Brun; — left side: Autumn, by Taraval; Spring, by Callet; — right side: Summer, by Durameau; Winter, by Lagrenée the Younger; — Curve above the window: the Triumph of the Waters or Neptune and Amphitrite, by Le Brun.

SALON CARRÉ¹(Hall N^o IV, called Square Room or "Salon Carré")

SUNDRY SCHOOLS

This room, south-west of the "galerie d'Apollon", is in the part of the Louvre that dates from Henri IV. It served, during a great part of last century, as a place of exhibition for the works of the Members of the Academy, and, when the Academy was suppressed, of the living artists, who held their "Salons" there down to 1848.

The religious wedding of Napoleon I and Maria Louisa was celebrated in it on the 2nd of April 1810. Having been under repair from 1848 to 1850, after the plans and drawings of the architect Duban, it was solemnly opened on the 5th of June 1851.

The sculptures of the ceiling by Simart represent Engraving, Sculpture, Architecture and Painting; in each of the four corners, a Figure ends in a terminal between two Genii; escutcheons, against the walls, bear in letters of gold the names of the greatest masters in the art of painting.

Her face, in three quarters profile, is slightly turned on the left and looks right opposite. Her light hair, dressed up in bands on the forehead, plaited and rolled up in a net of pearls on the nape of the neck, is made fast on the top of the head with a piece of goldsmith's workmanship. Her neck is bound in a godrooned ruff, under which passes a necklace of precious stones and pearls. She wears a flounced, pearl-laced stomacher with gold studs, a robe in gold brocade diapered with silver and trimmed with goldsmith's work, rubies and emeralds; the sleeves have white slashes with rows of pearls between. Her right hand, adorned with a ring on the forefinger, is lying on her left one, the small finger of which wears a ring also.

Clad in a gold cuirass and a blue scarf streaming in the air, his wings unfolded, the Archangel lays his right foot on the left shoulder of the conquered fiend and prepares to pierce him through with a spear, that he holds with both hands. Satan struggles on, and turns his head to the right, gnashing his teeth. The landscape is bristling with rocks, out of which flames are springing up. On the fringe of Michael's tunic, this inscription in letters of gold: RAPHAEL URBINAS. PINGEBAT M. D. XVIII.

2,68 m. h.; 1,60 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Beatrizetto, Testelin, Lombardas, Rousselet (Chalc. of the Louvre), Larmessin, Chereau, Tardieu, Godefroy, Châtillon, Filhol, Landon, etc. — This painting on wood, executed in 1518, was offered, in the same year, to François I by Pope Leon X. At the same time, the painter gave the cartoon of it to the duke of Ferrara. Lodged at Fontenaibleau, then at Versailles, it has undergone many a repair. It was restored by Primaticcio as early as 1530, and transported on canvas in 1752 by Picault, who got 11 500 livres for the work. "Raphael made numerous paintings for France, among which one for the king, entitled: The Archangel Michael fighting against the Devil. This was looked upon as a wonder. In this work, he painted burnt rocks in the midst of a ground cut with rents through which flames of sulphur and fire sprang out. In Lucifer, whose every limb was baked and burnt, by means of different tints given to the flesh, all the signs of anger were to be seen.... One remarks the contrary effect in Michael, who, though represented with a celestial appearance, clad in iron and gold armour, displays signs of courage, force and fright, after he has touched Lucifer and thrown him down upon his back with a javelin. In short, this work was so well done that it deserved to be very handsomely rewarded by the king." (VASARI.)

*2195. — Weyden (ROGIER VAN DER). — Fleming. — The Virgin and the Child.

The Virgin sits on a bench, in full face, dressed in a blue robe and a red cloak; her hair, divided on the middle of the forehead, hangs in locks on her shoulders. With her right hand, she gives her breast to the Child, who is lying on her left arm and turns to her, stretching out his arms. In the background, a gilt niche, on the top of which is an open book on a green cushion.

0,20 m. h.; 0,13 m. br. W. — Purchased for 4400 francs, in 1868, at the Germesse sale.

*1383. — Memmi (SIMONE DI MARTINI, called SIMONE). — Siennese. — Jesus Christ walking up Mount Calvary.

Christ, dressed in a red robe, loaded with his cross, walks up, drawn away by the tormentors, towards the right, and turns back his head to a soldier behind, who keeps off the Virgin and the Holy Women. In the background, the Magdalen, in a red dress, stands up moaning, with scattered hair. She is followed by a crowd, crossing a bridge. On the horizon, the walls of a city.

Coll. of Louis-Philippe. Purchased, in 1834, for 200 francs, of M. L. Saint-Denis. Imitation of a painting by Duccio, which was formerly in a church of Sienna.

*1592. — Titian (TIZIANO VECELLIO, called). — Venetian. — The Man with the Glove.

He stands, facing the front, the head in three quarters profile, to the right, in black clothes, with a plaited white shirt-front and a collar of coral. The right hand lies on the belt; the left hand, wearing a glove and holding the other, rests on a stone that bears the signature: TICIANUS.

*1417. — Correggio (ANTONIO ALLEGRI, called IL). — Parmesan. — The mystical Wedding of St. Catharine of Alexandria.

1,05 m. h.; 1,02 m. br. W. — Half-fig., life-size. — Engr. by Ét. Picart (Chalc. of the Louvre), Giovanni Folo (Musée Royal), Henriquel Dupont. — In Vasari's time, this picture, which Correggio painted in 1519, on the occasion of the marriage of his sister, Catharine, was at Modena, in the collection of Dr Grillenzoni, a great friend to the painter; in 1650, after having passed through several hands, it was in the gallery of cardinal Barberini, who presented it to Mazarin, after whose death it went to Louis XIV's cabinet. It was valued 15 000 livres then. "Girolamo da Carpi went to Modena to see the other works of Correggio, and, on his arrival, was struck with admiration at the sight of them. One, among others, astounded him. It was a large picture, a divine thing, in which one sees Our Lady with the Child who weds St Catharine, a St Sebastian, and other figures, with so fine countenances that they seem to have been painted in Paradise; it is not possible to see more beautiful hair and hands, nor a more charming and naturel colouring.... Girolamo copied it with all the care he could." (VASARI.)

Facing the front; the body to the right; he wears a dark overcoat and a white head-band. Grey beard and hair. In his hands, a pallet and a maul-stick. On the right, a canvas on an easel. Signature: REM. F. 1660.

1,11 m. h.; 0,85 m. br. C. — Half-fig., life-size. — Coll. of Louis XIV. "Having been stretched upon new cloth, a band of canvas 0,05 or 0,06 m. broad was added all along on the right side; so it may be supposed that the name of the artist was read in full before that." (CAT. VILLOT.)

*1713. — Murillo. — Spaniard. — The Holy Family.

In the middle, the Virgin sits with a blue robe and cloak, holding the Child upright on her knees; they turn on the right, to St Elizabeth kneeling, and St John, who presents a cross to the Child; in the foreground, a lamb lying down. In the sky, the Father and the Holy Ghost, surrounded by angels. Signed: BARTHOLOM DE MURILLO F. HISPAN.

The Wedding Feast of Cana.

In a roofless place surrounded with marble colonades, behind a semi-circular table, Christ, seated in the centre, with a red robe and a blue cloak, having the Virgin on his left, performs the miracle of the wine. In the left foreground, a negro holds out a cup to the marquis of Avalos, near whom is Eleanor of Austria, the queen of France; near her, François I and Mary of England, with a yellow robe; farther, by the side of Soliman I, the marchioness of Pescaire, biting a tooth-pick, and, in the corner, Charles V, in profile, wearing the Golden Fleece. In the middle, before the table, a band of musicians, among whom Veronese playing on a viol, Titian holding a violoncello, and Bassano blowing into a flute. The guest on the right, who proposes a toast, is Benedetto Caliari, the painter's brother. In the gallery that runs along in the background, servants are bringing dishes; on the horizon, a palace and a campanile rise against the azure-coloured sky.

6,66 m. h.; 9,90 m. br. — Over life-size. — Engr. by Mitelli, Jackson and Prévost. — Executed in 1563 for the dining-hall of the convent of San Giorgio il Maggiore, in Venice, and paid 324 ducats (970 francs). Brought to Paris in 1797, it was kept in the Louvre after the events of 1815. The Austrian commissioners, finding it difficult to remove such a picture, took in exchange the Descent of the Holy Ghost, by Le Brun, which is now in the Academy of the Fine Arts, in Venice.

Bare-headed, he stands in his studio, in three quarters profile to the right, wrapped up in an olive-coloured cloak, the face almost in front; his brown hair falls over the shoulders; the moustaches and a small tuft under the lower lip are of the same hue. His right hand, whose small finger wears a ring, holds a portfolio of drawings; on the left, behind a red balustrade, several framed pictures: in one of these, a woman, to whom a person that cannot be seen stretches out both arms; on another canvas, an inscription reads as follows:

EFFIGIES NICOLAI POVSSINI ANDEL
 YENSIS PICTORIS. ANNO ÆTATIS 56
 ROMÆ ANNO JUBILEI

0,95 m. h.; 0,75 m. br. — Breast-piece, life-size. — Engr. by Pesne, Clonet, Cathelin and Lignon. — There is a repetition of this portrait, painted by the artist for his friend M. de Chantelou, as is shown by the following letter, bearing the date of May 29, 1650, and addressed to this connoisseur: "I have finished the portrait which you desire of me. I might have sent it to you by this mail; but the impertunacy of a friend of mine, M. Pointel, who wants to get a copy of it, will cause some delay; I have chosen for you the better one, and the better likeness; you will see the difference. I contend that this picture must be a proof of the deep affection I feel for you, inasmuch as I would not do, for any living being, what I have done for you on this occasion. I shall not tell you the pain I have taken in executing this portrait, lest you should think I want to overvalue it; I shall be fully rewarded for what it costs me, if I hear that it satisfies you." — This picture was acquired in 1797 from a merchant named Lorouge, in exchange for a painting by Van der Werff. It was valued then 3600 livres.

- *1136. — Giorgione (GIORGIO BARBARELLI, called). — Venetian.
A rustic Concert.

In the middle of a landscape, two young men sit on the grass; the one, wearing a green tunic with red sleeves and a red cap, in profile, to the right, plays on a lute; his companion stoops to listen; before them, a young woman, naked, seen from the back, holds a flute; on the left, another woman, whose left hip and legs only are covered with a drapery, is leaning on the basin of a fountain, whence she draws water. In the right background, a shepherd driving his flock. On the horizon, houses bordering a waterfall.

1,40 m. h.; 1,38 m. br. C. — Full-length fig., half-life size — Engr. by Hœtzel, Salmon (Chalc. of the Louvre). — Was in the collection of the dukes of Mantua. Purchased by Charles I, king of England; sold to Louis XIV by Jabach, a banker.

- *288. — Foucquet (JEAN). — French. — Portrait of Guillaume Juvénal des Ursins, baron of Trainel, chancellor of France under Charles VII and Louis XI (1400-1472).

He is standing in an oratory, in three quarters profile, to the right; bare-headed, dressed in a red robe trimmed with fur; a purse is hanging from his belt; he clasps his hands before an altar upon which an open book lies on a cushion. In the background, green panels are fitted in gilt wooden frames, shaped as pilasters, the capitals of which bear the coat of arms of the Ursin family, supported by two muzzled bears rampant.

0,92 m. h.; 0,74 m. br. W. — Half-fig., life-size. — Engr. in Montfaucon. — Was in the Gaignières coll. Purchased in 1835 for 900 francs, at the expense of the civil list, of count du Hamel; it was entered at that time into the inventory as a work of Wolgemuth.

- *2077. — Rubens. — Fleming. — The Adoration of the Magi.

0,35 m. h., 0,28 m. br. W. — Under life-size. — Engr. by Gaillard and Laguillerme. — Belonged to the Martinengos of Venice; bought 103000 francs in 1863 at the Pourtalès sale.

* 1598. — Lionardo da Vinci. — Florentine. — The Virgin, the Child and St-Anne.

In the middle of a landscape, St Anne sits, facing the front; her head is covered with a transparent veil, under which her loose hair floats; her left hand rests on her hip. The Virgin, in profile, with a low pink dress, is seated on her mother's knees; she stoops on the right to support with both arms the Child who, standing before her, holds the ears of a lamb upon which he tries to mount, and, laughing, turns round to his mother. In the distance, bluish mountains around an azure lake.

1,70 m. h.; 1,29 m. br. W. — Life-size. — Engr. by Laugier, Jean Cantin and Landon. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — Was painted by Lionardo probably in Lombardy, between 1517 and 1512. The cardinal de Richelieu purchased it in 1629; after having graced the gallery of the Palais-Cardinal, it came into the collection of the king.

In profile, to the left, at a table, writing. He wears a black robe and a black cap, the flaps of which are pulled down over his ears. A flowered greenish tapestry and a bit of wainscoting in the background.

0 42 m. h.; 0 32 m. br. W. — Brast-piece, half-life size. — Engr. by Dequevauvilliers and Bracquemond. There are several repetitions of this picture: one is in Longford Castle, in England; another, in Basle. The picture in the Louvre, executed for Thomas More, was given, in exchange of the John the Baptist of Lionardo da Vinci, to Louis XIII, by the king of England, Charles I. There is in the Louvre a silver-pencil drawing, enhanced with red and black chalk, which represents two hands laid flat and another hand, lying flat too, which are studies for this portrait. — « It was impossible to mark with a more precise outline, the fineness of that profile at the same time severe and mocking, and those lips which a habit of protracted caution keeps closed. » (PAUL MANTZ).

* 1143. — Guercino (GIOVANNI FRANCESCO, called IL). — Bolognese. — The Patron Saints of the city of Modena.

The Virgin, seated upon clouds, with two angels on her right, holds the Child, who makes the sign of blessing; below, on the left, an angel hands to St Geminian, bishop of Modena, the plan in relief of the town, while, in the middle distance, another angel holds his crosier. On the right, John the Baptist, his torso naked, is at prayers on his knees; St George stands in a cuirass, leaning on his sword, and, by his side, St Peter Martyr, dressed as a Dominican friar.

3,32 m. h.; 2,20 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Ordered by the duke of Modena, in 1651, for the church of San Pietro, in Modena. — Musée Napoléon.

1422 bis. — Vittore Pisano, called Pisanello. — Lombard. — Portrait of a Princess of the House of Este.

In profile, to the left; the hair dressed up and held by white small bands, uncovering a strongly projecting forehead; the eyes are half-closed, the mouth smiling. White dress with red sleeves; upon the shoulder-strap, on the left, is embroidered an emblem, a crystal vase richly set in goldsmith's workmanship. As a background, a flowered curtain, upon which butterflies alight.

0.43 m. h.; 0.30 m. br. W. — Breast-piece, life-size. — Purchased in 1893. Bemberg coll. It is supposed that this is the portrait of the second wife of Lionel d'Este, and that it must have been the fellow of the portrait of the marquis of Ferrare, that is kept in the Museum of Bergamo.

* 2024. — Memling (HANS). — Fleming. — John the Baptist.

In three quarters profile, to the right. He stands in a meadow, clad in a long brown robe. As a background, a landscape in which different scenes of the saint's life are represented.

After having been in the coll. of Lucien Bonaparte, where it was catalogued under the name of Van Eyck, and in that of the king of Holland, this picture was purchased in 1851 of baron Fagel for 11 728 francs, together with the following number.

* 2025. — Memling (HANS). — Fleming. — St Mary Magdalen.

In a meadow, standing, in three quarters profile, to the left. Dressed in a red and gold-coloured robe, over which a violet cloak is thrown. Her blonde hair covers her shoulders. In her right hand, a vase of perfume. Landscape in the background, with various scenes of the history of the Passion.

0.48 m. h.; 0.12 m. br. — Fig., 0.32 m. — This picture and the foregoing one are both in the same frame. They bear on the panel the seal of the king of the Low Countries. * These two panels are of the same size as two others, representing St Stephen and St Christopher, which were also in the palace of the king of Holland. From the thinness of the wood on which these subjects are painted, it may be supposed that formerly the four pictures formed the wings of a triptych, and that they were sawed in the middle. (CROWE and CAVALCASELLE.)

He is standing, in three quarters profile, to the right. Over a robe in blue watered silk, he wears a white muslin surplice and an ermine camail. He holds in his right hand a doctor's cap; his left one rests upon a book: behind, a red drapery; by his sides, scattered books; in the background, a curtain drawn up between two columns.

2.40 m. h.; 1.65 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Drevet junior. — Commenced in 1699 and finished in 1705; it first belonged to abbé Bossuet, the nephew of the bishop of Meaux. The Louvre purchased it for 5000 francs, in 1821, at the Cranford sale.

* 2015. — Jordaens. — Fleming. — The Concert after the Meal.

book that she holds with both hands; by her side, a little child, standing, plays on a flute. On the right, a blonde young woman, in three quarters profile, to the left, richly dressed in red velvet, bears in her arms a half-naked child and holds a glass in her right hand. In the middle distance, facing the front, in the centre of the picture, an old man, with a long beard, and a crimson garment and cap, a napkin round his neck, beats time by striking a silver dish with a lid. In the background, a man, standing, accompanies with a bagpipe a woman who sings, with a child in her arms. A cage hangs from the ceiling.

1,54 m. h.; 2,08 m. br. C. — Half-fig., life-size. — Engr. by Landon. — Purchased by the Crown, in 1791, at the Le Brun sale, when it was called in the Catalogue: « A family Counsel ».

* 1986. — Van Eyck (JEAN). — Fleming. — The Virgin with the Donor.

Under a portico, paved with coloured marble square flags, which is ended by three arcades, the Virgin sits, on the left, wrapped up in a broad red cloak trimmed with gold ribbon and lace-work, on which verses of Scripture are embroidered. Her head, whose light hair is kept up on her forehead by a black ribbon and the locks of which fall over her shoulders, is turned to the left in three quarters profile. She bends to the Child, who sits, naked, on her knees, and holds in his right hand a crystal sphere with a cross on the top, while he blesses the donor with his left hand. Behind the Virgin, a small angel, with a blue robe and many-coloured wings, is flying, who bears above her head, with both hands, a crown set with precious stones. On the left, the donor, in a brown and gold brocade robe, is kneeling, his hands clasped, on a prayer-stool, on which a cushion and an open prayer-book are laid. He is seen in profile, his head turned to the right, in an attitude of meditation. In the background, a garden ending with a terrace and a parapet-wall, upon which some people are leaning, who look at a bridge thrown over a river, and at a fortified town, far away.

0,66 m. h.; 0,62 m. br.; W. — Fig., 0,60 m. — This picture was removed from the collegiate church of Autun to the Louvre by order of Napoleon I. It is supposed that it was executed for the donor, whom we believe to be Chancellor Rolin, councillor of the Duke of Burgundy, born at Autun. The town which is described in the distance is thought to be Lyons. " Nothing is loftier, more chaste and delicate than this Our-Lady, somewhat thwarted still by a gothic symmetry, yet showing, at so early a period, incredible fineness and truth in the drawing. As to the colour, instead of getting charred in the long run, it has become agatine and has gained the immutable glow of hard gems. " (Th. GAUTIER.) " The beauty and finish of this picture almost put it on a level with the grandest work of Hubert van Eyck; it is the most splendid specimen of Jean van Eyck's first manner. " (CROWE and CAVALCASELLE.)

In a meadow strewn with flowers, the Virgin sits in three quarters profile, dressed in a low-cut black-bordered red robe, with yellow sleeves, and a blue cloak thrown over her right shoulder and coming down to her feet. She stops reading a book that she drops on her knees, to turn her face, surrounded with light hair and a gauze veil, to the left, looking at the Child, who stands leaning against her. He raises his head to his mother and shows her, on the right; little John the Baptist, in profile, clad in a fleece, kneeling, and supported on a staff ending with a cross, who looks at the divine group. On the horizon, a town with steeples; verdant hills surround a small lake. Signed and dated, on the border of the robe of the Virgin, in capital letters: RAPHAELLO URB. MDVII.

1.22 m. h.; 0.80 m. br. W. Arch-shaped. — Under life-size. — Engr. by Chereau, Boucher Desnoyers (Chalc. of the Louvre). — Coll. of François I. — It is thought that this picture, which Raphael executed during his last stay in Florence, was bespoken by a gentleman of Sienna, Filippo Sergardi, and that François I bought it of him. It was placed at Fontainebleau, then at Versailles, in the Cabinet of medals.

*2539. — Rembrandt van Ryn. — Dutch. — The Pilgrims of Emmaus.

In a hall, the further end of which is occupied by a niche between two pilasters, a table is set up, behind which Christ sits, facing the front, in the centre; his head is encircled in a halo of glory; his eyes are raised. He has just broken the bread that he is blessing; the two guests know him from this sign. The one, seen from the back, in the left foreground, has his hands clasped; the other, on the right, his left arm resting on an elbow-chair, lays down his napkin on the table, and bends to Christ. Behind him a servant, heedless of the miracle, brings in a dish.

0.68 m. h.; 0.63 m. br.; W. — Fig. 0.34. — Engr. by baron Denon and de Frey. — This picture, knocked down for 170 florins at the sale of burgomaster Six, in 1734, was paid 10 500 livres by Louis XVI in 1744, at the sale of farmer general Randon de Boisset. There was once in the gallery of the duke of Orleans a reduction of this picture, engraved by R. de Launay.

Christ, in three quarters profile, is lying, naked, on a stone covered with a blood-stained shroud; on the left, near the head, the crown of thorns. On the stone, an inscription in Latin.

0.68 m. h.; 1.97 m. br.; C. — Life-size. — Engr. by N. Platemontagne. — Supposed to come from Port-Royal. Brought to the Louvre under Napoleon I.

*437. — Jouvenet. — French. — The Deposition.

Five disciples unfastened the body of Christ and prepare to lay it down on a shroud, which St John and St Joseph of Arimathea are spreading in the foreground; in the right background, behind St John, the Virgin and the Holy Women on their knees; on the left, the Magdalen in tears. Signed, on the right: J. JOUVENET, 1697.

4.23 m. h.; 3.02 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Desplaces (Chalc. of the Louvre). — This picture, placed at first in the convent of the Capuchin Nuns, rue Neuve-des-Petits-Champs, was removed in 1760, and given to the Academy of Painting, to secure its preservation. Jouvenet exhibited a repetition of it in the Salon of 1699.

In the centre, the Archangel, in three quarters profile, to the left, unfolding his many-coloured wings, his right leg bent backwards, crushes down under his left foot the monster, whose tail coils itself around his thigh, whilst he brandishes a sword in his right hand. His left arm, drawn back against his breast, bears a white shield quartered by a red cross. A cuirasse is put on his floating blue robe, and his red small-clothes are covered by a leg harness. The face, almost in full, is bending on the left shoulder surrounded by his light hair. Here and there, fantastic monsters; on the right, at the foot of a mountain, a group of fiends; on the left, a town in flames.

0,31 m. h.; 0,27 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,18 m. — Engr. by Claude Duflos and Augustino the Venetian. — Painted in 1504 for the duke of Urbino, Guidobaldo de Montefeltro. Was possessed afterwards by cardinal Mazarin, then passed to the Cabinet of king Louis XIV. An important sketch of this picture was in the Crozat collection.

*1498. — Raphael. — Roman. — The Holy Family (of François I).

In the foreground, the Virgin, half kneeling, in three quarters profile, to the left, with a pink robe, and a blue cloak on her right shoulder, is about to take up the Child who tries to spring out of his cradle. Behind her, St Joseph, with a blue tunic and a yellow cloak, leans an elbow on a balustrade, his head turned to the left. On the right of the cradle, in the middle distance, St Elizabeth, with a green robe and a yellow cloak, and a striped turban on her hair, holds before her little St John, in a praying attitude. In the background, two angels, one of whom crowns with flowers the Holy Family — Signed and dated, on the edge of the Virgin's cloak, in capital letters : RAPHAEL PINGEBAT MXVIII. ROMÆ.

2,07 m. h.; 1,40 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Gerard Edelinck (Chalc. of the Louvre), Rousselet, P. Drevet, J. Chéreau, de Poilly, Richomme (Musée royal), etc. — Presented to Claude, queen of François I, by Pope Leo X, in 1518; it formerly had two wings, which were destroyed during the Revolution. Julio Pippi, the Roman, had certainly a hand in it. Having been placed in Louis XIV's, great apartment, in Versailles, against a chimney it had to be stretched on new canvas.

*1503. — Raphael. — Roman. — St George.

Mounted on a prancing white horse, that dashes to the left, St George, with a cuirass and a cloak floating on his shoulders, turns round to the left, and, raising his right arm, is ready to strike the winged monster. The latter, transfixed before by the lance, the staff of which is broken, rushes at him, with a threatening mouth. In the distance, at the foot of a hill, on the right, the daughter of the king of Cappadocia flees away, while looking back to see the fight.

0,32 m. h.; 0,27 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,16 m. — Engr. by Larmessin, Vosterman, Gaillard (Chalc. of the Louvre), etc. — Coll. of François I. — It is probably the picture mentioned by Lomazzo and executed at Urbino, in 1504, for duke Guidobaldo de Montefeltro. — The Museum of the Hermitage, in St Petersburg, possesses another St George by the same master. The hero there wears the English order of the Garter above his right knee and faces the monster. The girl is on her knees in the middle distance. This repetition was made, in the same year, for king Henry VII of England, who had just sent the order of the Garter to the duke of Urbino. After Charles I's death, the picture passed through the collections of marquis de Sourdis, Crozat, baron Thiers, and was at last bought by the empress Catharine.

*1510. — Raphael (SCHOOL OF). — Roman. — Abundance.

fore-shortened foot. In the middle distance, the Virgin, in three quarters profile, to the left, stoops to her child, whose head she lifts up with her right hand, whilst, with the other, she gives him her breast. She is dressed in a red robe, with a blue cloak on her shoulders. Her hair, parted into two bands, is partly covered with a white veil, which twists around her neck. In the distance, on both sides of a thick tree, which forms part of the background, one describes a bit of landscape. On the table: ANDREAS DE SOLARIO FA.

0,60 m. h.; 0,50 m. br. W. — Under life-size. — Engr. by Meulmeester (Chalc. of the Louvre), Ulmer, Butavand, etc. — Presented to Mary of Medici by the Franciscans of Blois; belonged to Mazarin and to the prince of Carignan, and was purchased by Louis XV in 1742. On the back of the panel, this can be read: Tabl'ou d'Andrea Solario achté de M. le duc de Mazarin par moie Prence de Carignan A D S. N° 92. It does not appear in the catalogue of Lépicié (1752), but is entered into that of the king's pictures (Versailles, 1784). There is in the Hermitage Museum, St Petersburg, a copy of this picture executed by an old master.

On the right, a hand holds by the hair the calm-featured head of John the Baptist, from which blood is dropping, and is going to lay it on a plate that Salome holds out. She is almost facing the front, her head in three quarters profile to the left. She wears a green robe, cut on the breast, which is sheltered with a frilled chemisette. The locks of her light reddish hair fall down on her shoulders. Half-figure.

0,62 m. h., 0,53 m. br. W. — Under life-size. — Engr. by Bertinot (Chalc. of the Louvre). Coll. of Louis XIV.

*1967. — Van Dyck (ANTHONY). — Fleming. — Portrait of Charles I, king of England (1600-1649).

In the centre, the king comes forward, in profile; the head in three quarters profile, to the left; the right hand, in a glove, leans on a cane; the left one, rests on the hip, and holds a glove. The hair falls along the face down to the shoulders; fine moustache; pointed royal; eyes looking right opposite. Dressed in a white vest, red breeches, and buffalo boots with gold spurs; the sword, in a red sheath, hangs on a rich shoulder-belt. On his head, a broad-brimmed felt hat, adorned with a feather. In the right middle distance, under a thick-spreading tree, an equerry, who is believed to be the marquis of Hamilton or M. de St Antoine, holds a horse of which the chest only is visible; behind him, a page, in profile, carrying the king's cloak; far away, a landscape, and, on the right, the sea; upon a stone, this inscription: CAROLUS I REX A VAN DYCK.

2,72 m. h.; 2,12 m. br. — Full-length, life-size. — Engr. by Strange, Bonnefoy, Duparc, etc. This picture, executed in 1635 for 100 pounds sterling, belonged to the marquis of Lassay, then to the count of Thiers. When the coll. of the latter was sold to the empress of Russia, Mme du Barry persuaded the king to acquire this picture, that she considered as a family portrait, as the du Barrys claimed to be related to the Stuarts, and she placed it at Louveciennes. She sold it back 24 000 livres, in 1775, to M. d'Angiviller, acting for the king.

* 1601. — Lionardo da Vinci. — Florentine. — La Gioconda
(Portrait of Monna Lisa).

Seated, almost facing the front, the left arm resting on the arm of the chair; the hands crossed. The head, slightly in three quarters profile, bends a little to the right; the hair, parted into flat bands kept back by a transparent veil, falls in locks over the shoulders; the black eyes look on the right; the mouth has an unsteady expression and the red lips seem to smile. The green robe, with yellow sleeves, is cut on the breast, forming a plaited bodice. Behind, a stone balustrade; in the background, a hilly landscape intersected by winding torrents; on the right, a bridge; on the horizon, a lake surrounded by snow-capped summits.

0,77 m. h.; 0,53 m. br. — Breast-piece; life-size. — Engr. by Bridoux (Chalc. of the Louvre), Calamatta, Gaillard (Chalc. of the Louvre). — The model of this master-piece was Monna Lisa Gherardini, the third wife of Francesco del Giocondo; thence the name la Gioconda — This picture, made in Florence about 1500, and bought 4000 gold crowns for Francis I, was placed at first in the gilt cabinet of Fontainebleau; then Louis XIV took it to Versailles; it was not exhibited in the Louvre till after the Revolution. "Let him, who wants to know how far art can imitate nature, realize it by examining this head; this painting is a work that is divine rather than human, and it is deemed a marvellous and living thing, just as much as nature itself." (VASARI.)

On the left, the Child lies on a blue drapery, turned to the right, in full light, and sleeps with his right arm bent up under his head. The Virgin, in three quarters profile, to the left, kneels by his right side, dressed in a red robe covered with a long lilac-coloured cloak. On her head, a blue diadem, from which a grey drapery hangs on her shoulders. She lifts up with her right hand a gauze veil which shelters Jesus, and with her left arm clasps little St John, who, on his knees, with clasped hands, and his head in profile, is in rapture at the sight before him. The landscape represents the Campagna di Roma, with ruins on the top of a hill; far away, the town, and snowy mountains.

0,68 m. h.; 0,44 m. br. — Fig. 0,60 m. — Engr. by A. Poilly, J. Frey, du Flos, Borsi, Ingouf (Musée français), De-noyers (Chalc. of the Louvre), Massard, Recotti, M tzmacher, Weber, etc. — It success vely belonged to M. de Chateaufneuf and the marquis of La Vrillière, and was purchased in 1742 by Louis XV at the prince of Carignan sale; after adorning the apartments at Versailles, it was brought to the Louvre.

is represented in the Pitti palace by a work of a similar get up. As many other pictures in the royal collections, this one was enlarged in the 18th century. In Louis XIV's time, it only measured 22 by 16 inches (0,59 m. by 0,42 m.). In the catalogue of Lépicié (1752), the dimensions are the same as at present (0,60 m. by 0,50 m.).

*1184. — Bronzino (AGNOLO). — Florentine. — Portrait of a Sculptor.

He stands, in three quarters profile, to the left, holding with both hands the statuette of a woman. He wears a black tunic, on which a white collar is glaring; on the right, a green drapery is drawn up; in the background, a bare wall and the leaf of a door.

1,11 m. h.; 0,91 m. br. W. — Half-fig.; life-size. — It was long thought that it was the portrait of Baccio Bandinelli, the Florentine sculptor. It was then ascribed to Sebastiano del Piombo. M. Villot did not feel justified to keep on those attributions. — Coll. of Louis XIV.

*1321. — Ghirlandajo (DOMENICO). — Florentine. — The Visitation.

In the middle of an entrance-hall, lighted up by a central arch, through which a fortified town is seen in the distance, the Virgin stands, in three quarters profile, to the right, stooping to Elizabeth, who kneels before her in profile. The Virgin is wrapped up in a blue cloak, fastened on her breast by a clasp of goldsmith's work; St Elizabeth, with a white veil on her head, is dressed in a long yellow cloak. On the right, Mary Salome comes, her hands clasped, her head bent to the Virgin; on the left, Mary Cleophas, her right hand against her breast, holds with the other the folds of her dress, and looks right opposite. Dated 1491.

1,72 m. l.; 1,65 m. br. W. — Life-size. — Painted for the church of Castello (now Santa-Maria-Madalaena de Pazzi), in Florence. Brought to the Musée Napoléon in 1806. It was left there, with twenty-two others, by the commissioners of the Grand Duke of Tuscany, owing to M. Lavallée, the general secretary of the Museums, calling their attention to this fact that Florence was already possessed of paintings by the same Florentine painters, of a merit superior or equal to those they had to claim back.

In the foreground, a young woman, standing, facing the front, with her head in three quarters profile to the left, holds in her left hand a flask and raises, with her right one, her loose hair. Her green velvet bodice, half-laced up, lets her breast appear, under a plaited chemisette with broad sleeves. On the left, in the shade, a man, with a brown beard, holds two looking-glasses out to her.

0,96 m. h.; 0,76 m. br. C. — Half-fig.; life-size. — Engr. by Forster, Dauguin (Société française de gravure), etc. — This picture, executed towards 1520, was in the gallery of Charles I with the title: The Mistress of Titian. It was bought by Jabach and sold 100 pounds sterling to Louis XIV. Now-a-days the two figures are thought to be the duke of Ferrara, Alfonso I, and Laura di Dianti, the latter's daughter, his mistress. Two repetitions of it with slight alterations, are known to exist: the one, which belonged to Christina of Sweden, was in the coll. of the duke of Orleans; the other was taken away from Ferrara in 1815, and sold to Lord Stovart.

He stands, slightly turned to the left, the head facing the front, with brown hair, the locks of which fall over his shoulders. Brown and short moustaches. Black doublet, with sleeves split so as to let the white shirt appear. The left hand rests on the hip; the right arm, on the pedestal of a column. Evenly coloured ground.

*1709. — Murillo. — Spaniard. — The Immaculate Conception of the Virgin.

The Virgin, with a white robe, an azure cloak on the left shoulder, the hands crossed on her breast, is standing, in three quarters profile, to the left, the feet on a moon-crescent, the eyes up to the sky; round her, in a luminous haze, a wreath of angels.

2,74 m. h.; 1,90 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Achille Lefèvre, Massard, etc. — Purchased, in 1852, at the sale of marshal Sault, for 615'300 francs.

*2348. — Dou (GERARD). — Dutch. — The dropical Woman.

In a vaulted room, near a window, on the left, before a bed, an elderly woman sits in an arm-chair, in three quarters profile, to the left, and raises her eyes. Her right hand is held by a maiden kneeling, in profile, who looks at her, weeping; behind the arm-chair, a female servant stoops over her mistress and holds out to her a spoonful of draught. In the right foreground, a physician, in profile, to the left, stands, wrapped up in a broad overcoat; he attentively looks at a retort full of some liquid, that he brings up to his eyes with his right hand. On the ceiling, a copper chandelier, and, on the right, a tapestry half-drawn up, as a door curtain; close by, an arm-chair and a flask which is cooling in a large copper pan; on the left, a desk on which a book is open; in the background, a wooden gallery. — Signed and dated, on the edge of the book: 1663. G. DOV. OVT 65 JAER.

0,83 m. h.; 0,67 m. br. W. Arch-shaped. — Fig. 0,32 m. — Engr. by Claessens and Fosseyeux. — This picture was presented to prince Eugene by the Palatine Elector, who had paid 30 000 florins for it. It remained in the family of Savoy, at Turin, till 1800; at that time, Charles Emmanuel gave it to adjutant-general Clausel (afterwards marshal of France), who directly presented it to the nation. "It is a drama, the subject of which, though only an event in private life, secures the approval of all. True, simple, picturesque and affecting, it produces the finest harmony in the whole, through the agreement of the different parts and the gracefulness of the positions." (MERCIER, Journal de Paris.)

* 2587. — Ter-Borch. — Dutch. — The Gallant Soldier.

On the left, near a table covered with a red velvet carpet, upon which trays loaded with fruit are laid, a woman, in three quarters profile, to the right, sits gorgeously clad in a white satin skirt and a low bodice in blue velvet, trimmed with ermine, her hair done up with pearls; she holds a glass in her right hand: with the left one, she lits up a ewer, and she slightly bends her head to look at a soldier seated by her right side, in three quarters profile, to the left. This one has a thick head of hair, which goes down to his shoulders, big moustaches and a royal. A cuirass is put on his buff doublet; his legs disappear in heavy funnel-shaped boots; his left hand holds a purse and rests on his knee. His right hand is stretched out and contains gold coins, that he offers to the young woman; he has thrown his hat down against his chair: in the background, facing the front, a bed, the curtains of which are closed; on the left, a chimney, on the mantle of which an escutcheon contains the monogram T. B.

0,67 m. h.; 0,55 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,45 m. — Engr. by Audouin (Musée français). — Coll. of Louis XVI. — Paid 440 florins at the van der Vugt sale, Amsterdam, in 1745, it was purchased, in 1705, for 2635 florins at the van Slingelandt sale.

She stands, almost in full face, her right hand resting on a chair, the left one down, holding a flower. Around her face, which turns to the left, the locks of her hair wave down to her shoulders; on the right side of the head, a pink bow. The robe is in pearl-coloured taffeta, trimmed with black lace; round the neck, a necklace and a gold chain, which falls across the bodice. In the top, this inscription in capital letters: L'INFANTE MARGUERITE.

0,70 m. h.; 0,59 m. br. C. — Half-fig.; life-size. — Engr. by Wathier, Meyer, Milius. — Ancient coll. — Painted in 1659 probably, in the same time as the full-length portrait sent by Philip IV to the emperor of Germany, now in the Belvedere Museum, Vienna. "Through the artlessness of childhood, one feels in this delicate and pretty figure the dignity of one who knows her rank: she is a little girl, but this girl is a king's daughter, and, one day, shall be a queen." (TH. GAUTIER.)

* 1352. — Piombo (SEBASTIANO LUCIANI, called SEBASTIANO DEL). — Venetian. — The Visitation.

In the centre, the Virgin, with a red robe and a green cloak, stands, in profile, to the right, and lays her right hand on St Elizabeth's shoulder, who has come to meet her. The latter is enveloped in a long yellow veil, that falls from her head over a green robe. Behind the Virgin, on the right, two women, with clasped hands; on the right side of St Elizabeth, Zachariah is coming down from his house. In the background, a road which leads to a city. Signed and dated: SEBASTIANUS VENETUS MDXXI.

1.68 m. h.; 1.32 m. br. C. — Knee-piece; life-size. — Engr. by Desvachez (Chalc. of the Louvre). — Purchased by François I in 1521, it was placed at Fontainebleau, then removed to Versailles under Louis XIV; it has been seriously damaged. Forgotten in the garrets, divided into three fragments, it had to be transported on canvas and thoroughly repaired, when the Musée Napoléon was set up.

* 1179. — Bordone (PARIS). — Venetian. — Portrait of a man.

In three quarters profile, to the right, he sits in an arm-chair, clad in a black robe lined with fur; on the head, a black flat cap. The left hand rests on a table covered with a green carpet, and supporting different objects. The right hand holds a letter on which this is read: Sp domino Jeronimo Crofti... Magior suo semper observ... Augusta. On the left, on a pilaster, a coat of arms: a griffin, holding a roll in its talons, and, in the upper part of the coat of arms, the letters T. S. On the entablature, this inscription: ÆTATIS SUE ANN XXVII. M.D. XXXX. and, on the arm of the chair: PARI^s B.F.

1.07 m. h.; 0.86 m. br. — Half - fig.; life-size. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — It is the portrait of Jeronimo Crofti, painted at Augsburg.

1193. — Veronese. — Venetian. — The Dinner at Simon the Pharisee's.

Under a circular portico, supported by twelve columns, two tables are set as the segments of a circle; in the vacant space the Magdalen, on her knees, wipes with her hair the feet of Christ, who sits at the corner of the rightside table, and to whom Judas, placed at the other table, on the left, is speaking. In different places, members of the Simon family and disciples, dressed like patri- cians of Venice. In the right foreground, a woman to whom a negro boy hands a dish; on the left, leaning against a column, a mother, with her child in her arms. In the background, rich buildings; in the sky, two angels displaying a streamer with a latin inscription.

4.54 m. h.; 2.74 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Painted from 1570 to 1575, for the convent of the Servites at Venice; given by the Venetian Republic to Louis XIV, in 1665. Was placed in the "Salon d'Hercule" at Versailles, but brought to the Louvre as soon as the Museums were reorganized.

long staff on which the god leans. The head, surrounded with light hair floating in the wind, contemptuously looks at Marsyas, seated on a rock, on the left, in the shade, and blowing in a pipe. Between the two, on the ground, a lyre, a quiver and arrows. As a background, a green meadow, adorned with flowers and small and slender trees; a strong castle stands on the banks of a river; in the sky, birds are flying away.

0,39 m. h.; 0,29 m. br. W. — This picture, known by the name of Morris Moore's Raphael, was sold to this gentleman in England, as being the work of Mantegna. When the Administration of the Louvre bought it of him, in 1833, for 200 000 francs, it was agreed that it should be placed in the "Salon carré" under the title: "Raphael de Morris Moore. Some critics have attributed it to Perugino, Pinturicchio, Timoteo Vite, Francia, etc... It is unquestionably the work of an Umbrian painter.

* 1048. — Perréal (JEAN, called JEAN DE PARIS). — French. — The Virgin between two Donors.

The Virgin, with long loose hair, kept up on the forehead by a rich cord and flowing over an ample red cloak, sits in the middle, on a throne; she supports with her right hand the Child; she looks at him, bending a little her head to the left, and with her left hand she offers him an apple. The Child, almost naked, in three quarters profile, to the left, stoops to a donor, and shows with his hand the other donor, a lady. These two, kneeling on each side of the throne, with their hands clasped, are only seen down to the breast, the lower part of the body being hidden by a stone balustrade; the man, bare-headed, is dressed in a brown cloak, trimmed with ermine; the woman wears a black robe and a white hood. Under the feet of the Virgin, a large flowered carpet, and before, on the left, a crystal vase with flowers in it. Background: a gilt drapery between two decorated columns. On the two pilasters of the balustrade, the letters IP are united by an arabesque.

0,77 m. h.; 0,53 m. br. W. — This picture, which belonged to the coll. of the duke of Parma, was bought by M. Bancel, who presented it to the Museum in 1885. The initials IP are considered as being the initials of the painter; some assert also that the two kneeling figures are Charles VIII and Anne of Brittany. These are mere conjectures, that nothing has proved to be true to this day.

* 2496. — Van Ostade (ADRIAEN). — Dutch. — The Schoolmaster.

In the middle, the master, seated in an arm-chair, threatens with his ferule a little boy who cries; by his sides, two children and a baby, down on the floor; on the right, at the foot of a staircase, where a little boy is coming down with a basket on his head, a group of children are playing; opposite, on the left, a child, with a broad hat, is intent reading; in the background, school-boys sit at work.

0,40 m. h.; 0,33 m. br. — Fig. 0,12 m. — Engr. by Bovines (Musée français). — Coll. of Louis XIV. — Bought in 1767, at the Julienne sale, 6425 livres; in 1777, at the Boisset sale, 6610 livres; in 1784, at the Pango sale, 6000 livres; and, in 1784, at the Count of Vaudreuil sale, 6610 livres, by the Crown. "This picture shows to what degree Adriaen van Ostade carried this heartfelt sympathy for reality, which is one of the characteristics of the Dutch art. With him, the most delicate observation is hidden under the appearance of the utmost simplicity." (GRUYER.)

Almost in full face. The red hair, gathered up on the forehead, falls in locks on both sides and hides the ears, to which pendants, ending with a big pearl, are fastened. She wears on the top of her head a green velvet flat cap, ornamented with red bows; a fur trimmed cassock covers her shoulders and shows her throat under a plaited chemisette; on the left arm, a pearl bracelet.

0,72 m. h.; 0,60 m. br. C. — Breast-piece; life-size. — Engr. by Claessens (Musée français), Danguin. — Painted towards 1652. It is the portrait of Hendrickje Stoffels, in the service of Rembrandt, who was to remain with her master till death. The features of this young woman are to be found in many paintings of the master. “The shades in the lighted parts, the chiaro-oscuro of the neck, the white hue of the linen, the warm and transparent bituminous tone of the fur, the light on the forehead and nose, make this portrait a matchless painting.” (TH. GAUTIER.)

HALL V

(Called "salle Duchâtel")

This hall, which is north of the "Salon Carré", was inhabited, in the last century, by the officials of the Louvre. It was decorated under Louis XVIII by Meynier, who represented on the ceiling the apotheosis of the great French painters, and, in the curves, genii and medallions of celebrated artists. The pictures it contains, except Luini's frescoes, have been bequeathed to the Museum by countess Duchâtel, the widow of the late minister for the Home Department and the Fine Arts, on the express condition that they should be placed together in one hall that should be called by the name of the donor. As her heirs, count Duchâtel and the duchess of La Tremoille, gave up their reserved right to enjoy, during their life-time, the possession of these pictures, the Government received them in 1878 and assigned the hall V to the collection

* 2026. Memling (HANS). — Fleming. — The Virgin with the Donors.

Ædipus, in profile, to the left, having a red scarf for only garment, leans on a pile of spears, resting his left foot upon a stone forward, and his elbow on his knee; he fixedly looks at the sphinx with a woman's head and a winged body, that stands before a cave in which human remains are heaped up. In the right background, a man runs, frightened away; on the horizon, the city of Thebes.—Signed, on a stone : J. INGRES, Pingebat, 1808.

1,83 m. h.; 1;45 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Gaillard and by Salmon (Chalc. of the Louvre). This painting is one of those that Ingres sent home from Rome; it was bought by the duke d'Orleans, and disposed of at his sale under n° 32. A repetition, with a few slight alterations, was painted for M. Pereire, and bore at the latter's sale the n° 26.

* 422.— Ingres. — French. — The Source.

A blonde maiden is standing, naked, in full face, before a rock which a maplebranch overtops; with her right arm, rounded over her head, she supports, on her right shoulders, a clay vase, on the mouth of which she lays her right hand. HALL VII

(called " Salle des Sept mètres ")

ITALIAN SCHOOLS (15th AND 16th CENTURIES)

This hall, situated between the Great Gallery and the landing of the Daru staircase, is a part of the buildings of the new Louvre. It was inaugurated on the 14th of August 1857.

The task of decorating it had been committed to M. Denuelle.

In the Heavens open, God Almighty, in three quarters profile, to the left, wrapped up in a red robe and a blue cloak, bends his head to the earth, and raises his right hand to bestow his blessing; around him, in an almond-shaped halo called mandorla, seven heads of cherubs; on both sides, an angel, standing, strews flowers about.

1.40 m. h.; 2.83 m. br. — Half-fig., life-size. Shaped as the vault of a furnace. — Bought 207000 francs in 1873, at the sale of M. Oudry, this fresco comes from villa Magliana, at Rome. The villa, the favourite residence of pope Julius II, was embellished by Leo X, who intrusted Raphael with the care of painting the chapel, where the painter represented, on the vault of the altar, God Almighty, and in one of the vertical arches of the aisle, St Cecilia's martyrdom. These frescoes were pawned to the Mont-de-Piété of Rome in 1658 by the nuns of St Cecilia, to whose congregation the villa belonged, they were afterwards transported on canvas and placed in one of the entrance halls of the church of St Cecilia in Trastevere. In 1869 they were purchased by M. Oudry, who brought them to France. " In spite of some re-painted parts, the fresco that the Louvre possesses has in itself, in the highest degree, the impressive charm of Raphael's own creations. One safely may rank the Angels of la Magliana among the most unquestionable works of the master." (GRUYER.)

* 1467. — Bianchi (FRANCESCO DI). — Ferrarese. — The Virgin and the Child.

On a throne, the basement of which is decorated with bas-reliefs representing Eve tempted and the Flight into Egypt, painted grey upon grey, the Virgin is sitting, with a pink robe and a blue cloak, holding the Child in her arms. The latter turns to the right, to St Quentin, upright, clad in his armour and leaning on his sword; on the left, St Benedict, upright also, in rich abbatial vestments, holds a book and a crosier. On the steps of the throne, two angels play, the one on the viol of love, the other on the hand-mandolin. The background of the picture is formed by the windows and arcades of a portico.

* 1567. — Perugino (PIETRO VANNUCCI, called). — Umbrian. — The Fight between Love and Chastity.

In a meadow consecrated to Venus, half-naked Nymphs, some armed with lances, others with bows or torches, and blindfolded Loves, fight with one another; on the right, a Satyr drags along one of the female combatants by her hair; on the left, near a tree on which an escutcheon is hanging, Minerva is about to pierce a Love with her lance, while other Loves tease a Nymph, who is lying on the grass; in the background, scenes borrowed from the Fable.

1,56 m. h.; 1,92 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,45 m. — Ordered by Isabella of Este, duchess of Mantua. "My poetical idea, which I desire you should paint", she wrote to the artist, "is a Battle of Chastity against Love, that is Pallas and Diana fighting against Venus and Love. Pallas must have almost conquered Love; after breaking to pieces the gold arrow and silver quiver that she has cast down before her feet, she holds him with one hand by the bandage that the blind one wears over his eyes, and she raises her other hand to strike him. Between Diana and Venus victory must seem to be doubtful; Venus shall be injured in some part of her dress only; as to Diana, her clothes shall be set on fire by the torch of Venus; but the bodies of the two goddesses shall suffer no wound." This picture, conformable to the directions of the duchess, was painted in distemper in 1505, and taken away, together with several others (namely the two Mantegnas, nos 1375 and 1376, and the Lorenzo Costis, nos 1260 and 1262), — at the time of the plunder of Mantua, — from the cabinet of Isabella of Este, to be carried to the castle of Richelieu, where they remained down to the Revolution.

In the centre, on a throne surmounted by a canopy, Christ lays a crown on the brow of the Virgin, kneeling on his left; on both sides, angels playing music, saints and apostles, standing out upon a golden ground. On the left; St Dominic holding a flower-of-luce and a book, St Thomas Aquinas, whose cloak is hooked by a sun-shaped clasp, Charlemagne, with a crown of flower-de-luces; on the right, St Peter Dominican, whose wounded skull is bleeding, St Stephen, leaning upon a gridiron; among the female saints, St Catharine leaning upon the wheel, St Agnes, holding a lamb in her arms. In the foreground, seen from the back, St Nicholas, the bishop of Myre, clothed in a rich dalmatic, having at his feet three balls, the symbol of the three purses he gave a poor gentleman to portion his daughters with; the Magdalen, whose golden hair flows over a red robe, and who presents a vase of per-fume; St Cecilia, wrapped in a blue cloak, and crowned with roses.

The predella contains seven subjects from the life of St Dominic, the patron of the order to which the painter belonged: 1. The Vision of Pope Innocent III. — 2. St Peter and St Paul appear to St Dominic. — 3. St Dominic revives a young man, who has just been crushed to death by a horse. — 4. Christ standing up in his grave, at the foot of which the Virgin and an apostle are at prayers. — 5. The miracle of the book sent by St Dominic to the Albigenses. — 6. Two Angels wait on Dominican Friars sitting at a table. — 7. The Death of St. Dominic.

Napoléon. — Formerly in St Dominic's church, at Fiesole. This picture was already looked upon as a masterpiece in Vasari's time: "Fra Giovanni, said he, excelled himself and showed all his talent and sense of the art in a picture which is in San Domenico, near the door, on the left hand from the entrance; Jesus Christ, in it, crowns the Virgin in the middle of a choir of angels, among an infinite multitude of saints, men and women, so numerous, so well made, so varied in their attitudes, so different in their countenances, that looking at them gives incredible pleasure and delight. It seems as if those blessed spirits could not be otherwise in Heaven, or, to speak more properly, as if they could not be otherwise if they assumed a body; for all the holy men and women who are there, not only appear with kind and sweet looks, but it seems that the colouring of the whole is from the hand of a saint or an angel, as it is, in fact... As to me, I declare, indeed, that I never see this picture but it seems to me a new thing, and every time, part from it, I feel I have not yet seen it quite enough." (VASARI). — "Time has not been able to tarnish the ideal freshness of this picture, as delicate as a miniature of a missal; the tints of which are borrowed from the white tones of lilies, the rosy hues of dawn, the azure of the sky and the gold of stars." (TH. GAUTIER.)

In a meadow, at the foot of the ramparts of a town, an executioner prepares to behead a martyr kneeling; in the foreground, three sufferers are lying down, the heads severed from the bodies; on the right, before a group of persons who surround the proconsul, the other martyr keeps on his knees, expecting the deadly blow. Afar off, a hilly landscape.

0,36 m. h.; 0,66 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,18 m. — A fragment of the predella of an altar-screen, coming from the convent of St Marc, in Florence. Given over to the Louvre, in 1882, by the late M. Timbal's wife. "This predella, says Vasari, in which the anecdotal incidents of the martyrdom of St Cosmo and St Damian and a few others are seen, is so well made that it is impossible to imagine anything more carefully executed, not little figures more delicate and better understood." The principal panel, the Virgin surrounded by Saints, is in the Academy of the Fine Arts, at Florence. The same Academy possesses also two fragments of the predella: A Miracle of the saints Cosmo and Damian, and the Laying out of the Martyrs; four other fragments are to be seen in the Pinacothek, at Munich: the Saint before the Judge, the Saints thrown into the Sea, the Saints nailed to crosses, the man of Sorrows.

* 1303. — Garbo (RAFFAELLINO DEL). — Florentine. — The Coronation of the Virgin.

In the lower part, four saints: on the left, St Salvi, dressed as a bishop, leans on his crosier; St Benedict holds a book, and a monk, St Giovanni Gualberto, presents a crucifix to St Bernardo degli Uberti who wears a cardinal's hat; in the upper part, Christ, seated, lays a crown on the head of the Virgin, kneeling on his left; around, cherubs and angels, playing music. The Holy Ghost hovers in the sun-rays.

2,93 m. h.; 1,62 m. br. W. Arch-shaped. — Under life-size. — Musée Napoléon. — Was formerly on the high altar of San Salvi's church, in Florence, having been ordered by abbot da Panichi. "The picture, says Vasari, was richly decorated, and on the predelle, several scene, with small figures, of St Giovanni Gualberto's life, in which Raffaellino behaved very well, being supported, in his distress, by this abbot who had taken pity on him on account of his worth; so, in the predella, he painted him from life, along with the general who ruled them at that time." Vasari adds that John the Baptiste and St Fidelis were represented in niches on the two sides of the picture. Both figures have disappeared, as well as the predella.

In front of a ruined stable, the Child lies on the ground, between the Virgin on the left, in three quarters profile to the right, kneeling, in a blue cloak, and St Joseph, sitting on the right, girt with a yellow cloak, with a staff and a bottle-gourd near him; in the middle distance, behind a wall on which lizards are running about, the ox and the ass; afar off, a meadow in which a shepherd feeds his cattle. In the sky, the Holy Ghost and two angels at prayers.

1,69 m. h.; 1,60 m. br. W. — Under life-size. — "In this picture, the artist's originality gets free from the gothic conventional rules of composition, and brings into a sacred subject the immediate study of nature itself. The details are painted in a firm manner, and one can guess that the colouring, though blackened by time, is splendid." (TH. GAUTIER.) — Made to order, for the nuns of St Margaret, at Prato. According to Vasari, the Virgin is the portrait of Lucrezia Buti, the novice whom Fra Filippo was to carry away soon after. In spite of this tradition, the picture has been attributed by MM. Crowe and Cavalcaselle to Pesellino, and, by other critics, to Baldovinetti. Brought to Paris in 1812.

* 1312. — Giotto di Bondone. — Florentine. — St Francis of Assisi receiving the marks on his body.

At the foot of a mountain, St Francis, kneeling, in three quarters profile to the right, clad in a russet gown, sees, in a dream, Christ who flies down to him. Light rays dart from the hands, feet and breast of the Saviour, and stamp on the saint's body the divine marks.

The lower part is divided into three compartments: The Vision of Pope Innocent III, whom St Peter bids support the Order founded by St Francis. — Innocent III receives St Francis and approves the Rule of his Order. — St Francis converses with birds. On the border of the frame: OPUS DOCTI FLORENTINI.

3,14 m. h.; 1,62 m. br. W. — Under life-size. — Musée Napoléon. — Formerly in San Francesco's church, Pisa. — "He painted on a panel, to send it to Pisa, a figure of St Francis in the horrible rocks of the Vernia, with extreme care; for, without mentioning certain landscapes full of trees and stones, — which was a new thing in that time, — one sees, in the attitude of St Francis, who, kneeling, eagerly receives the marks, a most earnest wish to receive them, and an infinite love of Jesus Christ who, from above, surrounded by seraphs, sends them down to him; and the primings are so lively that nothing better could be imagined. Below this panel are three anecdotes, very fine. This picture is seen now-a-days in San Francesco, of Pisa, on a pilaster, near the high altar, held in high veneration, in memory of so great a man." 0,95 m. h.; 0,58 m. br. W. — Half-fig., life-size. — Musée Napoléon III. — Campana coll., 1862. — This is a part of a set of twenty eight paintings, representing great men, which decorated the library of duke Federigo de Montefeltro, in Urbino. These portraits have been attributed to Melozzo da Forli. According to a passage of Vespasiano de Bisticci, the painter is a Fleming, Justus of Ghent, or one of his pupils. The Louvre possesses fourteen pictures of the set; the fourteen others, are in the Barberini palace, at Rome. Several drawings of Raphael, after these pictures, are kept in the Academy of the Fine arts, Venice.

*1132. — Sano di Pietro (ANSANO, called). — Siennese. — The Legend of St Jerome.

Two parts: on the left St Jerome, in the sky, dressed as a cardinal, surrounded by cherubs, appears to two persons sitting on a bench. On the right, St Augustine rises, called by St Jerome and St John, who appear to him, in the Heavens open, above his writing-desk.

0,23 m. h.; 0,36 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,16 m. — Musée Napoléon. — This picture, along with the two following ones, nos 1130 and 1131, and nos 1128 and 1129, page 89, were parts of a predella, that belonged to the Rinuccini family, of Florence.

*1130. — Sano di Pietro. — Siennese. — The Legend of St Jerome.

On the left, under a portico, the saint, attended by two ermits, is kneeling before a lion, that he relieves from a thorn; in the centre, a lion leads to the saint's dwelling a caravan laden with victuals, the guides of which are running away, driven by fear, to the right.

On a throne with an elaborately wrought back, the Virgin, dressed in a green cloak and a red robe, sits in full face, holding the Child in her lap. On the left, St John the Baptist and St Augustine, dressed as a bishop; on the right, St Antony and St Francis. Afar off, a bluish landscape, with ruins and mountains on the horizon.

1,70 m. h.; 1,70 m. br. W. — Under life-size. — Musée Napoléon III. — Campana coll., 1862. This fine picture has been attributed in turns to Andrea del Castagno, Fra Filippo Lippi, and Andrea Verrocchio.

1273. — Uccello (PAOLO DONO, called). — Florentine. — A Battle.

In the centre, a captain, on a black horse, dashes to the left. Some of the horsemen who accompany him, on the left, are going to charge, lances lowered; the others, on the right, are at a stand, lances up. In the middle distance, foot-soldiers.

1,80 m. h.; 3,16 m. br. W. — Half-life-size. — Musée Napoléon III. — Campana coll., 1862. — "This picture affords the means of searching into the usual way of composition of this master; one can remark what a clever calculation there is in the apparent disorder of the lines, and the science, quite new at that time, which is shown in the correctness of the perspective and the justness of the foreshortenings." (H. DELABORDE.) — This is one of the four military subjects mentioned by Vasari as having been painted for the Bartolinis, at Gualfonda. Two others are kept, the one in the Museum of Offices, at Florence, the other in the National Gallery, London. In Vasari's time, these pictures had already been repaired by Bugiardini, "which," he adds, "did them harm rather than good."

1417. — Pinturicchio (BERNARDINO DI BETTO DI BIAGO, called IL). — Umbrian. — The Virgin and the Child.

The Virgin, in three quarters profile, to the left, is sitting and holds in her arms the Child, who writes on a volume that she presents to him; on the right, St Gregory, in rich sacerdotal vestments; on the left, a saint, with hands clasped. Ground of gold, with a many-coloured streamer.

In a court of the citadel, before a door, sits, on the right, Sultan Canson Ghoury, attended by two dignitaries and several emirs; before the sultan, the Venetian ambassador, Domenico Trevisano and his train; in the foreground, camels and horsemen, a stag and a hind; in the background, mosques with minarets, and gardens.

1,18 m. h.; 2,03 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,38 m. — Engr. by Gillet and Jouannin. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — The sultan's audience took place in 1512, that is, five years after the death of Bellini, to whom the authorship of the picture had first been attributed.

*1376. — Mantegna (ANDREA). — Paduan. — Wisdom victorious over the Vices.

On the border of a fountain, Minerva, armed with a lance and a shield, rushes forward, preceded by two nymphs carrying a torch; as they approach, Venus, mounted on a Centaur, and the herd of the Vices flee away; in the background, an arbour of orange-trees so cut as to form arcades; in the Heavens open, the Virtues, who will replace on earth the monsters that Minerva has just driven away; on the left, around a tree with a human face, a bandrol, with an inscription in three languages.

1,60 m. h.; 1,92 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,60 m. — Musée Napoléon. — One of the pictures which adorned the cabinet of the marchioness of Gonzaga, Isabella of Este, in Mantua, and were afterwards, down to the Revolution, kept in the collections of the castle of Richelieu.

*1263. — Credi (LORENZO DI). — Florentine. — The Virgin and the Child, between two saints.

The Virgin is seated on a throne, her head, covered with a transparent veil, bent over the right shoulder. She bears on her knees the Child who, turning to the left, blesses St Julian the Hospitaller, standing, his hands clasped, in a praying attitude; on the right, St Nicholas, bishop of Myra, with his episcopal vestments, is sunk in the perusal of a holy book; in the background, an entrance hall, with elaborately wrought pilasters, forming arcades.

1,64 m. h.; 1,65 m. br. W. — Life-size. — Musée Napoléon. — Was formerly in the church of Castello, in Florence (now Santa Maddalena de Pazzi). "The best work that Lorenzo ever made, the one in which he was the most careful and studious to check himself, was that which is at Castello, in a chapel in which are, on a panel, Our-Lady, St Julian and St Nicholas. Let him, who wants to know how necessary it is to a painter in oil-colours to be clean in his work in order to make it durable, look at this picture, wrought with so much care that one could not do better." (VASARI.)

On the top of a rock forming an arcade, before a bed shaded by a grove of orange-trees, Venus, standing entirely naked, listens to the parting farewell of Mars, dressed as a warrior; on the left, Cupid aims an air-cane at Vulcanus, who comes out of his smithy with a threatening look. In the centre, before the rock, the Muses, entwined in each other, danse at the sound of the lyre of Apollo, who is sitting on the left. On the right, Mercury, holding the cadu-

1174. — Bononi (BARTOLOMEO). — Lombard. — The Virgin and the Child.

In the Heavens open, the Virgin, in three quarters profile, to the left, with a red robe and a green cloak, carries the Child, who clings to her veil. Lower on the right, adoring the divine group, St Francis of Assisi is standing, and a bishop, in a rich dalmatic, leaning on his crosier, introduces a monk, who is kneeling. A landscape in the background; in the foreground, on the trunk of a tree, a scroll with this inscription : BARTHOLOMEI BONONI CIVIS PAPIENSIS.

1,68 m. h.; 1,14 m. br. W. — Life-size. — Musée Napoléon. — Campana coll., 1862. — Comes from St Francis's church, Pavia.

GREAT GALLERY

(Grande Galerie)

The construction of this gallery, on the western side of the "Salon Carré", was begun towards 1596 by Du Pérac, and continued under Louis XIII and Louis XIV. Percier and Fontaine were entrusted by Napoleon I with the decoration of the central part, which was finished under the second Empire only by Denuelle.

About the end of the 18th century, the embossed plans of the fortresses of France, by Berthier, were exhibited there; it was used, afterwards, along with the "Salon Carré", for the exhibitions of the living artists, down to the day when the Convention ordered to place there the pictures of the ancient collection of the King and the pictures assigned to France by the treaty of peace. In the middle of this gallery is a door, that leads to the Hall VIII, devoted to the painting in the 19th century.

The great gallery is divided into six sections, or "travées".

" TRAVÉE ", OR SECTION A

ITALIAN SCHOOLS (16th CENTURY)

1158. — Bellini (GIOVANNI). — Venetian. — The Virgin between St Peter and St Sebastian.

In the corner of a terrace, the Virgin, in three quarters profile, to the left, with a blue robe and a yellow cloak, and a white veil upon her head, supports the Child upright on a balustrade; in the middle distance, on the right, St Sebastian, naked, clasps his hands; on the left, St Peter, wrapped up in a red cloak, bears keys in his hands. In the sky, three cherubs. Signed, on the balustrade: IOHANNES BELLINUS.

0,84 m. h.; 0,61 m. br. W. — Under life-size. — Collections of the prince of Orange, M. Brentano and lord Northwick. Purchased in 1859.

1318. — Girolamo dai Libri. — Venetian. — The Virgin and the Child.

The Virgin, facing the front, bends her head on her right shoulder, and bears on her knees the Child, upright, looking, on the left, at little St John; in the middle distance, four little cherubs amidst the branches of a lemon-tree.

0,71 m. h.; 0,48 m. br. W. — Half-fig., under life-size. — Purchased in 1877 at the Brookes sale.

1284.—Lorenzo di Pavia.—Lombard.—The Family of the Virgin.

In the middle of a landscape, the Virgin, dressed in a blue robe, with the locks of her light hair falling on her shoulders, is seated, holding on her knees the Child. Behind, St Anne, Cleophas, Salome and Jehoiakim; on the right, Mary, the daughter of Salome, with two children on her knees, and Zebedee; on the left, Mary, the daughter of Cleophas, Alphœus and their four children. Every character bears his name inscribed on a streamer. In the foreground, birds perched on stones: in the distance, houses on hills around a lake. Signed, in the centre, on the ground: LAURENTIUS PAPIEN FECIT MDXIII.

2,02 m. h.; 1,44 m. br. W. transported upon C. — Under life-size. — Musée Napoléon. — Comes from the church of the Recollets, in Savona.

In the foreground of a meadow, two girls are seated right and left; that on the left bears two children on her knees; in the middle distance, in the central part, two other girls; in the right background, an old woman surrounded by Loves; on the left, two satyrs playing music.

1,40 m. h.; 1,38 m. br. C. — Under life-size. — Engr. by Normand. — Copy, with a few alterations, of one the frescoes executed by Niccolò dell' Abbato or some other fellow-worker, after the drawings of Primaticcio, in the Henri II Gallery, at Fontainebleau. A tradition, without any reliable foundation, recognizes there the portraits of Diane de Poitiers with her two children, and Marguerite de Valois.

1468.—Boccaccio Boccaccino?—Lombard.—The Holy Family.

On the left, the Virgin, in three quarters profile, to the right, holds the Child in her arms. Opposite, St Joseph, in profile, to the left, leans upon a staff.

0,34 m. h.; 0,29 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,60 m. — Musée Napoléon III.—Campana coll., 1862.

In the middle of a room with bare walls, St Anne is lying and holds out to a woman, on the right, the Virgin, who has just come to the world; at the foot of the bed, a man, seen from the back, leans on his elbow; on the right, Jehoiakim is seated, writing on his knees; near him, a servant-girl stoops to take up some household utensils, and in the middle distance a maiden is standing up, in a dignified and majestic attitude.

0,33 m. h.; 0,70 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,23 m. — Coll. of Louis XVIII. — Bought of M. Manco in 1829.

1211. — Carpaccio (VITTORE). — Venetian. — St Stephen, preaching in Jerusalem.

At the further end of a public square, on the left, the holy man, standing on a socle decorated with the medallion of a Roman emperor, is preaching; around, him, hearers dressed as Levantines; on the right, a group of seated women. In the background, edifices with minarets, and a hilly landscape.

1,52 m. h.; 1,25 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,65 m. — Acquired in 1812 by an exchange with the Museum of Milan. — Musée Napoléon.

In three quarters profile, to the left; the head facing the front; he stands, pointing out, with his left hand, his viol which lies on a stone pedestal. — On the viol, the painter's monogram.

0,85 m. h.; 0,60 m. br. W. — Half-fig., life-size. — Musée Napoléon III. — Campana coll., 1862.

*1604. — Lionardo da Vinci (SCHOOL OF). — The Virgin with the scales.

Before a grotto, the Virgin, with a blue robe and a gauze veil covering her light hair, is seated, in three quarters profile. She bears on her knees the Child holding a scale which is presented by the Archangel Michael, dressed as a Roman warrior. The mother and child turn to the left and look at little St John, who has a lamb in his arms, and at St Elizabeth, who fondles her son.

0,90 m. h.; 0,69 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,90 m. — Coll. of Louis XIV.

1285. — Gaudenzio Ferrari. — Lombard. — St Paul.

In a room, the Apostle, with a green robe and a red cloak, is seated, in three quarters profile, to the left, before a desk upon which an open book is laid; his head bends backward; his eyes are raised. Through the window, in the left background, the town of Damas and the conversion of the Saint. — Signed and dated, at the bottom of the desk: 1543, GAUDENTIUS.

2 m. h.; 1,47 m. br. W. — Life-size. — Formerly in the church of St Mary-of-the-Angels, Milan; it was looked upon as one of the master's best works. — Musée Napoléon I.

In three quarters profile, on the left, the head facing the front; with a black dress and a white chemisette with ample sleeves; a gauze veil is floating behind her head; on the right, she holds by the hand a child playing with a greyhound.

1,15 m. h.; 0,95 m. br. C. — Knee-piece, life-size. — Engr. by Forster. — Was in the Bevilacqua coll., in Verona. Came to the Louvre under Napoléon I.

*1135. — Giorgione. — Venetian. — The Holy Family.

On the left, before a red drapery, St Joseph and the Virgin, in three quarters profile, to the right, with a red robe, a blue cloak lined with green, and a white veil, present the Child to the kneeling donor. On the right, St Sebastian, tied up to a tree; and in the middle distance, in the central part of the picture, St Catharine looking at the Virgin. Background: a landscape.

1 m. h.; 1,36 m. br. W. — Half-fig.; life-size. — Belonged in turns to the duke of Mantua, Charles I, Jabach and Mazarin, whose heirs sold it to Louis XIV. — Crowe and Cavalcaselle attribute it to Pellegrino da San-Daniele.

A middle-aged man; the body in three quarters profile, to the right; the head, in full light, bare and turning to the left; the tunic and the broad cloak are black; white plaited chemisette; the right hand rests on the hip; the left hand's thumb is thrust in the belt.

1,18 m. h.; 0,96 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — This picture wrongly passed, for a long time, as the portrait of Aretino, whom it does not resemble in the least.

In the middle, at the foot of a tree, Antiope is asleep, her right arm rounded above her head, and bringing on her hip with her left hand the folds of a drapery which Jupiter, under the shape of a satyr, is lifting up on the right. In the foliage of the tree, Cupid shoots an arrow at the master of the gods; on the left, a woman, holding a crown, is seated near a satyr; standing by their sides, a hunter holds dogs in a leash, and a young page plays on the horn. In the background, across a landscape, a hunt.

1,96 m. h.; 3,85 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Baron. — Painted for Philip II, king of Spain; was known by the name of Venus del Pardo. Presented by Philip IV to Charles I, bought by Jabach, then by Mazarin, it was sold by the cardinal's heirs to Louis XIV. It was valued then 10 000 livres tournois. Injured in the fire of the old Louvre, in 1661, spoiled by bad repairs, painted over anew by Antoine Coypel, it was put on new canvas and restored again in 1829.

*1154. — Fra Bartolommeo. — Florentine. — The Holy Family.

Sitting on a throne placed in a hemicycle and above which a green drapery is held up by three angels, the Virgin, wearing a red robe and a blue cloak lined with green, holds on her left the Child crowned with flowers. The latter gives the wedding ring to St Catharine of Sienna, seen from the back, on his left, kneeling, with a russet gown and a veil upon her head. By her side, St Peter, with a blue tunic, blesses her; in the middle distance, St Vincent and St Stephen, whose head only is visible, wear pelisses; on the right a maiden, with a green robe and a red cloak over her shoulders, ascends the steps of the throne; near her, in the middle distance, St Bartholomew and another saint; between the Virgin and this group, in the background, St Dominic and St Francis embrace each other.

On the base of the throne, a book in a red binding and this inscription: ORATE PRO PICTORE MDXI BARTOLOME. FLOREN. OR. PRAE.

2,57 m. h.; 2,18 m. br. — Under life-size. — Engr. by Landon. — Painted in 1511 for the church St Mark, in Florence. The following year, the Seignior bought it for 300 gold ducats and presented it to Jacques Hurault, ambassador of the king of France and bishop of Autun, who gave it to the chapter of the cathedral of Autun. During the Revolution, it was lodged in the Museum of the "Petits-Augustins", whence it came to the Louvre.

*1351. — Lotto (LORENZO). — Venetian. — The Holy Family.

In the centre of a landscape, the Child, lying on a white drapery, holds out his arms to little St John, who comes up, followed by three angels; on the left, the Virgin and St Joseph; on the right St Elizabeth and St Jehoiakim.

*1581. — Titian. — Venetian. — The Pilgrims of Emmaus.

Under an open portico, a table is set up. In the centre, seated between the two pilgrims, Christ, with a grey tunic and a blue cloak thrown over his shoulders, in three quarters profile, to the right, blesses the bread. According to a tradition, the left pilgrim, with a green garment, is the emperor Charles V; the right one, with clasped hands, is cardinal Ximenes. A servant, with bare arms, and a red flat cap on his head, seems to wait for the commands of the guests; opposite, the future king of Spain, Philip II, brings in a dish. Background: a landscape. — Signed: TICIEN.

1,69 m. h.; 2,44 m. br. C. — Under life-size. — Engr. by Masson (Chalc. of the Louvre) and by Chauveau, in 1656. — Painted for the church of the Pregadi, Venice. — Coll. of the duke of Mantua, Charles I of England, Jabach and Louis XIV.

*1418. — Giulio Romano (GIULIO PIPPI, called). — Roman. — The Nativity.

Under a thatched roof, the Virgin and St Joseph are kneeling, in the centre, adoring the Child, wrapped in his swaddling-clothes and looking at the ox. Behind, the shepherds, stooping over their heads; on the left, St Longinus, who pierced with his lance the side of Christ, is standing, clad as a Roman warrior, his body facing the front, his head in three quarters profile; he leans upon his lance, and holds out the vase which contains the Holy Blood; opposite to him, St John in profile, to the left, with a green robe and a red cloak, holds a book and a chalice, out of which comes a snake. In the background, an angel in a cloud announces the Saviour's birth to the shepherds.

In the middle of a grotto bristling with stalactites, the Virgin, in three quarters profile, to the left, is kneeling, dressed in a red robe and a blue cloak lined with yellow. The right hand rests on the shoulder of little St John, who stoops in a praying attitude, on the left, raising his hand to the Child Jesus. This one, in profile, to the left, is seated near a spring and makes the gesture of blessing. Behind Jesus, an angel is kneeling, wrapped up in a red cloak lined with green; with his left hand, he supports the divine Child, and with his right one, the forefinger of which is stretched out, he points at the Virgin, towards whom he turns his face surrounded with curly hair. Far away, bluish peaks.

1,99 m. h.; 1,11 m. br. C. Arch-shaped. — Under life-size. — Engr. by Desnoyers (Chalc. of the Louvre). — From the coll. of François I. It is said to have been painted in the last years of the 15th century. An excellent copy, with a few alterations, which has been regarded as an original, is in the National Gallery, London, since 1880. It adorned the chapel of the Franciscans, in Milan, and was judged to be a copy, in 1796, when it was bought for 30 ducats by the painter Hamilton, who sold it afterwards to the earl of Suffolk.

1916. — Veronese. — Venetian. — *The Disciples of Emmaus.

In the middle of a portico decorated with columns, a table is set up, behind which Christ, in full face, is seated, clad in a pink robe, with a cloak thrown over his shoulders, and his head encircled in a halo of glory; he raises his eyes to the sky and blesses the bread. On his left, a disciple, in profile, to the right, beholds the master; behind, servants bring in dishes; on the right, the other disciple is seated, in face, and turning his head to the left. In the middle distance, the painter's family: himself, wrapped up in a black garment; his wife, with a bright dress, surrounded by her three children: against the frame, his brother Benedetto, in profile, leaning on a column. In the centre of the foreground, two little girls, with curly light hair, play with a big dog. In the left background, the country, and Christ walking on between the two disciples; far away, a town. — Signed: PAOLO VERONESE.

2,90 m. h.; 4,48 m. br. — Life-size. — Engr. by Thomassin and Henriquel-Dupont (Chalc. of the Louvre). — Coll. of Louis XIV. Under the regency of Anna of Austria, this large canvas decorated at first one of the halls in the "Palais-Cardinal" ("Palais-Royal"); then, it was carried to Fontainebleau. At a later time, it was in the king's cabinet, in the Tuileries, opposite to Le Brun's picture, the Tent of Darius (no 551, hall XIV), the dimensions of which are alike.

1579. — Titian. — Venetian. — *The Holy Family.

On the right, the Virgin, with a red robe, a dark green cloak and a white veil, carrying the Child in her arms, leans her elbow on the pillar of an edifice; she turns to the left and looks at St Agnes, kneeling, dressed in a green robe and a red cloak, who presents her with a palm, and at little St John, who comes forward, driving before him a lamb. Background: a landscape; at the feet of the Virgin, a lizard.

1,57 m. h.; 1,60 m. br. C. — Under life-size. — Engr. by Landon. — Coll. of Louis XIV.

1583. — Titian. — Venetian. — The Crowning with Thorns.

Before the door of the proetorium, above which is a bust of Tiberius, at the top of a staircase, Christ, holding the reed in his arms, is seated, in three quarters profile, to the left. His only garment is a scarlet cloak tied in a knot on his breast; the body bends forward; the knees are close to each other; the right leg is stretched out; the head, inclined on the right shoulder, has an expression of pain. On the left, a tormentor, armed with a long staff, drives the crown of thorns in the skull; another tormentor, placed in the middle distance, helps him in that task; on the right, two soldiers, the one bare-headed, the other with a helmet, both in profile, look at Christ, and a third one, kneeling, clad in a coat of mail, is seen from the back, and, turning his head to the right, seems to listen at some one who does not appear. — Signed: TITIANUS F.

3,03 m. h.; 1,80 m. br. W. — Life-size. — Engr. by Massard (Chalc. of the Louvre), Ribault, Landon and Filhol. — This picture, that Titian painted when seventy-six of age, comes from the church of St Mary-of-the-Graces, Milan.

*1578. — Titian. — The Virgin with the Rabbit.

In the middle of a meadow, the Virgin, in three quarters profile, to the left, dressed in a blue robe, carries, in the folds of her blue cloak, a white rabbit, which she fondles with her left hand; on the right, St Catharine holds the Child, who stoops, as if to catch the animal. In the middle distance, on the left, St Joseph, squatting, tends a flock and carries in his arms a black ewe. Background: a landscape. — Signed on the left, upon a stone: TITIANUS F.

0,70 m. h.; 0,84 m. br. — Half-fig. — Engr. by Laugier (Chalc. of the Louvre). — Coll. of Louis XIV.

*1516. — Andrea del Sarto. — Florentine. — The Holy Family.

In the centre, the Virgin, in three quarters profile, turned to the left, is kneeling with the Child in her arms. Behind, St Joseph leans on a staff. On the left, St Elizabeth, in profile; on the right, St John seated on a stone. — Signed: ANDREA DEL SARTO FLORENTINO FACIEBAT, followed by the monogram.

1,08 m. h.; 0,88 m. br. — Oval-shaped. — Under life-size. — Engr. by Jacques Callot.

*1153. — Fra Bartolomeo. — Florentine. — The Annunciation.

The Virgin, seated on a throne placed in a niche between two columns, in three quarters profile, to the left, is dressed in a pink robe and a greenish cloak, and holds a book in her hand. On the left, St Paul, with a green tunic and a red cloak, leaning on his sword, and St John the Baptist bearing a cross, both standing, and St Margaret kneeling, with a robe of very soft colours; on the right, kneeling likewise, the Magdalen, in three quarters profile, to the left, with a red cloak over a green robe, presents a vase of perfumes; behind, St Francis, in profile, to the right, speaks to St Jerome who raises a cross. In the sky, the angel Gabriel and the Holy Ghost. — Signed and dated on a step of the throne, in black letters: Bart^o Floren^s or^{is} pre. 1515.

0,87 m. h.; 0,97 m. br. C. — Half-fig.; under life-size. — Engr. by Filhol and Landon. — Musée Napoléon.

- * 1506. — Raphael Sanzio. — Roman. — Portrait of a young man.

In three quarters profile, to the right, the left arm laid on a stone sill, the head leaning on the right hand; a black flat cap is put on the hair, the long locks of which are falling on the shoulders; the garment is made of a greenish cloth.

0,59 m. h.; 0,44 m. br. W. — Breast-piece; under life-size. — Engr. by Weber (Chalc. of the Louvre), Edelinck, Gondolfi, etc. — The model of this portrait cannot be Raphael, as it was long supposed; the painting is in his third manner and, at that time, towards 1515, the painter was nearly thirty, whilst the model seems hardly to be fifteen years of age. We read in the inventory of Bailly (1709-1710): "A valued picture by Raphael, representing his own likeness. It has been enlarged by 6 1/2 inches in height and 3 1/2 inches in width." — Was formerly in the small gallery of the king at Versailles.

- * 1597. — Vinci (LIONARDO DA). — Florentine. — St John the Baptist.

In three quarters profile, to the right; the head, with long curly hair, slightly bends on the left. The eyes and mouth are smiling. The right arm is raised, pointing at the sky. The left hand presses a cross against the breast, and holds up the folds of a wild beast's skin.

0,69 m. h.; 0,57 m. br. W. — Half-fig.; life-size. — Engr. by Boulenger. — Coll. of François I. — This picture passed from Louis XIII to Charles I, and was bought, after the king of England's death, by the banker Jabach who sold it to cardinal Mazarin. Louis XIV purchased it of his heirs. According to Théophile Gautier, this St John is another portrait of la Gioconda, "more mysterious, more strange, freed from material likeness and showing the soul through the veil of the body".

- * 1505. — Raphael Sanzio. — Roman. — Portrait of Balthazar Castiglione, ambassador and author (1478-1529).

He sits, his body in three quarters profile, to the left, his head facing the front, in full light. He is dressed in a white shirt-front and a black velvet gown, with grey sleeves. He wears, over an embroidered head band, a cap with slashed sides, inclined to the left.

0,62 m. h.; 0,67 m. br. C. — Half-fig.; life-size. — Engr. by John Godefroy and Dubouchet (Chalc. of the Louvre). — This portrait, painted in 1515, represents a familiar friend of Leo X, the celebrated author of the Courtesan, a handbook of the courtier. After the death of Castiglione, it belonged in turns to the duke of Mantua, Charles I, a Dutch amateur named van Asselen, at whose house it was copied by Rubens and Rembrandt, and to Mazarin, whose heirs sold it to Louis XIV. It was estimated then 3000 francs. It has been transported from wood to canvas.

- * 1600. — Vinci (LIONARDO DA). — Florentine. — Portrait, supposed to be that of Lucrezia Crivelli.

In three quarters profile, to the left; before her, a hand-rail. The face slightly bends on the right; the hair is done in smooth bands; on the forehead, a jewel fastened by a piece of black silk plait; round the neck, several coils of a silk cord. The nacarat velvet robe, trimmed with black embroidery, is squarely cut on the breast, and ornamented, on the shoulders, with white bows and yellow slashes.

0,62 m. h.; 0,44 m. br. W. — Breast-piece; life-size. — This is likely the portrait of Lucrezia Crivelli, the mistress of Louis le More, and appears to have been executed in 1483. Bailly, in his inventory, had entered it under the name of Belle Féronnière, not noticing that, at the time when Vinci came to France, Féron's wife was dead.

In three quarters profile, to the left. Red garment, with yellow sleeves and fur collar; round the neck, the Order of St Michael. A medal on a black cap. Background: a landscape, with snowy mountains on the horizon.

0,75 m. h.; 0,52 m. br. W. — Half-fig.; life-size. — Engr. by Thevet. — Ancient coll. Painted towards 1504. — Some critics attribute it to Boltraffio and even to Lionardo da Vinci.

* 1189. — Veronese. — Venetian. — Esther, fainting.

Under a portico, on the left, Assuerus sits on a lofty throne, surrounded by four personages and his dwarf. On the left, Esther, with a rich white Venetian dress, enhanced with gold ornaments, wearing pearls in her light hair and around her neck, is fainting in the arms of two female attendants. In the middle distance, two figures on a balcony.

2 m. h.; 3,10 m. br. C. — Life-size. Engr. by Landon. — Comes from Casa Bonaldi, Venice. Bought of Jabach by Louis XIV. — "It was made 9 inches shorter by folding up the top, and widened by 11 inches" (Inventory, 1709.)

On the left, a young woman, sitting, in profile, to the right, with a green skirt and a chemisette that leaves her left breast uncovered, holds in her hands a glass ball. Opposite, a man, with a serious countenance, bare-headed, clad in an armour, is standing and lays his hand upon the throat of the woman. On the right, Victory and Hymen: the one, crowned with myrtles, is bowing; the other, whose head only is to be seen, lifts up a flower-basket. In the foreground, Cupid holds out arrows.

1,21 m. h.; 1,01 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Thévenin (Chalc. of the Louvre). — Coll. of Louis XIV. — Was executed towards 1533. It is thought that the painter intended to represent the marquis d'Avalos, the generalissimo of Charles V's armies, at the time of his setting off to war against the Turks, his wife, Mary of Aragon, and his son. A letter from the marquis to Aretino, in which he states his wish to have his portrait painted by Titian, along with that of his wife, and that of his child as a Cupid, makes the supposition likely.

right, his head inclined on the left, dressed in black. His right hand rests on the hilt of a dagger; his left arm leans on the base of a pilastre erected in the background.

0,99 m. h.; 0,82 m. br. C. — Half-fig., life-size. — Belonged to marchioness Sanesi; was purchased, in Rome, by cardinal Mazarin. Louis XIV acquired it from the cardinal's estate. Crowe and Cavalcaselle attribute it to Pordenone.

In three quarters profile, to the right; bare-headed; black garment; white plaited collar.

0,61 m. h.; 0,52 m. br. C. — Breast-piece; life-size. — Musée Napoléon. — Purchased at Florence. Baldinucci coll.?

A middle-aged man, bare-headed, with short hair and a red beard, stands, leaning his back against a column, in three quarters profile, to the left, dressed in a black gown with violet sleeves. His right hand, adorned with a ring, holds a letter; his left hand leans on his hip, above the hilt of a sword. On the column, the coat of arms of the del Buono family, of Venice: — Three gold papavers on field of azure. These same arms are repeated on the bezel of the ring, under the letters A. B.

1,09 m. h.; 0,88 m. br. C. — Half-fig.; life-size. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — Was long regarded as the portrait of Andreas Vesalius; but as the armorial bearings, which are to be seen in the treatise of anatomy written by this learned man, consist of his canting arms: three weasels (Flemish: Wesel), this attribution cannot be maintained.

In full face, slightly bending his head on the right shoulder; black garment; black flat cap; white collar.

*1450. — Barocci. — Roman. — The glorified Virgin.

Sitting upon a cloud and crowned by two angels, the Virgin, dressed in a red robe with grey sleeves and a blue cloak, holds in her arms the Child, who stoops to the right and offers a palm-branch to St Lucy, kneeling, with a pink robe and a yellow cloak: in the middle distance, an angel presents the martyr's eyeballs on a dish. On the left, St Antony, in sacerdotal vestments, kneels on one knee, and is intent on reading a holy book.

2,85 m. h.; 2,20 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Musée Napoléon.

*1438. — Bagnacavallo (BARTOLOMEO RAMENGI, called IL). — Bolonese. — The Circumcision.

In a temple decorated with two rows of spiral columns, in the left foreground, the High Priest circumcises Jesus, whom the Virgin holds upright on the altar: in the middle, a maiden steps forward, carrying doves, and St Joseph wraps himself up in a yellow cloak. A great crowd throngs in the temple; on the right, the painter has represented himself in profile, against a column; in the middle distance, the seven-branched candlestick, and, above the door, a coat of arms.

1,22 m. h.; 1,15 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,55. — Engr. by Marie J. Renard. — Purchased at the sale of Superintendent Fouquet by Le Brun, who sold it to king Louis XIV.

*1195. — Veronese. — Venetian. — The Calvary.

On the left, Christ upon the cross, and the two robbers, in profile, are seen in perspective; at the foot of the cross, which the Magdalen embraces, two tormentors, and the Virgin, sinking and supported by St John and a Holy Woman; in the foreground, another woman, wrapped up in a yellow cloak, is moaning; on the horizon, Jerusalem in a valley.

1,02 m. h.; 1,02 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,45 m. — Coll. of Louis XIV.

*1191. — Veronese. — Venetian. — The Holy Family.

In the inside of a palace, on the left, the Virgin, in profile, to the right, wrapped in a blue cloak, presents the Child to a Benedictine nun kneeling before her, and pressing a palm-branch against her breast; on the right, St Joseph is coming, leaning upon a staff. By the Virgin's sides, in the middle distance, on the right, the Magdalen, in a gorgeous dress, carries the hands of Jesus to the lips of the nun, and, on the left, St Elizabeth holds a crown.

0,51 m. h.; 0,43 m. br. C. pasted on wood. — Fig. 0,27. — Engr. by Boutroi. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — Was once in the possession of the count of Brienne.

*1385. — Parmeggiano (FRANCESCO MAZZOLA, called IL). — Lombard. — The Holy Family.

In the middle of a wood, near a brook, the Virgin, in three quarters profile, to the left, is sitting. She holds in her lap the Child, who bends forward to kiss St John, rising out of his cradle, on the right. Behind the Virgin, St Joseph leaning against a rock, and St Elizabeth.

0,42 m. h.; 0,34 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,35. m. — Engr. by Bloemaert, Filhol and Landon. — Coll. of Louis XIV.

On the left, before a thick grove, Susanna sits, naked, in three quarters profile, to the right, between two maids, one of whom is standing and smooths her hair, and the other, kneeling, pares the nails of her right foot; on the right; a basin in which birds are swimming; in the background, near a table, the two old men.

1,67 m. h.; 2,38 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Landon. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — Purchased from marquis d'Hauterive, in 1684.

*1188. — Veronese. — Venetian. — Susanna and the two old men.

On the left, before a basin, Susanna sits, in three quarters profile, to the left, trying to screen with her arms her naked breast; her legs are covered with some yellow cloth; on the right; the two old men, with long Venetian robes; in the background, a circular balustrade.

1,98 m. h.; 1,98 m. br. — Life-size. — Engr. by Smith. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — According to the Inventory of 1709, this picture, then three feet long, has been enlarged in height and width.

* 1514. — Andrea del Sarto. — Florentine. — Charity.

Sitting on a rock, Charity, with a light pink bodice and a turquoise blue robe, bears two children in her lap. She suckles the one that is on the right; the other presents her with a bouquet; at her feet, on the left, a third one is asleep; in the distance, a landscape, and a house before which country folks are talking; in the foreground, a pomegranate and other fruit; on a piece of parchment, we read: ANDREAS SARTUS FLORENTINUS ME PINXIT MDXVIII.

1,85 m. h.; 1,37 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Salmon (Chalc. of the Louvre). — This picture, painted for François I, has been much injured. It was transported from wood to canvas, by Picault; an operation which was new then, and aroused some curiosity. The boards and the painting laid on canvas were exhibited in the Luxembourg Gallery, opened for the first time on the 14th of October 1750. During the Republic, in the year XI, the painting was repaired again and laid on a new canvas. Ancient copies of it are in the Museums of Nantes and Angers.

* 1240. — Pontormo (JACOPO CARUCCI DA). — Florentine. — The Holy Family.

In the centre, Anna, on a cloud, carries in her lap the Virgin and the Child; on the right, St Benedict, and behind him, the good robber bearing the cross; on the left, St Peter and St Sebastian; beneath the feet of the central group, in a medallion, Florentine nobles surround the Captain of the People.

2,28 m. h.; 1,76 m. br. — Life-size. — Musée Napoléon. — Comes from the convent of St Anna, near San Frediano gate, Florence. Mentioned and described by Vasari. This picture had been offered by the "Seigneurie" on the 26th of October 1543, to celebrate the anniversary of the driving out of the tyrant Gualtieri di Brienne, duke of Athens.

The saint, crowned with foliage, girt with a wild beast's skin, is sitting on the trunk of a tree, his body in three quarters profile to the right, his head almost facing the front and looking at the spectator, to whom he points out, with his right hand, a cross that is planted on the right; in his left hand, he holds a streamer with the inscription: ECCE. AGN. Background: a landscape with, in the upper part, two coats of arms.

1,35 m. h.; 1,42 m. br. C. — Under life-size. — This picture, which belonged to the Crown, after being given over to the church of Longpont in 1820, figured at the sale of duke of Maillé, to whose house it had been brought to be repaired. Purchased 59 francs by a merchant, it was claimed back by the State and returned to the Civil List in 1838. — A repetition, with numerous alterations, executed for cardinal Colonna, is in the Tribune of the Museum of Offices, in Florence.

* 1483. — Bronzino (AGNOLO DI COSMO, called IL). — Florentine.
Christ and the Magadalen.

On the left, Christ, with his lombs and soulders half covered by a light and floating drapery, leans on a spade, in three quarters profile, to the right, and appears to the Magdalen, who sinks on her knees, with a blue and green robe. In the middle distance, behind her, two Holy Women are standing. In the background, the tomb, which is kept by two angels, and, on the horizon, in a bluish valley, a town.

2,91 m. h.; 1,95 m. br. W. — Life-size. — Musée Napoléon. — This picture, mentioned by Vasari, was formerly in the church of San Spirito, in Florence.

* 1508. — Raphael. — Roman. — Portraits of men.

Both, in three quarters profile, to the left, are clad in black garments and plaited white shirt-fronts. The one in the foreground, upon whom the other leans, carries in his left hand a sword and, turning to the left, seems to point out something to his friend with his right arm stretched forward; the second fixedly looks right opposite.

0,99 m. h.; 0,83 m. br. C. — Breast-piece; life-size. — Engr. by Audouin and Larmessin. — This picture, entered into the inventory of 1709 as representing Raphael and his fencing master, though there is no motive whatever for such a designation, was attributed successively to Sebastian del Piombo and Pontormo. The latter attribution was maintained by Father Dun and Mariette, who saw there the portraits of Pontormo and Raphael. Under Louis XIV, the canvas was "enlarged by 9 1/2 inches in height, and by eleven inches in width".

* 1470. — Bonifazio. — Venetian. — The Awakening of Lazarus.

In the middle, Christ blesses Martha kneeling on his left, before the group of his disciples: on the right, Mary bows, praying, near the sepulchre, out of which Lazarus rises, supported by two young men; a spectator, accompanied by a woman and a child, beholds the miracle, while stopping up his nose. In the background, a crowd is coming through a landscape bound by a circus of mountains.

1,83 m. h.; 2,82 m. br. C. — Under life-size. — Ancient coll. — Was formerly at Rome, in the church of Saint-Louis-des-Français.

0,82 m. h.; 0,98 m. br. — Half-fig.; life-size. — Purchased 8500 francs in 1889, at the Barlini sale at Milan.

* 1580. — Titian. — Venetian. — The Holy Family.

In a landscape, on the left, the Virgin sits and holds the Child, who tries to slip from her arms, and looks, on the right, at little St John, who presents a lamb to him, and at Joseph, who beholds him in the middle distance. In the background, a peasant drives an ass and an ox.

0,81 m. h.; 1,08 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,38 m. — Bought by Louis XIV at the sale of cardinal Mazarin. It was estimated 1500 francs then. Several repetitions, or copies, are known.

* 1501. — Raphael. — Roman. — St Margaret.

The saint, standing in three quarters profile, slightly to the right, with a blue robe and a red cloak thrown over her right shoulder, the palm of martyrdom in her hand, crushes under her feet the dragon, whose mouth, turned upside, is wide open.

1,78 m. h.; 1,22 m. br. C. — Under life-size. — Engr. by Thomassin, Louis Surugue, Gilles Rousselet, Landon, Desnoyers (Chalc. of the Louvre). — Coll. of François I. — This picture has been much injured. It was one of those that Primaticcio washed and cleaned in 1537. In the next century, on the 27th of november 1683, the painter Geslin received 1400 livres for having "mended" it. It was probably in the 18th century that it was transported from wood to canvas. According to Vasari, the figure of St Margaret, was almost entirely painted by Giulio Pippi, the Roman, after Raphael's drawing". A repetition is in the imperial Museum of Vienna, under the name of Giulio Pippi.

* 1588. — Titian. — Venetian. — François I.

The king, in profile, to the right, is smiling; he wears a black flat cap, trimmed with white feathers; a dark cloak, with fur facings, is thrown over his white and pink doublet. His right hand, in a glove, rests on the hilt of his sword.

1,09 m. h.; 0,80 m. br. C. — Half-fig.; life-size. — Engr. by Massard, Leroux, Soumy (Chalc. of the Louvre). — It is unlikely that Titian executed this portrait from life. There are many repetitions of it. — Coll. of François I.

* 1456. — Bellini (Attributed to GENTILE). — Venetian. — Portraits of men.

Breast-piece. Two men are fronting each other, clad in furred gowns, with black flat caps. The right one, with his face in three quarters profile on the left, wears a blonde head of hair and a reddish fur collar; the other, almost in profile, on the right, is dark haired, and his collar is of white fur, spotted with black. Behind, a dark drapery, on both sides of which a bit of landscape is seen in the background.

0,44 m. h.; 0,63 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Coll. of Louis XIV, where the portraits were given as those of Gentile and Giovanni Bellini; but after comparing them with the medals, it was no longer possible to maintain that designation. MM. Crowe and Cavalcaselle attribute this picture to Cariani, a painter of Bergamo, along with two portraits of the same kind, which are in the Museum of Berlin.

* 1353. — Luini (BERNARDINO). — Lombard. — The Holy Family.

On the left, the Child, entirely naked, stands on a balustrade, in three quarters profile, to the left, turning to the Virgin, on whose shoulder he leans. In the middle distance, on the right St Joseph looks at them.

0,51 m. h.; 0,46 m. br. W. — Half-life-size. — Ancient coll.

She is seated, in three quarters profile, to the left; a purple velvet hat, with broad turned-up brims, is placed backward on her light hair, the locks of which flow around her face and over her shoulders. The purple dress, with long sleeves lined with yellow silk, is cut low; on her breath, a white muslin whimple, embroidered with gold. A wide fur collar is thrown over her shoulders. The left hand drops along the body; the right one is raised and caresses the fur. The figure stands out on a very dark ground, representing the inside of a palace; in the middle, a bit of wall; on the right, a throne supported by two chimæras; on the left, a surbated arch, with a loggia, on the balustrade of which an attendant leans her elbow.

1,20 m. h.; 0,95 m. br. C. — Half-fig., life-size. — Engr. by Chéreau, Leroux et R. Morghen. — Painted about 1518, it was presented by cardinal Bibliena to François I who had it taken to Fontainebleau. It was placed in the Apollo's Gallery under Henri III. According to a correspondence edited by marquis Campori, the preparatory drawing for this portrait had not been executed from life by Raphael himself, but by a pupil of his, whom he had sent to the princess, at Naples. It is even said that the painting is not entirely the work of Raphael's hand. "Raphael only made the head from life, says Vasari, and Giulio Pippi completed the rest."

Amidst clouds, St Mark, wrapped up in a violet cloak and supported by angels, holds a gold crown in his hand. On the earth, three women, richly attired, with the attributes of the theological virtues, lift up their heads skyward, in a praying attitude.

3,30 m. h.; 3,17 m. br. C. — Over life-size. — Musée Napoléon. — This ceiling formerly decorated the Hall of the Compass, in the ducal palace of Venice.

*1190. — Veronese. — Venetian. — The Holy Family.

On a throne, behind which fall black hangings, adorned with gilt flowers, the Virgin sits, in three quarters profile, on the right, holding the Child upright in her lap. On the right, St Catharine of Alexandria, with a gorgeous Venetian dress, is standing, and presents St Benedict, kneeling. On the left, St George, armed with a cuirass, with a spear in his hand, is coming to the throne.

0,90 m. h.; 0,90 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,70 m. — Engr. by Brebiette et Didier (Chalc. of the Louvre). — Was in the coll. of count of Brienne; Louis XIV purchased it.

Seen in full face, the body turned to the right. Dark head-gear and clothes; in the left hand, a graving tool; on a table, to the right, a jewel.

0,69 m. h.; 0,50 m. br. W. — Breast-piece; life-size. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — Supposed, in Villot's catalogue, to be the portrait of Giovanni delle Corniole.

In three quarters profile, to the right. Bare-headed; curly short black hair; long beard. Black clothes.

* 1399. — Palma Vecchio. — Venetian. — The Annunciation to the Shepherds.

In front of a ruin decorated with bas-reliefs, the Virgin, in a red robe and a blue cloak, is sitting in three quarters profile, bending to the right. She holds, in a crib made with woven bark, the Child Jesus, and presents him to a young shepherd, who falls on his knees; St Joseph, sitting by the right side of the Virgin, wrapped up in a chestnut-brown cloak and leaning on a staff, looks at the shepherd with emotion; on the left, wearing a grey dress trimmed with fur, the lady donor is kneeling, her hands clasped; in the ruins, the ox and the ass; afar off, in the fields, shepherds, who look at a group of angels up in the sky, and horsemen guided by a soldier.

1,40 m. h.; 2,10 m. br. C. — Under life-size. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — The two signatures which are seen in the foreground: Titiannus and Ticianno, are false. This picture was bought by the king, on the 13th of February 1685, of one Benoit, and paid, clear of all charges, 2218 livres. " The beauty of the heads, the easy ordering of the figures, the suppleness of the draperies, the brightness of the colours make this picture one of the most beautiful works of the Venetian school. " (TH. GAUTIER.)

* 1673. — Venetian School (16th century). — Portrait of a woman.

In full face, dressed in a red bodice with white slashes; her fair hair is kept on the forehead by a string, which supports the blended letters C A et B I. She holds gloves in her right hand.

0,69 m. h.; 0,63 m. br. W. — Half-fig., life-size.

* 1515. — Andrea del Sarto. — Florentine. — The Holy Family.

On the left, the Virgin, sitting on the ground, in a pink robe, a blue cloak wrapping her legs, in three quarters profile to the right, looks at the Child who climbs up her knees in taking hold of her bodice. On the right, St Elizabeth, clothed in a blue robe, with a white hood on her head and shoulders, kneeling on one knee, holds upright in her arms little St John, in profile, raising the forefinger of his right hand; at her feet, a cross; behind the Virgin, two angels with unfolded wings.

1,44 m. h.; 1,06 m. br. W. — Life-size. — Coll. of François I. This picture has been enlarged, and much injured. " Andrea, having been charged anew to make another picture for the King of France, completed one in a short time, in which he painted a very beautiful figure of Our Lady, and which was immediately forwarded; and the merchants got from it four times more than they had paid for it. " (Vasari.) It is said that, under the shape of the Virgin, the artist represented his wife, Lucrezia del Fede.

* 1242. — Pontormo (after). — The Visitation.

Before the entrance of a temple, at the top of a flight of stairs, the Virgin, in profile to the right, takes the hand of St Elizabeth, who kneels on the left before her, upon the steps. On the left, women, standing or sitting, Zachariah upright, carrying an open book, and St Joseph, pointing at the Virgin with his finger.

2,75 m. h.; 1,68 m. br. W. Arch-shaped. — Under life-size. — Ancient copy of the fresco painted in 1516, in the yard of the church of the Annunziata, in Florence.

- * 1551. — Garofalo (BENVENUTO TISI, called IL). — Ferrarese. — The Holy family.

Before a high balustrade, the Virgin, sitting on a throne, upholds the Child who tries to climb upon St Joseph, kneeling on the left; by her side, St John with a lamb, and in the middle distance, St Elizabeth standing. In the background, a stronghold in a landscape.

0,44 m. h.; 0,32 m. br. W. Arch-shaped. — Fig. 0,32 m. — Musée Napoléon.

- * 1394. — Montagna (BARTOLOMMEO). — Venetian. — Three Children, executing a concert.

The one in the centre, seated on a pedestal, holds a tambourine; the two others, right and left, have a flute. In the background, a marble basement. — Signed: OPUS BARTHOLOMEI MONTAGNA.

0,45 m. h.; 0,69 m. br. W. — Under life-size. — Presented, in 1878, by M. His de la Salle.

- * 1350. — Lorenzo Lotto. — Venetian. — St Jerome.

In a woody landscape, among rocks, S. Jerome, half-naked, sits on his heels, holding a stone, with which he will strike himself. All around him, books. On the left, a lion and an ermite are coming out of a cave. — Signed, in the right foreground, on a rock: LOTVS 1500.

0,58 m. h.; 0,40 m. br. W. — Bought 995 francs in 1857, at the Maret sale.

- * 1602. — Vinci (LIONARDO DA). — Florentine. — Bacchus.

In a wild spot, at the foot of a rock topped with trees, Bacchus, crowned with vine-branches, is sitting in three quarters profile, to the left, the head facing the front, slightly bending on the right shoulder, the legs folded. In the left hand, he carries a thyrsus; the right hand his brought back to the breast and points at something; in the background, a landscape with animals.

1,77 m. h.; 1,15 m. br. C. — Under life-size. Coll. of Louis XIV. — Villot thought that this picture originally represented John the Baptist, and the vine-branches and grapes were added afterwards.

- * 1415. — Albertinelli (MARIOTTO). — Florentine. — Christ appears to the Magdalen.

In the middle, the Magdalen, kneeling in profile, wearing a green robe and a red cloak stretches out her arms on the right, to Christ, who appears to her, upright, in a pink robe and a blue cloak, leaning upon a spade. In the background, a landscape with a town and a river; on the left, Christ coming out of the grave; a group of three figures on the right.

0,57 m. h.; 0,48 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,34 m. — Engr. by Landon. — Coll. of Louis XIV. This picture might have been executed during the partnership of Fra Bartolomeo with Mariotto Albertinelli, between 1509 and 1512.

- * 1553. — Garofalo. — Ferrarese. — The Child Jesus, sleeping.

The Child is asleep in his cradle; in the middle distance, the Virgin, in three quarters profile to the left, lifts up a drapery, to shelter the child's face. In the background, a hilly landscape.

0,52 m. h.; 0,40 m. br. W. — Half-life-size. — Engr. by Landon. — Coll. of Louis XIV.

- * 1420. — Pippi (GIULIO), called THE ROMAN. — Roman. — The Triumph of Titus and Vespasianus.

Both emperors, crowned by a winged Victory, stand upright on a chariot, drawn by four piebald horses, which are coming forward to the right, led by equerries; by their side, a soldier walks, carrying a precious vase. Ahead of the chariot, another soldier drags along by the hair a woman representing Judæa; under a triumphal arch, one sees the seven-branched candlestick, taken away from the temple of Jerusalem.

1,21 m. h.; 1,70 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,60 m. — Engr. by Desplaces and Girardet. — Belonged successively to the duke of Mantua, Charles I, and Jabach, who sold it to Louis XIV.

- * 1414. — Albertinelli (MARIOTTO). — Florentine. — The Virgin and the Child with St Jerome.

In the middle, upright on a pedestal, the Virgin, wrapped up in a blue cloak, in three quarters profile to the left, holds in her arms the Child who bestows blessings. In the right foreground, St Zanoby, wearing rich episcopal vestments, is kneeling, his hands clasped; on the left St Jerome, sunk in the perusal of a book, with a violet cloak over his shoulders; in the right background, a procession coming down a road bordered with buildings; on the left, upon a hill, episodes of St Jerom's life. On the pedestal, under the Temptation in the earthly Paradise, painted grey upon grey, this inscription: MARIOCTI DEBERTINELLIS OPUS. A. D. M. DVI.

1,86 m. h.; 1,76 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Landon. — This picture, ordered by Zanobi del Maestro, and formerly placed in the Holy Trinity's church, at Florence, was brought to Paris in 1813.

- * 1382. — Oggiono (MARCO DA). — Milanese. — The Holy Family.

In the centre, the Child, having a bird in his hands, plays with St John, whom St Elizabeth holds on the left. The Virgin, St Joseph and St Zachariah, are kneeling at prayers. In the background, the stable and three shepherds, raising their eyes to three angels who announce the divine news; on the horizon, bluish mountains.

1,18 m. h.; 0,71 m. br. W. Arch-shaped. — Fig. 0,55 m. — Musée Napoléon. — One of the pictures comprised in the exchange which took place with the Museum of Milan, in 1812. — Was formerly in the church of the Minori Osservanti, at Milan.

* 1387. — Mazzolini. — Ferrarese. — The Holy Family.

The Virgin, in a red robe and a blue cloak, is sitting, in full face, on a stone bench; she holds in her arms the Child, who plays with a monkey, squatting on the right; on the left, St Joseph is standing; on the right and left sides of the bench, two arcades. In the Heavens open, the Father Almighty.

0,35 m. h.; 0,28 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,28 m. — Ancient coll.

* 1232. — Carracci (ANNIBALE). — Bolonese. — Fishing.

In the centre, three persons, in a boat, are busy fishing; farther on, two men drag along a net in the plain; upon the bank, on the left, two sportsmen are sitting; on the right, a peasant offers fish to two ladies attended by two pages. Landscape in the background.

1,36 m. h.; 2,53 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,65 m. — Engr. by Simonneau and Landon. — Coll. of Louis XIV.

1133. — Anselmi. — Lombard. — The Virgin between St John and St Stephen.

The Virgin, holding in her arms the Child, sits upon clouds, in profile to the right, the head facing the front and bending towards the earth, where the two saints are in ecstasy. On the left, St John the Baptist, clad in a fleece; on the right, St Stephen, with a palm-branch in his left hand, and, in his right, an open book that two angels uphold; upon his head is a stone, as a remembrancer of his martyrdom.

1,63 m. h.; 1,23 m. br. W. — Under life-size. — Engr. by Landon. — Musée Napoléon.

1121. — Caravaggio (MICHELANGELO AMERIGHI, called). — Lombard. — The Death of the Virgin.

In the middle, the Virgin, dressed in a long red robe, over which a gray cloak is thrown, lies on her bed, the right hand on her breast, the left arm laid on a cushion. In the foreground, before the bed, a woman is sitting in tears, her head in her hands; around the bed, the apostles, in attitudes of grief. Red hangings in the upper part.

3,69 m. h.; 2,45 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Simon Vallée, Henry Laurent and Claessens. — This picture, executed for the church della Scala in Transtevere, at Rome, did not remain long there, and was removed as being too realistic a painting, "because the painter had imitated in it a woman dead and swollen" (BELLORI). It successively belonged to the duke of Mantua, Charles I and Jabach, who sold it to Louis XIV. This picture, so vigorously true and so singularly powerful, was still much discredited in the 18th century. "The figure of the Virgin is ignoble, says Watelet; one should think one sees a drowned woman, and that work is unworthy of the majesty of a temple."

* 1390. — Mola. — Bolonese. — St John the Baptist, preaching.

On the right, near a clump of trees, on the bank of a brook, St John, wrapped up in a red cloak, is seated, bearing a cross. He turns to his hearers and shows them Christ, who comes forward to the left; in the foreground, a woman, fully lighted, is lying before St John.

1,62 m. h.; 1,23 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,70 m. — Engr. by Pietro Santo Bartoli and Landon. — Belonged to count de Nocé and was bought by Louis XV at the sale of the prince of Carignan. It was valued t en 8000 livres.

* 1218. — Carracci (ANNIBALE). — Bolonese. — The Sleep of the Child Jesus, called the Silence of Carracci.

In the middle, the Virgin, standing behind a table, on which the Child reclines, who leans his head on her mother's shoulder, turns in three quarters profile to the left, and raises the forefinger of her right hand to her mouth to bid little St John keep silent. This one, in profile to the right, bearing a cross, stretches his arms to Jesus.

0,38 m. h.; 0,47 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,35 m. — Engr. by E. Picart (Chalc. of the Louvre), Poilly, Richomme, etc. — Coll. of Louis XV. In his inventory, Bailly says that this picture was painted by Domenichino, from a drawing by Carracci.

* 1233. — Carracci (ANNIBALE). — Bolonese. — Hunting.

In the middle, a huntsman, holding a leash of greyhounds, calls two ladies who come riding from the left, attended by a whipper-in; on the right, servants set up a table; in a woody background, the hunt.

1,36 m. h.; 2,33 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,65 m. — Engr. by Landon. — Coll. of Louis XIV.

* 1408. — Panini. — Lombard. — The Interior of St Peter's church, in Rome.

*126. — Clouet (Attributed to JEHAN), called JEHANNET. — Portrait of François I, king of France (1491-1547),

He is seen in full face, the head in three quarters profile, to the right. Curly, falling mustachio; black hair, a big lock of which covers the ear. Jerkin leaving the neck bare, in white satin, with black velvet stripes, embroidered with gold; slashed sleeves, through which the white shirt appears, bordered with black edging, and bagging on the breast. Black flat cap, braided with pearls and adorned with a curled white feather. Enamelled gold collar, from which the medal of St Michael is hanging. The left hand leans on the hilt of the sword; the right one, on a balustrade decked with green velvet, holds gloves. Red damask hangings in the background.

0,96 m. h.; 0,74 m. br. W. — Breast-piece, life-size. — This portrait, attributed by Father Dan et by Félibien to one of the Clouets, and by M. Denon to Mabuse, was first placed in Fontainebleau, where it was still in 1710. Transferred afterward into the gallery of the kings, when the Museum of Versailles was founded, it was brought to the Louvre in 1848.

*996. — French School of the 14th century. — Christ, dead, is upheld by the Father Almighty and the Virgin.

Christ, naked, in three quarters profile, to the right, crowned with thorns, bleeding from his wounds, is upheld under the arms by the Father Almighty. This one stands, in the middle distance, in full face, with white beard and hair, wrapped up in a blue cloak; on the right, the Virgin, with a blue cloak, in three quarters profile, to the left, supports the son, whom she sadly looks at; near her, St John, wearing a red cloak, leans his head upon his right hand. On the left, five angels, in bright clothes, their wings spread out, are at prayers; one, in the foremost rank, embraces the thigh of the sufferer. Gold ground.

Round-shaped. Diam. 0,64 m. W. — Acquired in 1864. — On the back, the arms of Burgundy.

He is seen in full face, the head in three quarters profile to the left. Brown beard, mustachio and hair. Black velvet flat cap, adorned with pearls, a medallion and a curled white feather. Cherry-coloured jerkin, trimmed with alternate gold and silver cords, perpendicularly fastened to rings which aigulets connect with big pearls. Black cloak, with fur collar and gold and pearl embroidered sleeves. Black belt, embroidered with gold. The left hand, the little finger of which wears a ring, rests on the hilt of the sword. The right hand, open, is brought forward. Evenly coloured dark ground.

0,83 m. h.; 0,58 m. br. C. — Breast-piece, life-size. — Acquired, in 1828, from the Revoil coll. as being a work of Holbein, this picture was then on a panel and was transported on canvas. A similar portrait, attributed to Lionardo da Vinci, is in the coll. of lord Ward, in England.

*998. — French School of the 15th century. — The Deposition.

In the middle, the Virgin, kneeling, in full face, bears in the folds of her blue cloak, Christ's naked body, whose bleeding head is upheld, on the left, by Abbot Guillaume, the prior of Saint Germain-des-Prés, dressed in a rich cope, with a red ground. Between the Virgin and the abbot, a Holy Woman weeping, in her knees, in a black gown and a green cloak; on the right, standing, in three quarters profile to the left, St John, clothed in a red robe and a pink cloak, clasps his hands, and St John of Arimathea, wearing a green robe, a brown turban, and a brown flowered cloak, holds the crown of thorns. In the foreground, the Magdalen, in a white robe and cap, with a red cloak, holds the vase of perfume, with the inscription: LVCIPIO AF; in the left, opposite her, near a skull and a tibia, a holy woman, kneeling, in three quarters profile to the right, wrapped up in a blue cloak, clasps her hands. The last Eucharistical Communion and the Martyrdom of St Denis Areopagite, first bishop of Paris.

In the middle, Christ upon the cross, in three quarters profile to the right, and the Father Almighty surrounded by cherubs. On the left, Christ, clad in a golden garment and a blue cloak, gives the Sacrament to the bishop, whose head passes through the bars of the prison; in the foreground an angel, with unfolded wings, is at prayers, with a censer close to him; on the right, the bishop, wearing a blue and gold cope, on his knees before the block, is beheaded by an executioner who raises his axe; a clerk has just suffered. Another, standing, calmly waits for death. In the middle distance on the right, a group of five bystanders. Gold ground.

1,60 m. h.; 2,08 m. br. C. — Half-life-size. — Presented, in 1863, by M. Frédéric Reiset.

They are kneeling, in three quarters profile, to the left: the father, wears a sword on his side, and has before him a book open on a prayer-stool, with his helmet; behind him, his wife, in a widow's dress: under these two figures, this inscription runs: Ce sont la représentation de nobles personnes Messire Jehan Juvenel des Urssins, chevalier et baron de Trainel, conseiller du Roy et de dame Michelle de Vitry, sa femme et de leurs enfants.

The first of the children is a bishop, clad in a red cope and wearing a mitre; the inscription runs: Révérénd père en Dieu, messire Jehan Juvenel des Urssins, docteur en loys et décrets, en son temps évesque et comte de Beauvais, depuis évesque et duc de Laon, pair de France, conseiller du Roy.

A woman, dressed as a widow, is by the side of a man at arms. The inscription informs us that these are: Jeanne Juvenel des Urssins qui fut conjointe par mariage avec noble homme, maistre Nichola Brulart, conseiller du roi, et messire Loys Juvenel des Urssins, chevalier, conseiller et chambellan du Roy, et Bailly de Troyes.

Two ladies, dressed alike: grey flowered bodice, red skirt and head-gear adorned with precious stones, are side by side; they are: Dame Jehanne des Urssins qui fut conjointe par mariage avecque Pierre de Chailli et damoiselle Eude Juvenel des Urssins qui fut conjointe par mariage à Denis des Mares, escuyer, seigneur de Dove.

Then comes a man at arms: Denis Juvenel des Urssins, escuyer eschanson de Monseigneur Loys, Delphin de Viennois, et duc de Guienne.

A nun: Seur Marie Juvenel des Urssins, religieuse à Poissy.

The chancellor has before him, upon a prayer-stool, a book and his helmet. The inscription bears: Messire Guillaume Juvenel des Urssins, seigneur et baron de Trainel, en son tems conseiller du Roy, bailly de Sens, chancelier de France.

Two men at arms are on his right side: Pierre Juvenel des Urssins, escuyer et Michel Juvenel des Urssins, escuyer et seigneur de La Chapelle en Brye.

The last figure is the archbishop of Rheims, in a red cope, with the mitre, and bearing the crosier : Très révérend Père en Dieu, messire Jacques Juvenel des Ursins, archevesque et duc de Reims, premier Per de France, conseiller du Roy et président en la Chambre des Comptes. The background represents a chapel, with three naves, in front of which a gold-woven drapery is hung half-way.

1,63 m. h. ; 3,50 m. br. W. — Under life-size. — This picture, which had been attributed by Alexandre Lenoir to one of the brothers Bellini, is certainly the work of a French painter of the first part of the 15th century. It is described by Montfaucon in his book on the Monuments of the French monarchy. Placed in St Remi's chapel, which belonged to the Orsini family, in the church Notre-Dame, in Paris, it passed, during the Revolution, into the Museum of the Petits-Augustins, and was given over to the Louvre in 1829.

In three quarters profile, to the right ; on her fair hair a red cap is placed, with a white quilled border, covered over with a black veil, strewn with precious stones. She wears a white whimple and a blue silk bodice, partly hidden by a red gown with fur sleeves. A medal on her breast. Round the neck, a necklace with clasp, and a chain supporting a medallion, where John the Baptist is represented. In her left hand, the thumb of which wears a ring, she holds a streamer on which one reads : DE QVOILQUE NON VEDE YO MY RECORDE. On her right hand, two rings. Gold ground, strewn with pansies, which are also on the frame. Between each flower, the letters E and S are put alternately.

In three quarters profile, to the left; he wears a black flat cap with white feathers, a black jerkin striped with golden twining, white sleeves, a small white ruff, white small-clothes and shoes. A rich necklace, from which hangs a cross studded with gems, falls on his breast. His left hand is laid on the hilt of his sword. His right one, which holds gloves, rests on the back of a red velvet arm-chair. In the background, green hangings, drawn up to the left.

0,32 m. h.; 0,18 m. br. W. — Full-length fig. 0,26 m. — This portrait, along with a life-size repetition, was removed from the Museum of Vienna in 1809, and brought to the Louvre. In 1815, the Museum of Vienna took back only the larger of the two, on which an inscription reads as follows: "Charles VIII, très chrétien, roy de France, en l'âge de XX ans, peinct au vif par Jannet, 1563." It is supposed that these two portraits had been sent to Austria in 1570, at the time of the marriage of the King of France with the daughter of the emperor Maximilian.

* 155. — Cousin (JEAN). — The Last Doom.

In the right foreground, angels, armed with sickles, attend upon the dead, who rise in their graves; in the middle, those who have come to life again, among whom a man wearing a crown, enter into a cave; on the right, devils draw away the reprobates into hell. In the middle distance, an angel, standing, seems to preside over the Resurrection. Groups hurry, on the left, to a circular temple, the entrance of which is guarded by an angel; others are driven to the abyss. On the horizon, a tower is descried, the foot of which bathes in a river, and a ruined town. In the Heavens open, Christ stands on the earthly globe, holding a sickle, with the Virgin by his right side, St John by his left, and surrounded with saints. At his feet, seven angels are sounding trumpets, and, in the middle, an eighth angel bears a cross. In a corner, Joel and Jeremiah; Isaiah and Daniel, in the other.

1,46 m. h.; 1,40 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,20 m. — Engr. by Pierre de Jode. — Musée Napoléon. — This picture, first in the church of the Minims in the Wood of Vincennes, was placed in the vestry-room, after an attempt had been made to rob it. "Jean Cousin shows here a deep knowledge of anatomy and geometrical perspective. The most difficult foreshortenings are attempted with a bold decision, and obtained without effort. The touch, in this piece, is really astonishing, if it be true that this is the beginning of the French school in oil painting." (CHARLES BLANC.)

* 304. — Fréminet (MARTIN). — Mercury bids Æneas forsake Dido.

In a room, on the right, Dido lies upon a bed, in three quarters profile, to the left, her waist wrapped up in some yellow cloth, with pearls in her fair hair, and a little dog at her feet; on the left, dressed as a warrior, Æneas, whose buskin is tied up by a Love, turns to Mercury, who, soaring in the air, orders him to depart; two Loves lift up a drapery, and two female attendants stand in the middle distance, behind the bed.

Right wing. — The queen, dressed in a dark robe trimmed with fur, wears on her head a cornet-shaped black coif.

Diptych, the wings of which are 0,27 m. by 0,13 m. each. — Breast-piece. — According to a tradition, it was given by king René to "sieur" Jean de Matheron, maître rational in the court of Provence; it was kept in this family down to 1872, then disposed of to M. Chazaud and purchased by the Louvre at the latter's sale, in 1891. In a hall a table is set up, behind which a rich tapestry is hanging, bearing on its red border inscriptions in letters of gold. In the middle, facing the front, the bride sits, with a red dress; on the right, her mother and three guests; on the left, the Virgin, with a white veil on her head, her hands clasped, stoops to Christ, seated at the end of the table, between two women. In the middle of the foreground, male and female servants are busy handing round bottles and dishes; on the left, the donor of the picture, dressed as a provost of the Company of the Holy Blood, in a red coat and a fur-lined black cloak; behind him, his young son; on the right, in the same attitude, the lady donor, with a black dress. Without, in a public place, a predicant friar looks into the hall, while a young page ascends a flight of steps and brings in a cake. In the left background, the "place du Saint-Sang", at Bruges.

*2028. — Memling (SCHOOL OF). — Fleming. — A Triptych.

Centre-picture: THE RESURRECTION, beneath a semi-circular arcade, from which hang wreaths that angels uphold; Christ, wrapped in a red cloak, rises from his grave, the stone of which an angel, with unfolded wings, is lifting up; at the foot of the tomb, soldiers are asleep. On the horizon, Mount Golgotha on the left, and Jerusalem on the right.

Right wing: THE ASCENSION: the Apostles and the Virgin, drawn up round a hillock, raise their arms to the sky in which disappears Christ, whose legs only are to be seen. Afar off, the lake of Genesareth.

Left wing: THE MARTYRDOM OF ST SEBASTIAN. He is in a garden, tied up to a tree, in three quarters profile, to the right; at his feet are his clothes; in the middle distance, two tormentors, armed with big bows, shoot arrows at him.

In the foreground, the Magdalen, in a white dress, kneeling, shedding tears, her left hand, still with a glove on, laid on her breast, holds with her right one the leg of the sufferer, whose arm a Holy Woman squeezes, on the left. In the middle distance, St John, in a red robe, supports the Virgin who, wrapped in a blue cloak and wearing a white veil, faints in his arms; in the foreground, a skull, a tibia, and a vase of perfume upon which the other glove of the Magdalen is laid. Gold ground.

2,20 m. h.; 2,14 m. br. W. — Under life-size. — This is the centre-picture of a triptych, the wings of which have disappeared. It was once in a hall of the Jesuit's house in the "rue Saint-Antoine". It was brought to the church of the Val-de-Grâce in 1763, and given to the Louvre under Napoleon I. Some attributed it to Lucas of Leyden, others to Quentin Matsys. It is now entered into the inventories as being the work of the German painter to whom we owe the altar-screen of St Thomas, at Cologne. The frame, having a kind of linch-pin attached to a sort of T, seems to indicate that the donor's patron was St Antony, or that the picture was destined to a church dedicated to this saint. "This picture ought to be considered as the painter's capital work. In no other work of this artist shall we find a better expression of feeling, nor a warmer flesh-colour. The shades, glazed with brown upon a golden ground, give it the appearance of a shrine." (WAAGEN.)

*2721. — Justus of Germany. — German or Fleming. — An altar-screen, in three compartments.

In the centre: THE ANNUNCIATION. On a wood-floored terrace on the left, the Virgin, kneeling near a prayer-stool, with a golden robe and a blue cloak, rises, deeply moved, on hearing the voice of the angel, who flies down to her; on the balustrade of the terrace, a pot of flowers; afar off, the country and the town of Nazareth.

On the left: St BENEDICT, dressed as a monk, and St AUGUSTINE, as a bishop.

On the right: St ANGEL, dressed as a carmelite friar, with a knife planted in his skull; and St STEPHEN, in a deacon's dress, holding a palm; he wears on his head stones as a remembrancer of his martyrdom.

Centre-panel: 1,56 m. h.; 1,07 m. br. W. — Side-panels: 0,98 m. h.; 0,48 m. br. W. — Half-life-size. — These pictures were put together in a same frame, after they had been bought in Italy, by M. Denon, for 240 francs. They had been executed to decorate an oratory in Genoa. "The type of the figures resembles that of the Annunciation that is now at Genoa, and the background is an Italian landscape. This triptych must be by Justus of Germany or some one of his pupils. The Flemish character is not so strongly marked in the side wings, which are not by the same hand as the centre-picture." (CROWE AND CAVALCASELLE.)

Centre picture: Before a drapery worked with gold wire, which hangs from under a stone portico, adorned with marble columns, the Virgin sits, facing the front, the head slightly bent to the right; she is dressed in a blue tunic and a red cloak; a crown, set with precious stones, is laid on her hair the long locks of which flow over her shoulders. She holds on her knees the Child Jesus, in profile, to the left, turning over the pages of a book that she presents to him; in the foreground, on both sides, two seraphs, with many-coloured wings, and dressed in clothes of variable hues, stand, playing, the one on the guitar, the other on the harp.

Right wing: The lady donor is kneeling, in three quarters profile, to the left, clasping her hands; she wears a white-edged black dress, and a black coif covered with a white veil. Behind her, wrapped in a red cloak, St John is standing, and carries a chalice.

The background of the three panels is a green landscape: on the right a stronghold; in the middle, a town in a valley; on the left, a river. At the feet of the husband and wife, their family escutcheons.

On the outside of the wings, on the left, Adam standing, naked; on the right, Eve standing, naked (imitations of the figures by van Eyck on the wings of the Triumph of the Paschal Lamb, which are in the Museum of Brussels).

Centre-picture: 0.97 m. h.; 0.70 m. br. W. — Fig. 0.74 m. — Wings: 0.97 m. h.; 0.31 m. br. W. — Bought 6200 francs in 1890 at the sale of Benito Garriga, of Madrid. The catalogue, after M. A. * 1961. — Van Dyck (ANTHONY). — Fleming. — The Virgin and the Child.

On the left, the Virgin, with a red robe, a blue cloak and a yellow veil, is seated, holding up the Child on her knees; both turn to the left, towards a group formed by the Magdalen, who stoops, drawing up against her breast the folds of a white drapery, king David, in the middle distance, wearing a crown on his white hair, and John the Baptist, leaning upon a staff, with a beast's skin thrown over his shoulders.

1,15 m. h.; 1,57 m. br. C. — Half-fig., life-size. — Engr. by Krahlow and Filhol. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — According to certain critics, the painter had taken as models for David and the Virgin his father and his mother, for the Magdalen his mistress, and he had represented himself in the character of John the Baptist. This picture, placed in 1710 in the king's great apartments, at Versailles, was transferred in 1747 into the "salon d'Apollon". There are two repetitions of it, the one in the Museum of Berlin, the other at sir Thomas Baring's, in London. "The purple glow of the sunset, the clear amber tone of the flesh-colours, the warm harmony of the whole composition might almost suggest to look for the author in the Venetian school, if its attribution was in the least doubtful". 2495. — The Painter's Family (?).

cherries that are held out by one of her sisters seated on the ground near a basket of fruit; in the middle distance, before a young man and a young woman standing, a third daughter, with a flower in her hand, stoops forward; the other two talk together, the one seated, the other standing near a chimney decorated with columns and a bas-relief. All these characters wear dark clothes, except two children, the one of whom has a chesnut-coloured dress, and the other a grey one, with white collars and caps. The floor is strewn with flowers. On the walls hang pictures; a four-posted bed is on the left; in the background, a closed door.

0,70 m. h.; 0,80 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,30. — Engr. by Filhol. — Coll. of Louis XVI. — The old attribution to A. Van Ostade seems to be very questionable, and the designation of the characters is grounded on no proof.

He is standing in three quarters profile, to the right, bare-headed, with grey hair, beard and mustachio, entirely clad in armour; a white scarf is tied up crosswise on the right shoulder; on the breast, the Order of the Holy Ghost. The right hand holds the hilt of the sword; the left one rests on a helmet adorned with a white feather, laid upon a table covered with a red carpet. Hangings of the same colour are drawn up, in the left background; on the right, a pilaster is fitted in the wall.

In three quarters profile, to the left, she is dressed in an open bodice of dark green satin, adorned with embroidery and gold braids; the collar and sleeves are in white gauze. The right hand plays with a gold chain set with gems, four times rolled up round the neck and falling down on the breast; in her fair hair, a diadem of precious stones; a pearl hangs from her ear. On the right, red hangings, drawn up.

0,62 m. h.; 0,47 m. br. W. — Breast-piece, life-size. — Engr. by Filhol. — Musée Napoléon. — Paid 2025 florins in 1776, at the sale of baroness de Boonen, and purchased by the State for 7750 livres in 1793, at the sale of the duke of Choiseul-Praslin. — According to M. Max Rooses, this picture must be the portrait of Suzanne Fourment, the sister-in-law of Rubens, who served him also as a model for the celebrated Straw Hat of the National Gallery and for one of the three Graces in No 436.

2355. — Dou (GERARD). — Dutch. — The Tooth-drawer.

In a closet, lighted by a window on the left, a peasant, dressed in green, is sitting in an arm-chair, in three quarters profile, to the left; a physician, standing behind him, draws out one of his teeth; in the background, upon a table, a skull; at the peasant's feet, his basket, his hat and a staff.

0,32 m. h.; 25 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,18 m. — Engr. by Kesler. — It is believed that the painter has represented Rembrandt's father in the garb of the physician. — Coll. of Louis XIV.

He is seen at his window, in three quarters profile, to the right, dressed in a fur-trimmed crimson gown, with a blue flat cap laid on his long curly air; in his right hand, his pallet and brushes; in the foreground, two wickered bottles and two vases. — Signed on the sill of the window, to the left: G. DOV.

0,29 m. h.; 0,31 m. br. W. Half-fig. — The picture is arched in the top. — Engr. by Oortmann and Filhol. — Ancient coll.

2315. — Berchem. — Dutch. — The Ford.

A herd of oxen cross a ford and go away to the right, driven by three herdsmen with their dogs; in the left foreground, on the bank, one of the herdsmen leaning on a staff, talks with a countrywoman on horseback. In the background, mountains; the sky is cloudy. — Signed, in the water, on the right: BERGHEM: F 1650.

0,32 m. h.; 0,40 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,05 m. — Engr. by Halcck. — Purchased by King Louis XVI, at the de Vaudreuil sale, in 1784.

2597. — Van de Velde (ADRIAEN). — Dutch. — The Herdsman's Family.

2415. — Hooch (PIETER DE). — Dutch. — A Dutch Interior.

0,67 m. h.; 0,77 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,35 m. — Musée Napoléon. — Was bought at the Hague in 1750, at the sale of count de Warsener d'Oopdam, by M. Paillet, and then sold 680 francs in 1787; acquired in 1801, at the sale of M. Claude Tolozan, for 1350 francs.

2625. — Wouwerman (PHILIPS). — Dutch. — Stag Hunting.

On the left, three horsemen and a number of dogs bar the way to the beast, which has thrown itself into the river; in the right, a horsewoman, two hunters and a whipper-in come out of a wood

0,30 m. h.; 0,39 m. br. Copper. — Fig. 0,05 m. — Engr. by Daudet. — Paid 1050 francs in 1744, at the sale of M. Quintin de Lorangère, 6620 livres in 1776 at M. Blondel de Gagny's; and acquired by Louis XVI at the count de Vaudreuil sale, in 1784, for 3000 livres.

*2353. — Dou (GERARD). — Dutch. — A Dutch Housewife.

In the recess of an arched window, a woman, in three quarters profile, to the left, dressed in a red bodice and a white neckerchief and cap, is about to hook on a nail a cock, that she holds by the legs with her right hand; the left hand leans on a copper vase. On the window-sill, a tin coffee-pot is upset near a candlestick; a cage is dangling on the right. — Signed, on the sill: G. DOV, 1650.

0,27 m. h.; 0,20 m. br. W. — Half-fig. — Engr. by Gérard and Filhol. — Coll. of Louis XVI.

*2469. — Mieris (FRANS VAN), THE ELDER. — Dutch. — Portrait of a man.

In three quarters profile, to the right; the bare head seen in face. Black hair, flowing over the shoulders; red cloak with wide folds, white sleeves and silk kerchief; the right hand, leaning on a balustrade, near a white-feathered black flat cap and a flower pot, holds a cane with an ivory knob. On the right, a greyhound looks at his master; and in the middle distance, a little negro, in the shade, is turned in three quarters profile, to the left. A landscape in the background; on the left, a bit of a wall. — Signed, upon the balustrade: F. VAN MIERIS.

*2593. — Van de Velde (ADRIAEN). — Dutch. — The Shore at Scherweningen.

On the beach, comes forward to the right a coach drawn by three pairs of white horses, driven by a postillion and a coachman; on the left, in the middle distance, noblemen on foot, followed by their dogs; on the right, a fisherman walks off, carrying a net, and a man and a woman talk together; an old man, holding a child by the hand, salutes the procession; a boat aground; behind the downs, the steeple of a church. Cloudy sky. — Signed, on the right, upon a piece of wood: A. V. VELDE, F. 1660.

2590. — Ter Borch (GERARD). — Dutch. — A Meeting of Divines.

In a spacious hall, to which light comes through six windows, divines, some in black gowns, others with camails on, are sitting upon benches forming a square, in the middle of which is a table, at which two secretaries are writing. In the background, on raised up seats, the president, and three assessors on each side.

* 2352. — Dou (GERARD). — Dutch. — The Dutch Cook.

Through an archwise opening, one sees in a room a woman cook, in full face, wearing a blue apron, a red bodice and a white neckerchief, who stoops and pours water out into a vase laid upon a stand, near a bundle of carrots, a skimmer, an inkstand and a lantern; on the left, against a glass window, a partridge is hanging by the legs; on a table, a cabbage, a basket and a caldron. On the ceiling is fastened a cage; on the right, a dark curtain, sliding on a rod, is drawn up.

0,35 m. h.; 0,27 m. br. W. — Half-fig. — Engr. by Moitte, Sarabat and Lips. — Sold 1710 florins at the sale of Vasseenaard, in 1750; 9000 livres at M. Randon de Boisset's in 1777; 10 700 livres at M. Poulain's in 1780, when it was bought by Louis XVI. Mentioned by Descamps in the Vie des Peintres.

* 2394. — Van der Helst (BARTHOLOMEUS). — Awarding the prize of Archery.

In a hall, surrounding a table covered with a many-coloured striped carpet, sit the four judges belonging to the Company of the cross-bowmen of Amsterdam, wearing a black dress, a broad brimmed hat of the same colour and a white collar. The one on the left holds a silver-gilt goblet, the lid of which he lifts up; the one in the middle, turns proudly rounds in full face, his legs crossed, his right hand on his hip, and wears a staff with a silver-gilt bird on the top; the third one, in the middle-distance, holds out a collar to which a bird is fastened also; the fourth one, with gloves in his left hand, which rests on his thigh, stretches his right arm forward, and speaks to his colleagues. At his feet, against the table, a slate, upon which are written the names of the prizemen, whom one sees in the right background, armed with bows and arrows; on a shelf against the wall, some Venetian glasses. On the left, in the middle distance, a maid-servant, behind whom red hangings are drawn up, brings in a drinking horn; before her, a spaniel. — Signed, upon the slate: BARTHOLOMEUS VAN DER HELST FECIT. 1653.

* 2350. — Dou (GERARD). — Dutch. — The Village Grocer.

Through an arch, one sees in her shop the merchant, with a violet skirt, blue apron, red bodice, and white neckerchief and cap, standing at her counter, in profile, to the left, engaged putting weights into a scale; before the counter, an old woman, seated, reckons her money, and a young maidservant is standing; in the background, a little boy carries a goblet. On the sill of the window, vegetables and an earthen pot; a wicker basket, containing eggs, is tied up to a nail; on the right, on shelves against the wall, are placed different things, among which a mortar, with the date 1647, a pot where the letters R. F. V. S. are engraved, and a slate, on which one reads: G. Dov.

0,38 m. h.; 0,28 m. br. W. Arch-shaped. — Half-fig. — Was paid 1200 florins at the sale of M. Beuningen, at Amsterdam, in 1716; 7150 florins at M^{me} BACKER's, in Leyden, 1766; 15 500 livres at M. Randon de Boisset's, in 1777, and 16 901 livres at the count of Vaudreuil's, in 1784; and was acquired at the sale of the duke of Praslin, in 1793, for 34 850 livres.

* 2600. — Van de Velde (WILLEM), THE YOUNGER. — Dutch. — Sea-piece.

In the left foreground, a Dutch flag-brigg goes away, her sails swollen by the wind; several fishing boats and a yacht accompany her.

0,34 m. h.; 0,42 m. br. C. — Acquired by the State in 1852, at the sale of baron de Varange, for 11 555 francs. "The execution of this picture is of a wonderful justness. We think we feel the pure and bracing air which blows through the space, rousing the waters in short floods, driving on the light clouds which flee fast through the pale azure of the sky." (E. MICHEL.)

* 2330. — Bol. — Dutch. — Portrait of a Mathematician.

The body is in profile; the head in three quarters profile, to the right, turns to the spectator, to whom he shows, with a copper ruler, a geometrical figure, drawn with chalk on a black board. Black clothes, with a white collar. He wears on his grey hair a black calotte, and leans his right arm upon a stone balustrade, where is the signature: BOL.

* 2601. — Venne (ADRIAEN VAN DE). — Dutch. — Festival given on the occasion of the truce made in 1609 between the archduke Albert of Austria, sovereign of the Low Countries, and the Dutch.

A party of noblemen come forward on a road, bare-headed, gorgeously attired, among whom the archduke Albert, with his hat on, is foremost; he leads a lady by the hand; before them walk a dwarf dressed in red and a man, in blue, who gives his hand to a woman wearing a white and gold-coloured dress. In the right foreground, nine musicians sitting on the grass; at their feet, the cases of their instruments, victuals and a monkey. In the middle distance, under a wood, valets put bottles to cool into a pool of water, horsemen hold their horses by the bridle, and others are fighting; on the left, a Love stands near two doves billing and cooing, a countryman unloads a cart and throws on the ground weapons and flags; in a glade, coaches are waiting; Envy and Fury writhe in the brushwood. In the background, an escort of soldiers, whose spears are seen, and a stronghold with the drawbridge lowered. On the horizon, a town. — Signed, near the Love: A. V. VENNE, fecit, 1616.

0,62 m. h.; 1,12 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,11 m. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — This picture, which was, in 1710, placed in the king's cabinet, at Versailles, was then attributed to Pourbus. It figured under this name in the Luxembourg Exhibition, in 1750.

*2484. — Van der Neer (AERT). — Dutch. — A Dutch Village.

In the middle of the foreground, a road on which two persons are talking together, near felled trees, a wheel and a dog; a countryman, carrying a basket, walks off, and a horseman comes forward, followed by a man on foot. On the left, the paling of a house, amidst trees; on the right, a pool where ducks are swimming, lighted up by the beams of the moon, the disk of which rises on the horizon. In the background, the road, with houses on both sides. — Signed, in the middle, on a bench which surrounds the stem of a tree, with these blended letters: AV. DNER.

0,68 m. h.; 0,61 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,09 m. — Bought 6800 francs in 1852 at the Morny sale.

*2508. — Van Ostade (ISAAC). — Dutch. — A Travellers' halt.

In the middle, on a road, a carriage has stopped, the horse of which is eating out of a manger; close by, a child stoops to take up a pail. On the left, before the door of a hostelry, a man leads his horse to the watering-place; the inn-keeper pours out a glass to a horseman seen from the back, with a yellow garment, and a servant holds by the bridle the horse of a gentleman facing the front, and wearing dark clothes. On the right, a little beggar, followed by three dogs, and, near a thatched cottage, a man, a woman and a child; in the middle distance, a little vehicle drawn by two horses and an ox; on the horizon, the church steeple among the trees. — Signed, on the vat of the watering-place, to the left: ISACK VAN OSTADE.

*2473. — Mieris (WILLEM VAN). — Dutch. — The Soap-bubbles.

Leaning his elbow on the sill of an arched window, the lower part of which is decorated with a bas-relief, a little boy, clad in a brown dress, in three quarters profile, to the left, holds in his raised hand a straw to which sticks a soap-bubble; another bubble flutters in the air. On the left, another boy looks at a bird shut up in a cage, and in the middle distance a woman carries a bunch of grapes; on the right, on the window-sill, a rich carpet, and a shell containing water and soap.

*2536. — Rembrandt van Ryn. — Dutch. — The Angel Raphael leaving Tobiah.

On the right, the angel flies away amidst dark clouds, unfolding his bluish wings, his white tunic in full light; on the left, Tobiah, on the threshold of the house, is prostrate on the ground; by his side, his son, kneeling, clasps his hand in a praying attitude; behind this group, Sara, the wife of young Tobiah, lifts up her eyes to the sky, and Anne, her mother, who had doubted the interference of God, drops her crutch and bows her head.

0,68 m. h.; 0,52 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,25 m. — Engr. by baron Denon, J. de Frey, Malbête, Filhol and Landon. — Ancient coll. — Belonged to the Crown as early as 1734. There is a repetition, or imitation, catalogued by Smith, in which the angel is seen in face. The Albertine coll., in Vienna, possesses a drawing of this composition, from which the painter did, afterward, a celebrated etching.

* 2474. — Mieris (WILLEM VAN). — Dutch. — The Game-monger.

*2157. — Teniers (DAVID), THE YOUNGER. — Fleming. — The Works of Mercy.

In the middle of a landscape, in the foreground, a page gives something to drink to a young mother, who has in her lap a newborn babe and by her side a little child drinking out of a vase. In the middle distance, an old man, standing behind a raised up table, gives bread to beggars who crowd around him; on the left, an aged woman, attended by a man-servant, delivers clothes to paupers in rags, the one of whom is naked to the waist; out of the window of a house, a child looks at this spectacle; on the right, an innkeeper invites two travellers to enter his house; in the background, on the bank of a brook, grave diggers carry a coffin, and in front of a stronghold, a gentleman rescues a prisoner; through an open window, two persons are seen in the dungeon nursing a sick man. — Signed: DAVID TENIERS.

0,56 m. h.; 0,78 m. br. Copper. — Fig. 0,25 m. — Engr. by J.-Ph. Le Bas in 1747, Filhol and Landon. — Ancient coll. — The painter has treated several times the same subject. In 1735, at the sale of M. Schuylenburg of the Hague, a picture entitled Work of Mercy by Teniers, was sold 860 florins; but it is not known whether it was that which is now in the Louvre.

2632. — Wouwerman (PHILIPS). — A military Halt.

In a village, a party of soldiers has stopped; on the right, a manger, in which horses are eating and in front of which a horse is lying; in the middle, a captain leaning upon his cane; on the left, a river, to which horses are led to bathe.

*2356. — Dou (GERARD). — Reading the Bible.

In a room, on the left, before an open window, an old woman, wearing a black dress, and a white cap and neckerchief, is sitting in profile, to the right, and reads the Bible to an old man, seated, in full face; in the middle distance, between the husband and the wife, upon a stool covered with a napkin, a dish of fish; on the right, a press on the top of which is a crucifix, and, on the ground, a copper vase and some onions close to a spinning-wheel. In the background, a ladder and a stove; a cage hangs on the ceiling, and a drapery is laid on a beam.

0,50 m. h.; 0,40 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,15 m. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — Was in 1710, in the upper apartment of the castle of Marly. The figures formerly passed for the portraits of the painter's parents; but M. Emile Michel thinks he identifies in the woman the mother of Rembrandt.

*2317. — Berchem. — Dutch. — The Ferry-boat.

In the foreground, on the river bank, a herd of sundry animals, a countrywoman on a mule, and a shepherd beating an ass which kicks about; in the middle distance, on the river, a ferry-boat, laden with cattle, moves away from the shore; on the opposite bank, where some houses are seen, a flock; in the horizon, a range of mountains.

In the hall of an inn, on the left, a young man, bare-headed and dressed in grey, sits upon a stool, in three quarters profile, to the left, and smokes his pipe; his left hand rests on his knee; his right elbow leans on a table, where a pot of beer, some paper, matches and a coal-pan lie; on the right, in the middle distance, two men, sitting at a table, play at cards, and a third man, standing, looks at them. In the background, a maidservant half-opens a door: on the wall is pasted a print bearing the date 1643. — Signed: D. TENIERS.

In a medallion, the Virgin, with a red robe and a blue cloak, is sitting, in three quarters profile, to the left, holding in her lap the Child Jesus, entirely naked; an angel, on the right, puts on the Virgin's head a crown of roses, and cherubs are fluttering about.

Around the medallion, on a black ground, a wreath of sundry flowers, on which are perched birds, monkeys and lizards.

0,85 m. h.; 0,45 m. br. W. — This seems to be the picture entered under No 249 into the catalogue of the sale which took place after Ruben's death, in 1641.

*2166. — Teniers (DAVID), THE YOUNGER. — Fleming. — The Knife-grinder.

In a landscape, the knife-grinder, in profile, to the left, grinds a knife on a stone placed in a wheel-barrow. He is dressed in a red vest, grey breeches, and a hat with a long feather. On the right, in the middle distance, some houses, in front of which there are trees; two men are talking before a door.

0,42 m. h.; 0,28 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,23 m. — Engr. by Guttemberg and Filhol. — Ancient coll.

*2306. — Backhuysen. — Dutch. — Sea-piece.

On the right, on a headland which projects in the sea, near a tree that has been struck with lightning, a group of three figures are standing, seen from the back; they look at the sea, that the wind rouses and on which fishing boats are sheering off; on the right, a gulf, and, near the shore, a forest. — Signed on the right: L. BACK.

0,46 m. h.; 0,65 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,06 m. — Engr. by Daudet under the title Coup de vent ("a Gale") and by Landon. — Sold 4300 livres at the count of Vaudreuil sale in 1784, it was acquired by Louis XVIII, at the Baudelaire sale, in 1816, for 2500 francs.

2325. — Van Bergen (DIRCK). — Dutch. — Landscape and Animals.

*2389. — Hals (DIRCK). — Dutch. — The rustic Feast.

In a garden, a large party has assembled. Two young pairs are sitting in the foreground; an old man, the flush of blood to his face, with a pipe stuck in the string of his felt hat, drinks the health of his neighbour and says pretty things to her; behind them, a musician, standing, plays on the violin, a maidservant bursts out laughing, and a manservant brings in a dressed-up dish; in the middle distance, a group of three guests. Before the table, a white dog, lying, vases and plates, and a pail in which two bottles are cooling. — Signed upon the pail: DIRCK HALS.

0,69 m. h.; 0,77 m. br. W. — Lans coll. — Bought at the Wilson sale by the journal l'Art, which presented it to the Louvre in 1881. M. Bode considers this picture as the earliest one that is known of this master, and thinks it was painted about 1616.

On the left, the king, on horseback, surrounded by his gentlemen; in the middle, queen Maria Theresa receives the respects of the eschevins kneeling before her coach; one of them, seen from the back, reads an address; on the right, a guard, on a white horse, and a canopy ready for the queen. In the middle distance, the town; on the ramparts and draw-bridge, the crowd, waiting for the passage of the procession.

0,63 m. h.; 0,78 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,30 m. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — This picture probably comes from the castle of Choisy-le-Roi, in which, as M^{lle} de Montpensier relates in her Mémoires, was a cabinet decorated with small pictures executed by van der Meulen, and representing the conquests of the king.

2064. — Neeffs (PIETER) THE ELDER. — Fleming. — Interior of a Church.

In the central nave of a gothic cathedral with three aisles, several people are walking.

On the left, the prince of Wales (afterwards Charles II), in yellow clothes, the right arm leaning against a column, in three quarters profile, to the right, gives his hand to his father, the duke of York (afterwards James II), wearing a white gown and cap. On the right, in three quarters profile to the left, princess Mary, the future wife of William of Orange, wears a low cut white dress and a pearl necklace. A big dog is half lying at the feet of the prince of Wales; behind the children, a drapery with a gold ground is hanging; on the right, a garden.

0.48 m. h.; 0.53 m. br. W. — Fig. 0.35 m. — Engr. by Robert Strange. — Musée Napoléon. — This is the sketch of a picture which is in Kensington Palace. Repetitions are in the Museums of Dresden and Turin.

* 2401. — Van der Heyden (JAN). — Dutch. — View of a village in Holland.

On the left, on a canal, boats lying at anchor and barges, one of which, laden with goods comes alongside the shore; on the right, a nobleman, a lady and countryfolks, leaning on a parapet; by the roadside, several brick houses and a church.

0.45 m. h.; 0.52 m. br. W. — Fig. 0.03 m. — Engr. by Daudet, Filhol and Landon. — Coll. of Louis XVI. — The barges are by Willem van de Velde; the figures, by his brother, Adriaen.

* 2410. — Rubens. — Fleming. — The Triumph of Truth, and the Fatal Sisters spinning the fate of Mary of Medici.

On the left, Time, carrying up Truth, springs forward in the direction of a group formed by Mary of Medici, seated on a throne, and Louis XIII holding out to her mother a locket, as a token of reconciliation; on the right, the Fatal Sisters, sitting on clouds, one above another, spin the fate of the queen. In the upper part, Jupiter, on whose shoulder Juno is leaning.

0.50 m. h.; 0.64 m. br. W. — Fig. 0.20 m. — Purchased in 1839 at the sale of the painter Ary Scheffer. It is the sketch of two compositions, which are described farther, under Nos 2085 and 2105.

2361. — Duck (JACOB)? — Dutch. — The Marauders.

In the middle of a hall, a woman, with a red dress, in three quarters profile, on the right, is kneeling before a hector, wearing brown clothes and a feathered crimson hat, whom she seems to entreat; on the right, a soldier, in a dark garb, is carelessly seated upon a drum, with two companions by his sides; in the middle distance, marauders light their pipes.

0.37 m. h.; 0.50 m. br. W. — Fig. 0.20 m. — Ancient coll. — Formerly in St Martin's abbey, at Tournay. This picture, according to MM. Brédus and Emile Michel, must be attributed to Ter Borch; it reminds one of similar works by this master, which are kept in the Museums of Bremen, Dusseldorf and London. "It is the same execution, both grave and precise, the same deliberate purpose of a clever colourist who excels in bringing out, on the grey hues of the whole, some bolder tones that thrill and chime in together." (E. MICHEL.)

2381. — Van der Hagen (JAN). — Dutch. — Landscape.

In the foreground, two men, one of whom is seated, the other standing, talk together, near a river that countrymen are fording with their herds; on the opposite bank, at the foot of a hill, a farm; on the left, a woody plain, crossed by the river.

*1991. — Franck (FRANS), THE YOUNGER. — Fleming. — The Passion.

In the middle, the Calvary; at the foot of the cross upon which Christ is nailed, the Magdalen is kneeling, at prayers, the Virgin and St John stand, with the Holy Women; on both sides, the two robbers; in the left foreground, the tormentors play at dice for the clothes of the sufferers; on the right, the escort of Roman soldiers.

Round this central subject, eight scenes of the Passion are painted, grey upon grey, and in the corners, the four Evangelists, namely, starting from the top: St Luke, — Christ in the Garden of Olives, — Christ seized by the soldiers, — St Matthew, — Christ before Caiaphas, — Christ before Pilate, — St Mark, — Christ crowned with thorns, — the Scourging of Christ, — St John, — Christ exhibited to the people, — Christ bearing the cross. — Signed, on the left: F. FRANCK, in.

*2568. — Slingelandt (PIETER VAN). — Dutch. — A Dutch Family.

In the middle of a drawing-room, a young woman is sitting, in three quarters profile, to the left, wearing a flowered yellow dress, a red bodice, trimmed with ermine, and a flower in her fair hair; on the right, her young son comes up to her, dressed in a grey garment with pink ribbons, holding in one hand a black hat with pink ribbons, and, with the other, leaning on a cane; on the left, a little girl, with a white dress and hat and a red cloak, brings a nest to her mother, and a man, standing, in three quarters profile, to the right, wrapped up in a dressing gown, and leaning on a table covered with an oriental carpet, takes a letter that a negro servant holds out to him; at the feet of the lady, a dog is lying; behind her, a parrot on a perch; a cage hangs from the ceiling; on the mantle-piece, a small statuette. The further end of the drawing-room is in the dark.

*2039. — Van der Meulen. — Fleming. — The Crossing of the Rhine (12th of June 1672).

On the right, Louis XIV, mounted on a piebald horse, and followed by his escort, points out with his cane the Rhine to an officer on foot, who comes to him; in the middle, a battery fires at the enemy: on the left, the army files off and fords the river.

0,50 m. h.; 1,11 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,28 m. — Engr. by C. Simonneau (Chalc. of the Louvre) and P. Laurent. — See the note, N° 2033, p. 162.

2461. — Metsu. — Dutch. — The Chemist.

2602. — Verkolie (JAN). — Dutch. — A Scene in an Interior.

In a room, near a table covered with a carpet the ground of which is red, a blonde young woman, with a yellow dress and a crimson bodice, in three quarters profile, to the right, gives her breast to a little child who raises himself to look at a little dog; in the middle distance, on the right, a maidservant brings some soup in a silver porringer; on the left, a cradle. — Signed on the floor, to the right: I. VERKOLYE, 1675.

In the public place called the Dam stands, on the left, the town-hall, a four-storied building, decorated with two rows of superposed pilasters, and surmounted, in its centre, with a triangular fronton and a lantern having arched bays. In the left foreground, the house of the Weight, in bricks and woods; in the background, a church and various structures; in the place, a few people are walking. The figures have been painted by Adriaen Van de Velde. — Signed, on the left: J. V. D. HEYDEN, A° 1668.

- * 2160. — Teniers (DAVID), THE YOUNGER. — Fleming. — A Tavern by the side of a river.

On the left, a tavern with a thatched roof upon which a horse's skull has been placed; the hostess comes out of the house, carrying a dish; in front, six countrymen, in different attitudes, talk together; some are standing, the others sitting; on the right, the river, on which fishers are busy pulling up their nets; three other fishers, on the opposite bank, put their fish into a cask; in the middle distance, on a hillock, a stronghold, in front of which a shepherd grazes his sheep. In the middle of the foreground, household utensils, and a stone, upon which is the signature of the painter : D. TENIERS. f.

In three quarters profile, to the left, the head turned to the right. Black garment and flat cap; white tucker; the right hand is laid on the breast; the left hand holds his gloves.

0,63 m. h.; 0,53 m. br. W. — Breast-piece, life-size. — On the ground, one reads a signature added later: A. More. The old inventories attributed this portrait to Holbein. Villot has catalogued it as the work of Nicolas Neufchatel.

2200. — Flemish School of the 15th century. — Christ.

The Saviour is represented in full face, wrapped up in a red cloak, his hands clasped, the crown of thorns laid upon his brown hair; his eyes are full of tears; on his forehead, small drops of blood are running down. Gold ground.

0,38 m. h.; 0,28 m. br. W. — Breast-piece, life-size. — Ancient coll. — This is perhaps the picture which d'Arzenville mentions in his Voyage pittoresque à Paris, as having seen it in the Convent of the Filles-Bleues rue Culture-Sainte-Catherine. A fellow to no 2201.

* 2740. — German or Dutch School of the 16th century. — The Sacrifice of Abraham.

In the foreground, a landscape, where Abraham loads Isaac with the wood for the pyre; on the left, near to an ass, a servant carries a sword, and another holds a wase where the fire is burning. In the middle distance, the patriarch and his son are clambering up a path. On the top of the mountain, near the pyre where Isaac is kneeling, the angel checks Abraham's arm; to a tree the ram is tied up; on the right, in the greenish plain, cattle. Afar off, on the banks of a river, a town.

0,40 m. h.; 0,32 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,13 m. — Ancient coll. — Was attributed to Holbein, and, by the notice of 1841, to Lucas Cranach. But Villot catalogues it more likely as being the work of an unknown painter, probably a Dutch one.

* 2029. — Matsys (QUENTIN). — Fleming. — The Banker and his Wife.

At a table covered with a green carpet, on the left, a banker sits in full face, with a black flat cap and a fur-lined blue gown, weighing gold coins in his gold weights; on the right, his wife, in three quarters profile, to the left, wearing a red dress edged with grey fur, and a chestnut-coloured cap laid on a white hood, holds a missal and stoops to look at her husband. Upon the table, a crystal cup, a black velvet sachet full of pearls, and a round looking-glass, which reflects a man whose bust only is seen, reading near a window. In the background, along the walls, shelves on which are some articles of stationery; at the end of the upper shelf, on the right, a roll of paper on which one reads: QUENTIN MATSYS, Schilder. 1518 or 1519.

0,74 m. h.; 0,68 m. br. W. — Half-fig., under life-size. — Musée Napoléon. — Belonged, in the 17th century to a Dutch merchant named Duarte, then to Peter Stevens, and, at last, to one sieur Marivaux, who sold it to the Louvre, in 1806, for 1800 francs. The master has often repeated the theme with some alterations in the unessential parts. The two most important repetitions are that of Sigmaringen, the property of the prince of Hohenzollern, and that which is dated 1519 and belongs to M. della Faille, in Antwerp.

* 2739. — German School of the 16th century. — The Adoration of the Magi.

On the right, between two pilasters, the Virgin is sitting, in three quarters profile, to the left, with a blue cloak, a flowered robe, and a white veil over her fair hair. She holds in her hands the Child Jesus, who plays with the ring of one of the Magi knelt before him, wearing a gorgeous red garment, trimmed with fur, and a broad collar. In the middle distance, the Moorish king stands in the centre, holding a vase of perfume in hands, and, in the left, the third king, holding in his left hand a fur cap and in his right one a golden vase; among the kings' attendants are three flag-bearers. In the middle, near the Virgin, two bystanders are talking together; in the background, in a public place, horsemen seem to get ready for a tournament; afar off, a strong castle, with a drawbridge. In the sky, two angels and the harbinger star.

1,25 m. h.; 0,71 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,60 m. — Musée Napoléon. — Was first attributed to Holbein the Elder, then, by the notice of 1841, to Holbein the Younger.

* 1997. — Mabuse (JAN GOSSAERT, called JAN OF). — Fleming. — Portrait of Jean Carondelet, Perpetual Chancellor of Flanders (1469-1544).

In three quarters profile, to the right; bare-headed, his hands clasped, with blue clothes and a fur-trimmed grey cloak. This inscription is read on the gilt frame, arched in the top: "REPRÉSEN-TACION DE MESSIRE JEHAN CARONDELET, HAVLT DOYEN DE BESANÇON, EN SON AGE DE 48 A. ” and at the bottom : “ FAIT L’AN 1517. ” Behind the panel is a niche with the Chancellor’s coat of arms, the letters I. C. entwined with strings, and the motto : MATVRA.

0,43 m. h. ; 0,27 m. br. W. — Breast-piece, under life-size. — Coll. of Louis-Philippe.— Bought, together with n° 1998 (page 177), in 1847, of M. J. Bernard, architect at Valenciennes, for 1000 francs.

In an open gallery, the Virgin is kneeling, in three quarters profile, to the left, with the Child in her arms. She is dressed in a blue robe, the bodice of which, cut low, shows the right breast, and she wears on her fair hair a rich gold crown, set with gems; on the right, St Elizabeth, sitting in three quarters profile, to the left, with a fur-lined red robe and a white and black veil, fondles the new-born Child. Before the Virgin is a basket containing some linen and a pair of scissors; behind her, on a table, a vase and an apple. St Joseph, dressed in red, with a broad hat on, holds a vine-plant, and leans his elbow on the balustrade of the gallery. On the right, four angels sing before a music-stand, on which a book is open; in the background, a garden and a gothic structure, under which one sees the Virgin, the Child, and an angel, whom a bystander gazes at.

In a landscape; he is turned in profile to the right, his head in three quarters profile. On his nut-brown hair, which flows in long curls, a red flat cap is laid. He is wrapped up in a black-bordered cloak, and holds a pink in his right hand; the left hand is thrust in his belt. A brook runs through the country; on the farther bank, a fisherman in the midst of trees. Afar off, some houses.

0,54 m. h.; 0,44 m. br. W. — Half-fig., half-life-size. — Ancient coll. — This portrait, which the notices of the Louvre, before that of Villot, mentioned as being the portrait of Garofalo painted by himself, is a Flemish painting, the work of a contemporary of Holbein or Mastys.

* 2738. — School of Cologne in the 16th century (THE MASTER OF THE DEATH OF MARY). — A Picture in three compartments.

1° CENTRE-PICTURE: The Deposition. The Saviour, lying upon a shroud, is turned in three quarters profile, to the left. St John, in a red garb, supports his head; on the left, the Virgin, kneeling, in a blue robe and a white veil, with a Holy Woman by her side, holds in his folded arms the right hand of his son. In the foreground, a monk standing, St Nicholas of Tolentino, in a black gown, introduces the donor of the picture, kneeling in profile, to the right, bare-headed, his hands clasped; on the right, opposite him, the lady donor, also kneeling, in a rich green dress, with fur sleeves, a pink sash, and a white coif, has a missal in her hand; behind her, her patron saint, St Clara, stands, dressed in a green robe with a black hood, carrying a monstrance; the Magdalen, in a green flowered robe, wearing a pink coif on her blonde hair, stoops and holds out her arms; before Christ, on the ground, a large copper pan, with a sponge floating in blood, a skull and bones. In the background, Mount Calvary, the Holy Sepulchre, the walls of Jerusalem; on the right, a river which runs through a plain.

1,43 m. h.; 2,06 m. br. W. — Under life-size.

2° IN THE LOWER PART, UPON THE LEDGE: The Lord's Supper. Behind a table covered with a white cloth on which glasses and dishes are laid, Christ, surrounded by his Disciples; by St Peter's right side, the donor of the picture, his hands clasped; on the left, against the frame, in the garb of a servant who pours out wine, the supposed portrait of the painter himself.

0,43 m. h.; 2,06 m. br. W. — Breast-piece, half-life-size.

3° IN THE UPPER PART, SEMI-CIRCULAR TYMPAN: St Francis receiving the marks on his body. The saint, with a russet gown, is kneeling in a garden, in three quarters profile, to the right, his arms stretched out, his eyes skyward; on the right, friar Leon is sleeping against a rock. In the background, a village near a river, and mountains on the horizon.

0,45 m. h.; 0,46 m. br. W. — Arch-shaped. — Under life-size. — Ancient coll. — Formerly in St-Mary-of-Peace, at Genoa. "The attitudes of the various figures, borrowed from Lionardo, show that the painter had visited Milan. The arrangement of the centre-composition is marked by a more correct style than that of the other works by the same master, with less truth and more nobleness; it is more carefully modelled, but the colouring is not so warm and transparent." (WAAGEN.)

In a room, the Virgin, wrapped in a blue robe, her fair hair flowing over her shoulders, kneeling in three quarters profile, to the right, on a prayer-stool, holding in her left hand a missal, interrupts her prayer to turn to the angel, who is standing in the middle, his blue wings unfolded, dressed in a white robe with a rich dalmatic over it, and holds his hands out. In the right background, a four-posted bed with a red tester, before which hangs from a chain a medallion representing Christ upon a throne. In the middle, a wooden press supporting a ewer, and an open window, through which the country is seen. On the left, before a high chimney, a wooden bench, on which three red cushions are placed; on the ceiling, a six-branched chandelier; in the foreground, on the floor, a lily in a crookery vase.

0,86 m. h. ; 0,92 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,55 m. — Was attributed by the old notices to Lucas of Leyden, and by Villot, to the school of Memling.

On the right, under an octagonal structure supported by columns, a priest, wearing a red garb and a fur flat cap, leaning his elbow against a wooden balustrade, teaches the congregation, the members of which are either kneeling or standing. On the left, a young man, preceded by a dog, comes near a niche where a man, in a green gown, is sitting. In the background, a man walks in a street leading to a cathedral, which reminds one of St Gudule, in Brussels; on the right, against a grated door, left ajar, a child and a beggar.

0,95 m. h. ; 0,68 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,45 m. — Bought of M. de Langeac, in 1822, as a work of Memling; but this attribution is questionable. There is, in the Museum of the Prado, a picture, no 1854, the Wedding of the Virgin, which, by the details of architecture and the expression of the countenances, bears much likeness to this painting.

In three quarters profile, to the right, she stands, wearing a yellow dress and a richly trimmed white cloak, a plaited collar open on the throat, and a black flat cap with a white feather. Her left hand plays with a pearl necklace; her right hand draws back a gauze veil rolled up round her waist. In the background, red hangings, drawn up.

2,47 m. h. ; 1,90 m. br. — Life-size. — Engr. by E. Edelinck (Chalc. of the Louvre). — Coll. of Louis XIII. — Added by Rubens to the portraits which decorated the gallery.

The history of Mary of Medici, by Peter Paulus RUBENS.

In 1620, as Mary of Medici, reconciled with king Louis XIII, intended to have great decorative paintings executed in the gallery of the Luxembourg palace, which would relate the principal events of her life, she applied to Peter Paulus Rubens, acting on the suggestion of baron de Vicq, the ambassador of the archduke Albert. The painter came the following year, and submitted to the queen his sketches, which were accepted; he, then, returned to Antwerp, and set at work, with the help of his numerous and clever pupils. In the month of February 1625, he himself brought to Paris his entire work, which he completed with the portrait of queen as Bellona, and the likenesses of her father, Francis of Medici, and her mother, Jane of Austria, Grand Duchess of Tuscany. The important set was immediately lodged in the Luxembourg, in a gallery lighted by eighteen windows, adjoining the queen's room: between the door and the first window, was placed the Fate of Mary of Medici, and the other compositions filled up the spaces between the windows, in the order in which they are entered into this catalogue. The portrait of the queen had found a place above a mantle-piece, between those of her parents. This gallery having been destroyed, during the second Empire, when the Senate was installed in the Luxembourg, the pictures of Rubens were, then, transferred to the Louvre. « This collection as a whole is shining, superb, gorgeous; it has indeed the state magnificence that the prescribed theme required. Never was the order of a sovereign obeyed better, and, in this master-piece of official painting, the master, through unavoidable common-placeness, darts dazzling flashes. » (T. GAUTIER.)

* 2085. — The Fate of Mary of Medici.

The three Fatal Sisters, seated upon clouds, spin the fate of the queen. In the upper part, Juno lovingly leans on the shoulder of Jupiter, near whom an eagle soars bearing the thunderbolt, and she asks him to be present at the princess's birth.

* 2086. — The Birth of Mary of Medici, in Florence, on the 26th of April 1575.

On the right, in front of an edifice, the goddess Lucina, who presides over births, carrying in her left hand the torch of life, delivers up the small princess into the arms of the city of Florence, represented by a young woman crowned with flowers, wearing a blue dress and a red cloak. In the sky, the Hours strew flowers about; a Love bears a cornucopia, out of which a royal crown and a sceptre show themselves, and, in a halo, the Sagittary is distinguishable, which is the sign of the month of April. In the right foreground, the river Arno is lying close to a tuft of reeds, by the side of the Florentine lion, and, on the left, two Loves support an escutcheon, on which a flower-de-luce is engraved.

3,94 m. h.; 2,95 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by C. Duchamp (Chalc. of the Louvre) and Landon.

* 2087. — The Education of Mary of Medici.

On the left, under a red drapery, the young princess, with a pink robe, writes down in a book which Minerva bears upon her knees; Mercury, touching her with his caduceus, grants her the gift of eloquence; Apollo, playing on the violoncello, inspires her with a taste for music; on the right, the three Graces are standing and one of them presents her with a crown. In the foreground, instruments of music, sculpture and painting; in the background, the fount of Castalia.

3,94 m. h.; 2,95 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by N. Loir (Chalc. of the Louvre) and Landon. — The draperies worn by the Graces have been added afterwards. The sketch of this picture is in the collection of the eighteen sketches of Rubens, for the Medici Gallery, which, after belonging to Abbé de St Ambroise, the chaplain of Mary of Medici, were purchased by a prince of Bavaria, and are now exhibited in the old Pinakothek of Munich. In the set are wanting the sketches of the Fate of Mary of Medici, the Birth, the Marriage at Lyons, the Birth of Louis XIII, the Reconciliation of Louis XIII with his mother; but, on the other hand, the sketch of a subject which was never executed is to be found in it: the Arrest of Mary by her son's order.

* 2088. — Henri IV receives the portrait of Mary of Medici.

The king, clad in a cuirass, is standing in profile, to the left; France, represented by a young woman wearing a helmet, leans on his shoulder. He looks at the portrait of the princess, which is upheld in the air by Love and Hymen; at his feet, two Loves carry his shield and helmet. In heaven, Jupiter and Juno, attended by the eagle and the peacock, seem to wait for the decision of the monarch.

3.94 m. h.; 2.95 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Jean Audran (Chalc. of the Louvre) and Landon. — The sketch is in the Pinakothek of Munich.

* 2089. — The Marriage by proxy of Mary of Medici with Henri IV (October 3^d, 1600).

In the church of Santa Maria del Fiore, at Florence, before the high altar, surmounted with a marble group, cardinal Aldobrandini blesses the princess, on whose finger her uncle, the Grand Duke Fernando, puts by proxy the wedding ring; on the left, Hymen, a torch in his hand, bearing the bride's train, and the ladies of her retinue; on the right, the French master of the horse, Roger de Bellegarde, and marquis de Sillery.

3.94 m. h.; 2.95 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by A. Prouvaire (Chalc. of the Louvre) and Landon. The sketch is in the Pinakothek of Munich.

* 2090. — The landing of Mary of Medici in the harbour of Marseilles (November 3^d, 1600).

In the foreground, Neptune, helped by tritons and naiads, makes fast a galley emblazoned with the arms of the Medicis, in which the Grand Duke is standing; the queen, accompanied by the Duchess of Mantua and the Grand Duchess of Tuscany, is received by France, draped in a cloak adorned with flower-de-luces, and the city of Marseilles, who presents her with a canopy. In the air, Fame heralds the arrival of the queen.

3.94 m. h.; 2.95 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Duchange (Chalc. of the Louvre) and Landon. — The sketch is in the Pinakothek of Munich. — It is known, from a letter written by Rubens to Jean Sauvage and published by M. de Chennevières in the Archives de l'Art français, that the persons who sat for the naiads were two ladies Capain, of the rue du Vertbois, and their niece Louisa. "These three ladies will be a great help to me, he wrote, on account of the magnificent expressions of their faces, but also by their magnificent black hair, such as I can hardly find elsewhere, and again by their stature."

* 2091. — The Wedding of Henri IV with Mary of Medici, carried out in Lyons, on the 10th of December 1600.

In the air, Jupiter and Juno, under the shape of the new married couple, are wedded by Hymen, who points out to them the constellation of Venus; on earth, the city of Lyons, seated on a chariot drawn by lions that Loves drive; afar off, the Rhone, on the banks of which the town of Lyons stands.

3,94 m. h.; 2,95 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by C. Duchange (Chalc. of the Louvre) and Landon.

* 2092. — The Birth of Louis XIII in Fontainebleau, on the 27th of September 1601.

Sitting on a throne, the queen looks at the new-born one, whom Justice, carrying scales, puts into the hands of the genius of Health, whose emblem is a snake rolled up round his arm. Behind the queen, Fortune stands. On the left, Fecundity presents her with the other five children who shall spring from her, in a basket of flowers. In the middle distance, an angel draws up a drapery. In the air, Apollo drives the chariot of the sun.

3,94 m. h.; 2,95 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Benoit Audran (Chalc. of the Louvre) and Landon. — “The head of Mary of Medici, both smiling and doleful, expresses, in an admirable way, the pains of childbirth and the joy at having given a Dauphin to the world. A light rosy flame runs on the sweet pale cheeks of the young mother, and makes her contracted and beaming face one of the wonders of the art of painting.” (T. GAUTIER.)

* 2093. — Henri IV sets out for the war in Germany, and commits to the queen the government of the Kingdom (1610).

Under a portico, in front of a palace, Henri IV, in a warlike attire, hands to Mary of Medici a sphere bearing the arms of France. Between the two sovereigns stands the Dauphin, who looks at his mother and gives her his hand; on the left the king's escort; on the right, two ladies-in-waiting leaning against a balustrade.

3,94 m. h.; 2,95 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by J. Audran (Chalc. of the Louvre) and Landon. — The sketch is in the Pinakothek of Munich.

* 2094. — The Coronation of Mary of Medici (May 15th, 1610).

In the cathedral of St Denis, the queen, kneeling in profile, to the right, before the altar, is crowned by cardinal de Joyeuse attended by his clergy and the two cardinals de Gondi and de Sourdis; by the sides of the queen are the Dauphin and his sister, Henriette. The princess of Conti and the duchess of Montpensier hold the train of the cloak; the duke of Ventadour, seen from the back, carries the sceptre, and chevalier de Vendôme, the hand of justice; on the left, a procession of princesses and noblemen. In the right background, Henri IV in a gallery; in the middle, the ambassadors; in the air, two genii, who pour forth pieces of gold.

3,94 m. h.; 7,27 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by J. Audran (Chalc. of the Louvre) and Landon. — The sketch is in the Pinakothek of Munich.

* 2095. — The Apotheosis of Henri IV; the Regency of Mary of Medici.

On the left, Henri IV, in the garb of a Roman emperor, supported by Time, is received in Olympus, by Jupiter whom the gods surround. On earth, the hydra of Anarchy raises her threatening head; Victory, seated upon a heap of weapons, seems to be sunk in grief, and Bellona, standing in tears, carries a trophy. On the right, in front of a palace, Mary of Medici, dressed in black, sits on a throne, accompanied by Wisdom and Prudence. France, kneeling, holds out to her a glass globe, adorned with flower-de-luces, and Regency comes, flying with hasty wing, to offer her the helm of the State; in the foreground, the nobles take the oath of allegiance.

3,94 m. h. ; 7,27 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by C. Duchange (Chalc. of the Louvre) and Landon. — The sketch is in the Pinakothek of Munich.

* 2096. — The Government of the queen.

On the left, Jupiter, on a throne, surrounded by the gods, bids Juno yoke doves, the emblems of sweetness, to the globe of France, which Peace and Concord shall drive. In the foreground, Apollo, armed with his arrows, Minerva, with her lance, and Mars, whom Venus endeavours to keep back, pursue Discord, Envy, Hatred and Deceit.

3,94 m. h. ; 7,02 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Picart (Chalc. of the Louvre) and Landon. — The sketch is in the Pinakothek of Munich. " It is curious to see how, in this immense composition, Rubens has interpreted in a Flemish fashion the Grecian beauty of the Olympian gods. Their noble forms were too pure and tranquil for his wild brush ; he has stirred up, rounded, inflated them ; he has swollen them with muscles ; but by his colour he has preserved their divinity. This is, indeed, the flesh of the gods, kneaded with ambrosia and nectar, ruddy as kingly purple, white as the snow of Mount Olympus." (Th. GAUTIER.)

* 2097. — The Progress of Mary of Medici to the Ponts-de-Cé
(in Anjou).

On a terre-plein, the queen, in a white dress strewn with flower-de-luces, wearing on her head a helmet adorned with blue feathers and an egret, comes to the right, on a white horse ; behind her walks Might, wrapped up in a red drapery and leaning on a lion. In the sky fly Victory, who crowns the queen, and Fame, who heralds to the world her triumphs over the insurgents. In the background, across the plain, magistrates are coming to make their submission ; on the horizon, a fortified town.

* 2099. — The Bliss of the Regency.

Under a canopy adorned with flowers and fruit, sits, on a throne, the queen, draped in a cloak strewn with flower-de-luces, and bearing in her hands a sceptre and a balance. On the left, Time presents France to her; on the right, Minerva, Abundance and Prosperity distribute medals to four Loves who figure the Fine Arts. In the foreground, on the steps of a staircase, Ignorance, Slander and Envy are in chains.

3,94 m. h.; 2,95 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by B. Picart (Chalc. of the Louvre) and Landon. — The sketch is in the Pinakothek of Munich.

* 2100. — The Majority of Louis XIII.

On the ship of the State, that advances to the right, stands, a hand on the helm, king Louis XIII, to whom the Regent hands the power over; Might, Religion, Good Faith, Justice, whose attributes are represented on escutcheons, put the ship in motion by handling the oars. Near the high mast, France, carrying in one hand a globe with flower-de-luces, brandishes, with the other, a flashing sword; by her side, a woman clews up the sails; in the sky, on the left, two Fames fly on high, and, on the right, the constellations of Castor and Pollux are shining.

* 2458. — Metsu. — Dutch. — The Herb Market, in Amsterdam.

In the left foreground, in a market-place, a servant abuses a herb-woman, seated on the arms of a wheel-barrow where vegetables are heaped up; in the middle, a young nobleman, dressed in red, speaks to a woman wearing a yellow gown and a white apron and hood, with her arm passed through the handle of a vase in metal; on the right a dog barks at a cock, perched on a wicker cage, near a hen and a basket of vegetables. In the middle distance, under a spreading tree, a peasant carries a wicker cage, a servant haggles for a hare with a woman seated in a stall; a man, in black clothes and hat, walks about, and a Turk gives money to a woman who pours him out a glass of spirits. Afar off, a canal flows, the other bank of which is bordered with brick houses. — Signed on a scrap of paper, to the right: METSU.

0,25 m. h.; 0,82 m. br. C. — Fig. 0.20 m. — Engr. by David and Filhol. — Bought 18 051 francs in 1783, at an anonymous sale, probably that of Bazincourt, who possessed a picture by the same painter representing the same subject. Previously, it had been bought 25 000 francs in 1770, at the Blondel de Gagny sale, and 28 000 francs in 1777, at the sale of M^{me} Geoffrin.

* 2538. — Rembrandt van Ryn. — St Matthew, the Evangelist.

In three quarters profile, to the right; he is sitting at a table, with a chestnut-brown great coat and a turban; he carries his left hand to his grizzled beard, and writes with the right one on a volume open before him; an angel, leaning on his shoulder, to the left, whispers in his ear. — Signed on the ground, to the right : REMBRANDT, f. 1661.

* 2404. — Hobbema (MEINDERT). — Dutch. — The Water-mill.

In the foreground, two spreading trees shade the bank of a river which flows to the right; in the middle distance, thatched cottages and two mills; in front of the left one, two men, accompanied by a dog, talk together; in front of the other, a cart has stopped. Afar off, a clump of trees. — Signed : M. HOBEBEMA.

0,80 m. h.; 0,65 m. br. C. — Engr. by Milius (Chalc. of the Louvre). — Acquired by the State in 1861, at the baron of Mecklenbourg sale. It had been in turns in the collections of Coelers, of Amsterdam, Buchanan, Watson, Taylor. There is, in the coll. of baron Alphonse de Rothschild, a repetition of this picture, enlarged in breadth, with the trees of the foreground and the grounds alike, but in which the sluice is seen in face. "In the Mill of the Louvre, notwithstanding the intricacy of the details, the general aspect is full of force and simplicity. The painter has multiplied the grounds and let the light merrily play about in the gaps, between the trees. All that is freely executed, in bold impasto, with spirit, without hesitation or fatigue." (E. MICHEL.)

In the foreground, Louis XIV and his attendants pursue through the rocks a stag, behind which a pack of dogs run; in the plain, the coaches of the king and horsemen have stopped; in the background, the buildings of the castle; on the horizon, the forest.

1,90 m. h.; 3,35 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,33 m. — Engr. by Beaudoin (Chalc. of the Louvre). — Coll. of Louis XIV.

2145. — Snyder (FRANS). — Fleming. — Fish-mongers.

On the left, a young man pours eels out of a copper pail into a tub; in the middle, in front of a stall, various kinds of fish are heaped upon a wooden table; on the left, a merchant, a chopper in his hand, cuts up a salmon; in the foreground, a tortoise, a live seal, a large copper pan, and oysters in a box. In the left background, a tower on the sea-side, and boats lying at anchor.

2,46 m. h.; 3,40 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Ancient coll. — Formerly attributed to Paul de Vos, the picture had been cut into two fragments, that were re-united in 1840. A similar composition is to be seen in the Museum of the Hermitage, which had figured in the Houghton coll., and been engraved by Richard Earlom.

* 2341. — Cuyp (ALBERT). — Fleming. — Landscape.

In the right foreground, a herd of cows in a meadow; on the left, children, standing close to a dog, listen to a shepherd, seated on a stone, who blows in a pipe; in the middle distance, a river; on the opposite bank, some mills, and a town which is commanded by a steeple; to the right, on the slope of a mountain, a flock and three shepherds. — Signed: A. CUYP.

1,71 m. h.; 2,29 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,60 m. — Coll. of Louis XVI. — “Grouped in an admirable way, this picture is truer than any other by Cuypp, as far as the shape and colouring of the animals are concerned, while the light keeps its usual sweetness and power.” (WAAGEN.)

* 1974. — Van Dyck (ANTHONY). — Fleming. — Portrait of a lady with her Daughter.

In the middle of a gallery, a lady, in three quarters profile, to the right, is sitting in an arm-chair with a red back; she is dressed in a black gown, with lace sleeves and collar, and she wears a pearl necklace: on her breast, a gold cross and chain. Jewels are interspersed in her chestnut-coloured hair; her hands, adorned with rings, rest on the arms of the chair. On the right, in three quarters profile, to the left, stands a blonde little girl, in a blue skirt bordered with gold braid and a white dress. In the background, yellow hangings are fastened between two columns.

2,04 m. h.; 1,35 m. br. C. — Full-length fig., life-size. — Engr. by Henriquel-Dupont. Coll. of Louis XIV. Was at Versailles in 1710, in the cabinet of pictures, under the name Portrait de la Femme de Rubens. The inventory of the Empire had this note: It is believed that it is the wife of the brother of Rubens. These are mere conjectures. The fellow of no 1974.

* 2343. — Cuypp (ALBERT). — Dutch. — Riding out.

Three horsemen pass by the skirt of a wood; one in profile, the head in three quarters profile, to the right, mounted on a dapple-grey horse, wears blue clothes and a white turban: the one on the right comes forward in full face, dressed in a black velvet garment with golden frogs and seams, and looks as if addressing his companion. In the middle distance, on the left, a page, dressed in red, receives a partridge from a game-keeper followed by dogs; on the right, in the plain, a herd of cows; on the horizon, at the foot of a hill, horses whose riders are standing near some buildings, and a tower in ruins.

1,17 m. h.; 1,82 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,55 m. — Engr. by Lavalé and Filhol. — Purchased by the Crown for 5000 livres in 1786, at the sale of M. Clermont d'Amboise, who had acquired it in 1783 from M. Linden van Slingelandt for 602 florins. According to the inventories of the Empire and Restoration, the horseman on the dapple-grey horse is a prince of the House of Orange.

* 1928. — Philippe de Champaigne. — Fleming. — The Lord's Supper.

In a room lighted by a low window, Christ, dressed in a pink robe and a blue cloak, is sitting in full face at a table covered with a white cloth, and surrounded by his disciples; he raises his eyes to the sky and is about to sanctify the bread; in the foreground, a ewer is placed on the floor.

0,58 m. h.; 2,33 m. br. C. — Under life-size. — Engr. by Abraham Girardot, Filhol and Landon. — It has been alleged that the painter had represented here, under the figures of the apostles, the principal solitaries of Port-Royal; no author mentions this peculiarity. This picture, painted in 1648, decorated, before the Revolution, the altar of the convent of the Cistercian nuns of Port-Royal, in the faubourg St Jacques, at Paris. There are two repetitions of it. The one, bought 2390 livres in 1777, at the prince of Conti sale, had been placed in the chapel of the Chamber of Peers in the Luxembourg; the other is in the Museum of Lyons.

* 2013. — Jordaens. — Fleming. — The Infancy of Jupiter.

In the middle of a landscape, a woman, squatting on a red drape, in three quarters profile, to the right, the head in full face, milks a goat; on the left, Jupiter, crying, holds out to her a small phial; on the right, near a heap of vegetables, a satyr, in profile, to the left, carries a bunch of grapes.

1,50 m. h.; 2,03 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Bolswert and Filhol. — Coll. of Louis XVIII. This is one of the pictures bought 100 000 francs, in 1817, of M. Quatresols de la Hante.

* 2076. — Rubens. — Fleming. — The Prophet Elisha helped by an Angel.

At the entrance of a cave, the Prophet, in profile to the left, dressed in the skin of a beast and a coarse cloak, receives a loaf and a glass, which are brought to him by an angel, in three quarters profile, to the right, wrapped in a yellow cloth, his wings spread out; in the left background, a bluish landscape. This picture figures a tapestry hung between two spiral columns, an entablature and a frieze.

4,71 m. h.; 4,13 m. br. C. — Over life-size. — Engr. by Landon and etched by Pannels. — Coll. of Louis XVIII. Purchased 60 000 fr. at the same time as no 2083, page 196, of general Sebastiani, who had brought them from Spain. These two pictures were parts of a set of nine compositions painted for Philip IV of Spain, and destined to be reproduced in tapestry-work. Four of them were taken to England and acquired by the earl of Grosvenor for 10 000 guineas.

* 2342. — Cuyp (ALBERT). — Dutch. — Starting for a ride.

On the left, before a house adorned with climbing plants, a horseman, on a dapple-grey horse, in profile, to the right, wearing a red garment with gold on the seams, and a red-feathered black flat cap, from under which his fair hair flows out, a whip in his hand, bends his head and seems to speak to an attendant, dressed in green, with a sword on his side, who presents the stirrup to him with one hand, and, with the other, holds the bridle of the horse. On the left, in the middle distance, another horseman comes forward, in full face, on a bay horse, dressed in black garment with gilt frogs and a black flat cap: on the right, two dogs are lying; in the background, two shepherds in front of a thatched cottage and a flock.

1,19 m. h.; 1,52 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,55 m. — Engr. by Lavalé and Filhol. — Bought 607 florins by Louis XVI, in 1785, at the Linden van Slingelandt sale.

2014. — Jordaens. — Fleming. — The King drinks.

In a hall, a family keep the Twelfth-Night round a plentifully spread table; on the left, the father, seated in an arm-chair, in three quarters profile, to the right, carries a glass to his mouth, and a servant pours out wine to a guest; in the foreground, a young woman, with a blue dress, a red bodice and a white neckerchief, seen from the back, turns her head to the right, and fondles a greyhound. In the middle distance, a man leans on the shoulder of a woman richly dressed, near whom a little girl is standing. At the farther end of the table, stand an old woman and a young man who opens his mouth; a maidservant is about to lay a dish on the table.

1,52 m. h.; 2,08 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Kruger and Landon. — This picture which had belonged to M. Fizeau of Amsterdam, was acquired by the Crown at the Lebrun sale, in 1791.

At the top of a staircase, before a door, a brown man, still young, stands, bare-headed, in three quarters profile, to the left. He is dressed in a black garment with a broad godrooned ruff and lace-bordered white sleeves, drawing up with his left hand the folds of his cloak; the fourth finger of his right hand wears a ring. On the left, a blonde little girl, in a yellow skirt and a long black gown with golden stripes, holding in her hands a white drapery, raises her head as if to listen to her father; in the background, a gallery and a column.

The president is standing in three quarters profile, to the right, bare-headed, with fair beard, mustachio and hair. He is dressed in a black garment, over which a fur-lined cloak is thrown, and he wears a quilled ruff; he holds a book in his left hand: his right hand leans on the shoulder of his son, standing in the left foreground, in full face, wearing a gilt-edged white garment, the right hand on his hip. In the background, a gallery, a bit of a wall, a drapery, drawn up; on the horizon, a landscape.

1,10 m. h.; 0,75 m. br. W. — Half-fig., life-size. — Engr. by Massard, the father. — This portrait cannot have been executed from life, as Van Dyck had not yet been born when Richardot was forty five, which is the age indicated by the model. — The attribution to Rubens, given by the old notices, is likewise unsatisfactory, for, at this time, the painter was hardly ten years old. We must, then, suppose that this figure was painted from a drawing. Such critics as Descamps and d'Angerville mention it as being by Van Dyck; it was under this name that it was sold 9200 livres in 1768, at the Caignat sale, 40 400 livres in 1777 at the sale of Randon de Boisset, and bought 160 001 livres for the Crown, in 1784, at the sale of count de Vaudreuil.

* 2323. — Berchem. — Dutch. — Landscape and Animals.

In the middle of a glade, a man, in an Eastern costume, and a richly dressed woman are sitting on the ground; close by them, a countrywoman, standing, accompanied by a dog, looks at them, and two children play with another dog; on the left, shepherds and animals; on the right, a clump of trees; on the horizon, the country. — Signed: C. BERGHEM, 1665.

1,67 m. h.; 1,39 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,30 m. — The letter C, which figures in the signature of the painter, is the first letter of the word Claas, the abbreviation of Nicholas. Bought 4000 francs in 1816, at the sale of M^{me} Rivière.

2582. — Steenwiyck (H. VAN) or Steinwiyck, THE YOUNGER. — Dutch. — Interior of a church.

In the middle, numerous worshippers; at the farther end of the nave, before the high altar, a rood-loft. Right and left, side chapels, separated by pillars; in the first one, on the left, a sexton shows visitors a pictures, the wings of which are opened. — Signed, on the first pillar, left side: H. V. STEINWEYCK, 1608.

 1970. — Van Dyck (ANTHONY). — Fleming. — *Portrait of Isabella Clara Eugenia of Austria, Infanta of Spain, sovereign of the Low Countries (1566-1633).

In three quarters profile, to the left, in the dress of the nuns of St Clara, a sisterhood to which she belonged after her husband's death: grey gown, white whimple, a knotted cord as a girdle, and a black mantle, a lappet of which is held back by her hands clasped on the girdle; on the left, red hangings, drawn up.

1,17 m. h.; 0,90 m. br. C. — Half-fig., life-size. — Engr. by Lucas Vosterman, Bouts, etc. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — Was placed, in 1710, in the gallery of pictures, at Versailles. There are repetitions of it at Parma, Turin, Vienna, and in England.

 1927. — Philippe de Champaigne. — Fleming. — *The Feast at Simon the Pharisee's.

In a large hall, a lavishly spread table is set up, around which the guests are lying on beds; on the left, Christ, in a pink robe and a blue cloak, in profile, to the right, shows to the master of the house, who sits opposite, the Magdalen, prostrate, who wipes his foot with her loose hair. Those present seem to entreat, in behalf of the sinner woman, the Pharisee, near whom a young man stands, who puts his finger on his mouth. In the middle of the foreground, a copper perfuming-pan on a stool. In the background, a portico decorated with a frieze.

2,92 m. h.; 3,99 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Musée Napoléon. — This seems to be the picture that the painter executed, by order of the queen Anne of Austria, for the monastery of the Val-de-Grâce. Both Lenoir and Guillet de Saint-Georges mention it.

 2112. — Rubens. — *Portrait of Elisabeth of France, daughter of Henri IV, queen of Philip IV, King of Spain (1602-1644).

She sits in a red arm-chair, on the right, in three quarters profile, to the left, wearing a blue skirt and bodice, embroidered with gold, and a black satin dress, cut low in front; the sleeves are slashed and ending in muslin cuffs; the broad ruff is in the same material. Round the neck and in her fair hair, strings of pearls; the two hands rest on the knees, and, in the right one, she holds a bundle of flowers. A red curtain is drawn up and gives a sight of a palace hall, richly decorated, in the middle of which stands a portico supported by four Corinthian columns.

1,06 m. h.; 0,93 m. br. W. — Half-fig., life-size. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — Two repetitions of this portrait are extant; the one was formerly possessed by an amateur of Haarlem, M. Hoffmann, the other by the duke of Marlborough.

* 2388. — Hals (FRANS). — Dutch. — Portraits of the van Beresteyn family, of Haarlem.

In a garden, on the left, the father, wrapped up in a black cloak, wearing a broad-brimmed hat, is seated on a stool, in three quarters profile, to the right. His wife, dressed in a violet skirt, a yellow bodice, a black cloak with a broad ruff and a white coif, sitting on the grass, leans on her husband, towards whom she turns her head; in the middle, a little girl, with a black dress, offers a flower to her parents, and, in the middle distance, a child tries to reach to cherries that a servant-girl, clothed in red, is busy culling; on the right, four children, in light-coloured clothes, surround a woman, kneeling, who plays with a bird.

1,67 m. h.; 2,41 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Bought in 1884, at Haarlem, together with nos 2387 and 2388, for 100 000 francs, this picture had undergone awkward repairs. The last little girl on the right must have been added afterwards, and does not seem to be painted by the same hand. — It results from the perusal of the registers of the "Béguinage" of Haarlem, that the persons who figure here are the parents of the founder of that house. The two children who accompany them, are Nicholas and her sister Emerentia, whose portrait, of a posterior date, was paid 240 000 francs, and is at Francfort, in the Rothschild gallery. From the age of the children, it may be supposed that the picture was executed in 1620. It belongs, therefore, to the master's first manner. All the pictures mentioned here have been replaced by copies, of a later date, in the parlour of the van Beresteyn hospital.

* 2332. — Both (JAN). — Dutch. — Landscape.

In the middle, a peasant, leading a lady mounted on a mule, stops to talk with a man sitting by the roadside; on the left, a horseman and a man on foot, holding a horse by the bridle, have just crossed a wooden bridge, thrown over a river, which forms a waterfall; in the middle distance, high woody mountains; on the right, the plain, lighted up by the setting sun. — Signed, in the centre, on the rock on which the man is seated: J. BOTH.

1,56 m. h.; 2,11 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,18 m. — Engr. by Duthenoyer and Filhol. — The figures are by Andries Both, Jan's brother. — Coll. of Louis XVI.

* 1971. — Van Dyck (ANTHONY). — Equestrian portrait of Francis of Moncade, marquis of Aytona, generalissimo of the Spanish forces in the Low Countries (1586-1635).

He comes forward, mounted on a white horse, in three quarters profile, bare-headed, clad in armour with a broad white collar; in his right hand, he carries the staff of command; round his left arm a red scarf is tied up. Landscape in the background.

3,07 m. h.; 2,42 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Raphael Morghen, Vesterman and Filhol. — Musée Napoléon. — "The composition, drawing, light, depth and transparency of the warm colouring, the genial and bold touch, everything contributes to make this equestrian portrait the finest one that Van Dyck has ever painted, and I have no hesitation in pronouncing it one of the finest that exist." (WAAGEN.)

2522. — Poelenburg (CORNELIS). — Dutch. — View of Mount Palatine, in Rome.

In the middle, a herdsman, accompanied by a dog, speaks to a Portrait of a maiden.

In three quarters profile, to the left, she leans her elbow on the sill of a window, the shutter of which she is about to close ; she wears a blue dress, embroidered with gold ; on her fair hair is put a cap adorned with pearls ; round the neck, a rich necklace ; in the bodice, a flower. The right hand wears a glove and holds the other glove. The left hand is thrust in the ring of the shutter. — Signed : JAN VICTOOR, F. 1640.

*2016. — Jordaens. — Fleming. — Portrait of admiral Ruyter (1607-1676).

0,94 m. h.; 0,73 m. br. C. — Breast-piece, life-size. — One of the pictures paid 20 000 francs by the Crown, in 1824, at the Manco sale.

2083. — Rubens. — Fleming. — The Triumph of Religion.

On a gold chariot, drawn to the left by two angels and pushed by two genii, are placed, with a sphere between them, in the foreground, Faith, standing, dressed in a red robe, raising a chalice in her right hand; and, behind Religion, kneeling, her breast naked, the lower part of the body covered with a blue drapery, and leaning on the cross. Two angels fly in the air, carrying the crown of thorns and the nails. On the right, are walking, in profile, to the left, a man holding a sphere, an old man leaning on a staff, and a woman with six nipples, figuring Nature; behind this group. Asia and Africa, represented by a negro and a copper-coloured man. In the sky, angels fly, one of whom holds a lit up torch. This picture seems to be fitted in, under a portico, two columns of which are to be seen, supporting a frieze and laid on a basement; in the middle of the frieze, a scroll, on which two angels are hanging, bears the words FIDES CATHOLICA. In the centre of the basement, two sphinxes with woman's heads and fish-shaped bodies; on both sides, a brazier in which burns a heart.

In a garden walk, on the left, near a marble vase adorned with a bas-relief representing the rape of the Sabines, are heaped up heads of game, a hare, a peacock, a pheasant, partridges; on the right, a dog lays his paw on a gun and a powder-horn; afar off, a clump of trees; birds are flying in the air. — Signed, on the vase: J. WEENIX. F. 1696.

1,46 m. h.; 1,86 m. br. C. — Bought 5971 francs, in the year IX, at a sale, made by MM. Paillet and Coelers.

*2543. — Rembrandt van Ryn. — Venus and Love.

A brown-haired woman, bare-headed, in three quarters profile, to the right, wearing a dark green dress, an unhooked chemisette, a necklace and earrings, fondles a small Love, standing on her knees, his wings spread out, and wrapped in grey cloth.

1,40 m. h.; 0,88 m. br. C. — Half-fig., life-size. — Ancient coll. — M. Bode thinks he knows here the likenesses of Hendrickje Stoffels and her daughter Cornelia. "While acknowledging Rembrandt's inability to deal with mythological subjects, and in taking this image only as a representation of maternal love, we must admire here the expression of this mother, the fondness with which she cheers up her child, and the deep affection which binds these two, who have nothing to do with the Fable." (E. MICHEL.)

In three quarters profile, to the right; bare-headed; the curls of his brown hair flowing over his shoulders; he wears rather thin mustachio and a tuft of beard; he is dressed in a black garment with white cuffs and collar.

Randon de Boisset's, and 13 000 livres in 1784, at count de Vaudreuil's, for the Crown.

2448. — Lingelbach. — Dutch. — View of a Sea-port.

On the quay, to the right, a group of sailors, one of whom speaks to a Turk; in the middle, a beggar beseeches a lady who comes forward to the left, in a yellow dress, accompanied by a nobleman dressed in black; behind her, a negro, carrying a large parasol; on the left, a porter carries away a bale, and on the steps of a crumbling portico, galley-slaves are sitting; in the middle distance, two men, standing, read a bill posted on a column; afar off, the harbour, with boats; on the left, a bridge and a big tower. — Signed : LIN-GELBACH FECIT.

* 1940. — Philippe de Champaigne. — Fleming. — Portrait of a man.

In full face, the bare head turned in three quarters profile, to the left; black clothes, with white cuffs and falling collar. He turns over the pages of a book, on the top of a pile of other books, placed upon a stone stand where is inscribed the date A° 1648.

0,88 m. h.; 0,68 m. br. C. — Oval-shaped. — Breast-piece, life-size. — Purchased in 1818 of M. de Claparède.

* 2637. — Wynants (JAN). — Dutch. — Landscape.

In the middle, a drove driven by a herdsman, comes down a path; on the right, in the middle distance, a countrywoman is sitting with her two children; a lady comes forward, with a horseman and a child, and two men are a-fishing in a small river. On the left, three hogs are wallowing in the grass; at the door of a farm-house, a man gives alms to a begging woman carrying her child on her back; in the background, a wood; in the plain, to the right, sheaves set up, and a thatched cottage. — Signed on the left: J. WYNANTS; on the right: A-V. VELDE. The latter painted the figures.

0,90 m. h.; 1,22 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,05 m. — Bought for Louis XVI by M. d'Angiviller of M. Paillet, who had brought it from Holland.

* 2540. — Rembrandt van Ryn. — Dutch. — The Philosopher meditating.

In a vaulted hall sits in full light, on the left, in the middle distance, near a mullioned window, an old man with a long beard, rapt in thought; his hands are clasped on his knees; he is dressed in a black garment, a fur trimmed upper coat, and a crimson flat cap; before him, books are open on a table. In the middle, a spiral staircase, which a woman ascends, carrying a pail; on the right, before the hearth, an old servant stirs the fire and takes a caldron from the pot-hanger; on the walls, kitchen utensils are hooked. In the background, above the door of a vent-hole, a clock. — Signed, on the left, R. VAN RYN, 1633.

2447. — Lingelbach. — Dutch. — The Herb Market, in Rome.

On a market-place, on the left, a peasant mounted on a mule and three common workmen play the morra; in the middle, a woman comes forward, holding a child by the hand; on the right, two female costermongers, a man, seated, speaking to one of them, and a group of walking people; in the middle distance, a fountain, the stairs of Monte Cavallo with the two marble horses and a coach; on the left, a column. — Signed, on a slab, to the right: I. LINGELBACH, 1670.

0,69 m. h.; 0,87 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,20 m. — Ancient coll.

At a window, in full face, bare-headed, the body in three quarters profile, to the left, wrapped in a black cloak; white cuff and collar; the right hand is laid on the window-sill; in the middle, under the sill, one reads: PHI^e CHAMPAIGNE F. A^o 1650.

In the middle of a large hall, a woman, with a violet dress, a yellow jacket and a grey veil, standing, plays on a bagpipe, accompanied by a drunken musician, who falls asleep on a chair while scraping a fiddle; by their left side, a man, sitting on the ground, bursts out laughing, with a jug and a glass in his hands; a smoker is lying on a bench, a child beats the drum, and a singer has in her hand a scrap of paper on which one reads: DIE VER KRUY VIFE LUYTE. On the right, a large table is set up, around which are sitting a trumpeter, seen from the back, who pours out liquor to a fishmonger, a woman who presents her breast to her nursling, and several other guests; in the middle distance, a drinker, perched on a table, apostrophizes country folks who are dancing; on the right, a man kisses a woman, whom a peasant endeavours to draw along to a staircase, leading to a gallery from which spectators look at the rejoicings. In the background, a window and a large door, which is opened on a market-place.

1,18 m. h.; 1,61 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,35 m. — Catalogued by Smith. — Comprised in the eleven pictures purchased by the king, in 1817, of M. Quatresols de la Hante for 100000 francs, and estimated, at that time, 800 francs. "A picture full of felicitous details, but of a middling composition; the execution is clever, but somewhat loose." (VAN WESTRHEENE.)

*2510. — Van Ostade (ISAAC). — Dutch. — A frozen Canal, in Holland.

On the frozen canal, in the middle, a man and a woman skate, followed by two children and a dog; on the right, two children stand still; in the left foreground, two children push on two others, stretched out in a sledge. In the middle distance, a peasant whips a horse drawing a waggon, which clammers a path, at the top of which is a thatched cottage; on the horizon, boats lying at anchor, and mills. — Signed on a stranded boat, to the right: ISACK OSTADE.

1 m. h.; 1,50 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,20 m. — Engr. by Filhol and Landon. — Coll. of Louis XVI.

*2595. — Van de Velde (ADRIAEN). — Dutch. — Landscape and Animals.

In the country, a flock of different animals, sheep, goats, some of which are grazing, others lying; on the left, in the middle distance, near a hut, a contrywoman, dressed in a blue skirt and white chemisette, sitting under a tree, talks with two shepherds, one of whom is standing, and the other, seated on a paling, leans upon a staff. Afar off, a valley and hills. — Signed on a stone, to the right : A.-V. VELDE, F. 1661.

0.39 m. h.; 0.51 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,08 m. — Engr. by Filhol. — Bought 3100 livres in 1769 at the sale of M. de la Live de Jully, and 2610 florins in 1783, at the sale of M. Locquet, of Amsterdam, for the Crown.

*2558. — Ruysdael (JACOB). — Dutch. — A tempest on the dikes of Holland.

On the left, the waves break on a wooden stockade, erected on a strip of land, near a thatched cottage. In the offing, several ships cruise along, one of them bears the Dutch flag unfolded; in the middle, a boat, manned by rowers, struggle with the tempest; on the left, a big vessel and fishing boats. On the horizon, a village; cloudy sky. — Signed on the right : J. RUISDAEL.

1,40 m. h.; 1,56 m. br. C. — Engr. by Landon and René-Paul Huet (Chalc. of the Louvre), Bought by the Crown 1410 florins in 1783, at the sale of M. Locquet of Amsterdam. "The terrible and poetical grandeur of the sujet is joined here with a most striking effect, a rare boldness in the strokes of the brush, and a great lightness in the execution." (WAAGEN.)

*2082. — Rubens. — Fleming. — Christ upon the Cross.

*2529. — Potter (PAULUS). — Dutch. — The Wood of the Hague.

In the middle of a glade, two cows drink in a pool of water; in the middle distance, under the trees, animals are lying; on the left, an inn, towards which drives a coach, preceded by a horseman, and a jaunting-cart at a stand. — Signed on the left : PAULUS POTTER, F. 1650.

0,41 m. h.; 0,38 m. br. W. — Bought in 1869 of prince Estherazy.

*2619. — Van der Werff (ADRIAEN). — Dutch. — Nymphs, dancing.

In a garden, two nymphs, almost naked, dance, holding each other by the hand, before a shepherd seated, to the left, on a rock, and playing on the flute; in the middle distance, a player on the tabour and two young girls; in the background, amidst shrubs, a satyr-term. — Signed : CH. V. WERFF, FEC. 1718.

0,58 m. h.; 0,44 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,30. — Engr. by Petit and Filhol. — This picture was bought 33 000 francs, together with four others by the same master, of sir Gregory Page by king Louis XVI.

2558. — A storm along the Dikes of Holland.

*2537. — Rembrandt van Ryn. — Dutch. — The Good Samaritan.

On the right, on the steps of a staircase, the good Samaritan, his head facing the front, dressed in a yellow garment and a turban, gives a purse to the landlady, standing before her door, and turns, in profile, to the left, to the wounded man, that two servants carry in. On the left, a lad, with a dark garment and a red calotte, holds a horse by the bridle; in the middle distance, two horses, seen from the buttocks, are tied up to a wall, in the middle, under an open window, on which three travellers are leaning. Afar off, on the left, the walls of a town. — Dated : 1648.

1,14 m. h.; 1,35 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,45 m. — Engr. by baron Denon, J. de Frey, Longhi, Filhol. — This subject is one of those that have often been treated by the artist, namely in a sketch, in 1633, a painting of the Richard Wallace coll., a drawing of the Boymans Museum, in Rotterdam, and another, in Berlin, which was used as a study for a picture executed in 1639 and recently bought by M. Sedelmeyer, in England. "The canvas is smoky, all imbued with dark golden hues, very rich underneath, especially very thick. The material is muddy, yet transparent; the doing heavy, yet subtle, uncertain and wilful, vague in some places, astonishingly precise in others; no outline is apparent; the structure of the things seems to exist by itself, almost without the help of known formulas, and conveys, without any noticeable means, the hesitations and precisions of nature. No distortion, no feature that goes beyond nature; no stroke, in this manner of bringing out the inexpressible, that is not pathetic and kept within bounds; and all that is dictated by a deep impression, and expressed by quite extraordinary means." (FROMENTIN.)

In the middle of a frozen canal, a man re-adjusts his skate; another is standing, and two children push on a sledge which contains a cask; on the left, a group of walkers on the ice, and, afar off, a church steeple; on the right, a sloping path, that a countrywoman and her child clamber, while a cart of hay, drawn by two horses, is coming down. Thatched cottages border the path, on the right. — Signed, on the sledge : ISACK van OSTADE.

1,10 m. h.; 1,54 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,20 m. — One of the pictures bought 100 000 francs, by the king, in 1817, of M. Quatresols de la Hante.

*2007. — Huysmans (CORNELIS). — Fleming. — Landſcape.

In the middle, on the verdant slope of a ravine, three shepherds and their cattle; on the right, a forest; on the left, a stream, and, upon a height, the ruins of a castle; bluish mountains on the horizon.

0,38 m. h.; 0,47 m. br. C. — Bequeathed by M. Godard Desmarest in 1873.

2639. — Wyntrack. — Dutch. — The Farm.

In the middle, a man, dressed in black, walks up a path, going to a farm-house, erected near a clump of trees; goats browse about; on the left, gaunt trees; on the right, a stream, where ducks are swimming. Afar off, in a plain, sheaves of corn; mountains on the horizon.

0,38 m. h.; 0,49 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,04 m. — Engr. by Filhol and Dequevauvilliers, as being a picture of Wynants. — Musée Napoléon.

* 2386. — Hals (FRANS). — Portrait of Nicolas van Beresteyn.

He stands in profile, to the right; the bare head is seen in three quarters profile; curled mustachio and pointed beard. He is dressed in black breeches, a black flowered jerkin, a black cloak, white cuffs and ruff. The right hand is laid on the hip; the other, leaning on a table, holds a black hat. On the ground, the armorial bearings of the family are painted.

1,36 m. h.; 1 m. br. — Half-fig., life-size. — Same origin as No 2388, page 194. This picture, which probably dates from 1629, is quite undamaged and masterly executed, in a scale energetic and gloomy, remarkably intense, with refinements of transparence, forcible strokes in the model, and a suppleness in the relief of a rare quality.

* 2313. — Berchem (NICOLAS). — Dutch. — View of the environs of Nice.

In the middle and on the left flows the Var; on the left bank, stand a village and a tower topped with a windmill; afar off, the sea furrowed by boats, and, on the horizon, the summits of the Alps; on the right, in a way which disappears through the forest, a shepherd and a countrywoman bearing a basket on her head, are going away, followed by a drove and a cart, drawn by a white horse. — Signed, on the right : C. BERGHEM.

0,95 m. h.; 1,38 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,13 m. — Engr. by Daudet, Filhol and Landon. — Bought by the Crown 4810 livres in 1776, at the sale of M. Blondel de Gagny, the treasurer of the sinking-fund (caisse d'amortissement).

He is standing in a room, bare-headed, in three quarters profile, to the left, wearing a black garment and a black cloak, pinks stockings, a white quilled ruff, a blue ribbon round the neck; below the knee, the Garter; his right hand leans on his hip; his left hand rests on the hilt of his sword. On the left, a black column on a pedestal, and, on a table covered with a green carpet, where the letters C. R. are embroidered, the sceptre and the royal globe. — Signed : HP FECIT, 1632.

2407 bis. — Hondius. — Dutch. — The Merchant of Pigeons.

A middle-aged man, bare-headed, with grizzled hair, dressed in a chestnut-brown garment and a white neck cloth, in three quarters profile, to the left, carries, under his left arm, a black hat, and, in his right hand, two pigeons; near him, in a wicker cage, two other pigeons. — Signed : HONDIUS.

0,35 m. h.; 0,25 m. br. W. — Half-fig. — Bought 1000 francs in 1891.

* 2387. — Hals (FRANS). — Dutch. — Portrait of Nicolas van Beresteyn's wife.

OLD FRENCH SCHOOL

This hall and the following ones, X, XI, XII, XIII, are comprised in the New Louvre, erected from the plans of the architect Louis Visconti, the first stone of which was laid on the 25th of July 1852. After Visconti's death, in 1853, M. Lefuel was entrusted with the completion of the palace, which was inaugurated on the 14th of August 1857.

The wing which contains these five halls crosses the spot formerly occupied by the rue des Orties, which led to the church St Louis, demolished during the first Empire, when the place of the Carrousel was enlarged.

HALL X

FRENCH SCHOOL OF THE 18th CENTURY

The life of St-Bruno, by Le Sueur.

In 1645, Eustache Le Sueur was charged by the Chartreux of Paris, to paint for their small cloister, in rue d'Enfer, twenty-two pictures representing the chief incidents of the life of St Bruno, the founder of their order. The artist, who certainly secured the help of several of his pupils, more particularly his brother-in-law, Goussé, was able to give, at the end of three years, this set of pictures, which took, under curves separated by Dorian pilasters, the place of old frescoes nearly obliterated. In each of the spaces between the pictures, the history of the saint, in Latin verse, by Jarry, was to be read on a plate. The entrance of the cloister was free, and, as some ill-disposed or awkward persons, or, perhaps, as it has been hinted out, some jealous painters, had damaged such pictures as were placed within reach, they were, thence forwards, kept safe behind wooden shutters with locks and keys, till the day when the monks gave them as a present to the Crown.

On the 25th of July 1776, a delegation of the Capitulary assembly, headed by the prior and the steward general of the Order, and introduced by the count of Angiviller respectfully presented the king with the collection that decorated the cloister; it was paid, according to Bachaumont, 132 000 livres to the monks. Exhibited first in the Museum of the French School, installed in the palace of Versailles in the year X, these pictures were transferred to the Luxembourg the following year, and definitively assigned to the Louvre in 1848, after having undergone twice important repairs.

Numerous studies, done par Le Sueur for this set, are extant. A hundred and forty six drawings, bought 502 livres at Crozat's death, in 1741, by marquis de Gouvernet, came into the hands of M. Paillet, and then of M. Le Brun, who sold them to the king. They are now exhibited in the Louvre. The set of these twenty two paintings was engraved by Chauveau, Filhol and Landon. "What is striking, in that long legend, is the simplicity of the execution, the disengagement from details and unessential parts, the soberness in the means of execution, the small number of the tones used in it, and, above all, the earnest and firmly convinced look of the heads." (TH. GAUTIER.) It is not only in the selection of forms and arrangement of draperies that the originality of the master manifests itself here; it is also, and chiefly, in the general character of the conception of the subject and in the inmost part of man. With Raphael, the religious feeling has almost always something proud and imposing that tends to confound impiety; with Le Sueur, this feeling is accompanied with such a candour as to affect even the most stubborn unbeliever. It was in the earnestness of his humble belief that he found the secret of such a religious painting, which would be impossible to a sceptic." (CHARLES BLANC.)

In a church, on the left, Raymond, a canon of Notre-Dame, is in the pulpit, preaching; on the right, the hearers are sitting, and Bruno stands, in a blue garment and a yellow cloak, with a book under his arm; at the foot of the pulpit, a young clerk recives the words of the preacher.

565. — The death of Raymond Diocres.

He lies on a bed, to the left, and turns his face away from the cross that a priest, attended by two deacons, presents to him. An old man is struck with dismay at the sight. In the foreground, St Bruno, on his knees, is at prayers. Above the head of the dying man, a fiend is flying. In the left background, the funeral train is preparing.

1,93 m. h.; 1,30 m. br. C. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 1 m.

566. — Raymond Diocres answering after his death to announce his damnation.

In the church, on the left, the dead man lifts himself up and utters the words that are inscribed on the catafalco. The congregation is struck with dismay. A singing boy drops his book; behind the officiating priest, clad in a dalmatic, St Bruno fervently clasps his hands.

* 567. — St Bruno, praying.

In an oratory, St Bruno, in a monk's gown, kneeling in profile, to the right, before an altar, makes up his mind to renounce the world; on the left, in the country, the burial of Raymond.

1,93 m. h.; 1,30 m. br. C. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 1 m.

568. — St Bruno teaches divinity in the schools of Rheims.

In a church, on the right, the saint, sitting in a high chair, stretches his hand out to the sky. Around him, his disciples, some standing, the others seated, listen to his words.

1,93 m. h.; 1,30 m. br. C. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 1 m. — "We must admire in this composition a wonderful delicacy in the drawing, draperies of a fine style, and, above all, a softness in the chiaro-oscuro and a softened colouring which perfectly answer to the collectedness and silence of the hearers." (Charles BLANC.)

569. — St Bruno advises his disciples and friends to give up the world.

Under a portico of the Ionic order, in the middle, the saint exhorts his disciples; one of them, on the left, piously listens to him; another, on the right, having resolved to follow his master, bids farewell to his father.

570. — The Dream of St Bruno.

On the right, the saint, in a blue garb, lies on a bed, the curtains and blankets of which are blue, too; three angels, on the right, appear to him; at the foot of the bed, sandals and a lamp.

1,93 m. h.; 1,30 m. br. C. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 1 m.

571. — St Bruno and his disciples distribute their properties to the poor, before starting for Grenoble.

On the right, on the top of a flight of stairs, the saint and his disciples distribute alms to the crowd thronging in the street, before them.

1,93 m. h.; 1,30 m. br. C. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 0,70 m.

572. — The arrival of St Bruno in Grenoble, at St Hugues's.

On the right, the bishop comes out of his house, attended by a priest and a servant; St Bruno and his disciples kneel before him; in the sky the seven stars shine, that had appeared to St Hugues in a dream; in the court-yard, grooms lead away the horses of the travellers.

1,93 m. h.; 1,30 m. br. C. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 1 m.

573. — The journey to the Chartreuse.

The bishop takes St Bruno and his companions, through a sterile country, to the village called the Chartreuse.

1,93 m. h.; 1,30 m. br. C. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 1 m. — "Here the painter of the inmost affections suddenly becomes a clever landscape painter; he sets off a wild and grand nature, he draws noble and sturdy horses, as if he had applied himself to such objects during his whole life." (Charles BLANC.)

574. — St Bruno builds his first monastery.

On the left, the saint, with one of his companions and the architect, examines the plans; on the right, masons lift up a stone; in the background, the building, already in course of erection, and, on the horizon, the mountains of Dauphiné.

1,93 m. h.; 1,30 m. br. C. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 1 m.

575. — St Bruno takes the cowl.

In a church, before the altar, St Hugues, attended by two deacons, clothes St Bruno, kneeling, in the white gown of the Chartreux; on the right, two monks at prayers; in the background, neophytes and bystanders.

1,93 m. h.; 1,30 m. br. C. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 1 m.

576. — Pope Victor II confirms the institution of the Chartreux.

In a temple decorated with Doric columns, the pope is sitting on a high throne, surrounded by cardinals. One of these, standing, reads out the statutes of the new order; on the left, before the pope, a secretary is seated.

1,93 m. h.; 1,30 m. br. C. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 1 m. — The painter, in this painting, has dressed the Ronan prelates in a costume that they really wore only three hundred years later, as the red hat was not given to cardinals till 1464. "A happy anachronism! By bringing too soon the purple into the costume of the cardinals, Le Sueur enlivens his canvass, and only sacrifices the truth in details to a more important truth, for he thereby gives the Roman consistency that pomp in which the pontifical court is fond to array itself, even when it canonizes ascetism." (Charles BLANC.)

* 577. — St Bruno gives the cowl to several persons.

In a church, the saint turning his back on the altar, hands to a neophyte, kneeling before him, the white gown of his order; in the foreground, a monk kneeling, seen from the back; by the side of the saint, an officiating priest, carrying a book; in the left background, laymen who are about to pronounce their vows.

1,93 m. h.; 1,30 m. br. C. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 4 m.

578. — St Bruno receives a message from the Pope.

In the court of the convent, the saint, in profile, to the right, attended by three monks, reads a message that has just been delivered to him by an envoy of Pope Urban II; in the middle distance, the envoy's horse. On the horizon, high mountains.

1,93 m. h.; 1,30 m. br. C. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 4 m.

* 579. — The arrival of St Bruno at Rome.

In a hall surrounded by a gallery with Doric columns, St Bruno falls prostrate at the feet of the Pope, sitting on a high throne, who holds out his arms to him; on the left, a group of bystanders.

1,93 m. h.; 1,30 m. br. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 4 m.

* 580. — St Bruno declines the archbishopric of Reggio that Urban II offers him.

In a hall, the pope sits, on the left, under a canopy; by his side, a monk shows, upon a table, the archiepiscopal mitre to St Bruno, kneeling; the latter makes them understand by his gesture that he declines the offer of the Holy Father; in the middle distance, a group of bystanders.

1,93 m. h.; 1,30 m. br. C. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 4 m.

* 581. — St Bruno, praying in his cell.

In a forest, two monks, one of whom carries a pick-axe, the other a spade, break up the earth, in the foreground; in the background, beneath a clump of trees, St Bruno, kneeling, is at prayers.

1,93 m. h.; 1,30 m. br. C. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 4 m.

582. — Meeting of St Bruno and Roger, count of Sicily.

In a forest, count Roger, seeing St Bruno at prayers, dismounts and kneels before the monk; on the right, the count's white horse; afar off, a party of horsemen.

1,93 m. h.; 1,30 m. br. C. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 4 m.

583. — St Bruno appearing to count Roger.

The saint appears to the count, sleeping in his tent, and announces the treason of one of his officers; in the foreground, a soldier, lying at the foot of the bed, awakes his companion; on the left, in the distance, the town of Capua which is given up by the army of the enemy.

584. — The death of St Bruno, on the 6th of October 1101.

In a room, on the left, the saint is lying on a truckle-bed, his hands clasped. In the foreground, a monk falls prostrate, and four others chant prayers; in the middle distance, a monk, standing, with a crucifix in his hand, speaks to the crowd of people who come to behold the deceased; on the floor, a light, and in a vase some holy water.

1,93 m. h.; 1,30 m. br. C. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 1 m. — “The light of an only wax-taper sends its wan gleams gliding over those white frocks, like to grave-clothes, over those walls whitewashed like the walls of the sepulchre, and an impressive sadness evolves itself from this almost monochrome canvas.” (TH. GAUTIER.)

* 585. — St Bruno rapt to Heaven.

Supported by three angels, the saint, stretching out his arms, draped in his monk's gown, is carried away to heaven. Five little angels accompany the principal group, and fly in the air.

In a room, four persons are sitting at a green-carpeted table; on the left, a brown man, in three quarters profile; to the right, dressed in grey, with a broad-brimmed hat on, gets ready to write. Opposite him, a fair man, in black clothes, stops reading and looks up. In the middle distance, in face and fully lighted, a musician, in a brilliant grey costume, in three quarters profile, to the right, seems to be busy fitting up a string to a mandolin; against his chair leans, on the right, an elegant gentleman. On the left, a man, looking as a Spaniard, dressed in light brown clothes, has his left arm wrapped up in a mantle, and looks right opposite: in the left background, two men in black come nearer to the centre-group; against the wall, hangings of a green colour, with gilt foliage.

1,66 m. h.; 1,48 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,90 m. — Acquired in 1891 for 20 000 francs. — Engr. by de Mare. — This picture, attributed first to Van der Helst, then to T. de Keyser, bought 5100 francs by M. Kestner, in 1875, at the Augiot sale, was exhibited for the benefit of the sufferers from the flood in the South of France, in 1887, as being the work of the brothers Le Nain. "The general appearance, the composition, the attitudes of the figures are so nearly kindred to the Corps de Garde ("the Guard-House") of the Pourtales collection, wrote Champfleury at that time, that Le Nain would have lost his best part as a painter, were it admitted that the picture of the Augiot collection must be given over to the Dutch school." Yet it is considered now-a-days, as being the work of a Dutch painter.

HALL XI

the « Hôtel Lambert ».

In the historical essay on the works of Eustache Le Sueur, read to the Academy on the 5th of August 1690, Guillet de Saint-Georges supplies some interesting information about the pictures which formerly decorated the "hôtel Lambert" and are now exhibited in the Louvre, hall XI.

"In 1648, he said, Le Sueur executed several works in a house which is at the head of the "île Notre-Dame" and belongs to M. Lambert-Thorigny, president of the Audit-Office ("Chambre des Comptes"). As some of these paintings are in the artist's first manner, and some others in his best taste, it is evident that between the two kinds of work several years had elapsed. The cabinet of the President, known as Cabinet de l'Amour, contained five pictures for the ceiling, and a sixth one above the mantle-piece, all six dealing with Cupid (n^o 591-n^o 596). For the room of the President's wife, called Chambre des Muses, in which the beauty of the wood-work and the richness of the wainscoting stood instead of tapestry and hangings, M. Le Sueur, who had got rid of his first manner, painted several pictures, accompanied with ornaments. On the ceiling, the Sun giving Phaeton his chariot to drive (n^o 577). On the wainscoting of the alcove, he has represented the Muses (n^o 598-n^o 602). "It was in a room near to that of the President, that was, on the ceiling, Ganymede carried up by the Eagle (n^o 603).

On the President's death, in 1729, the hôtel was bought by marquis du Châtelet, who gave hospitality to Voltaire there. Marchioness Du Châtelet wrote to Dargental, on the 2nd of April 1739: "I want that your friend Voltaire and I may live a few days with you in the Lambert palace, which is, at present, the "hôtel du Châtelet." Farmer general Dupin, and M. de La Haye, were, afterwards, the successive owners of it. In 1809, M. de Montalivet, minister of the Home affairs, purchased it. At present, the "hôtel Lambert" is inhabited by prince Czartoryski, who has carefully repaired it.

But, as early as 1776, Le Sueur's pictures had been removed from it, and bought for the Crown; so we are informed by the Mercur de France of the month of August, where we read: "His Majesty, wishing to offer grand models to the artists, and to secure for the nation the enjoyment of the master-pieces that have made the French School illustrious, has just authorised count d'Angiviller to acquire for the nation the pictures with which the celebrated Le Sueur had decorated the "Lambert hôtel." Several pictures, that had not been comprised in the sale, were transported, in 1814, by M. de Montalivet, to his castle of La Grange, in Berry.

591. — Le Sueur. — The Birth of Love.

Sitting on a bed amidst clouds, Venus, in profile, to the left, looks at Love, whom a nymph presents to her; two other nymphs stand by the side of the goddess, and a fourth one, in the air, spreads out flowers on the new-born god.

1,82 m. h.; 1,27 m. br. W. — Half-life-size. — Engr. by Desplaces and Landon. — Five sketches of the pictures of the Cabinet of Love, among which the Birth of Love, were sold 3801 livres, in 1777, at the Randon de Boisset sale. "In this composition and those that follow, Le Sueur shows how fit his kind nature made him to narrate those ingenious fables, the delicate intention and the veiled meaning of which he understood so well." (Charles BLANC.) "The heads have a charming character of serene sweetness and ingenious voluptuousness, which will be reflected later in the gracefulness of Prudhon. The forms of the bodies are undulating and supple, in an elegant and pure taste, that is not stiffened by a strict imitation of the Grecian and Roman arts." (TH. GAUTIER.)

 592. — *Venus introduces Love to Jupiter.

On the left, seated on clouds, a crown on his head and draped in a red cloak, Jupiter, in three quarters profile, to the left, shows his astonishment; behind him, an eagle; by his side, Juno, Neptuneus and Diana. All look with surprise at Love, whom Venus introduces to them, wearing as only dress, a blue drapery round the lower part of her body.

1 m. h.; 1,97 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,80 m. — Engr. by Desplaces, Filhol and Landon.

In the midst of clouds, on the left, Venus, draped in a blue cloak, in profile, to the left, threatens with her finger Love, who jumps out of his cradle and flies for refuge into the arms of Ceres, dressed in a white robe and a yellow cloak, and crowned with ears of wheat; in the middle distance, in the centre, a nymph raises her eyes to the sky.

1 m. h.; 1,50 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,80 m. — Engr. by Landon and Filhol.

 594. — *Love receiving the homage of the gods.

On the right, Love, sitting, entirely naked, upon clouds, turns in profile, to the left, stretching his arms forward, to the deities who fly up to him. Diana offers him her bow and arrows, Apollo, the torch of day, and Mercury his caduceus.

1 m. h.; 1,97 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,80. — Engr. by Desplaces, Filhol and Landon.

596. — Love robs Jupiter of his bolt.

Carried on an eagle's wings, Love, holding his bow in one hand and in the other the thunderbolt, seems to defy Jupiter, who is seated on a cloud. In the foreground, in the midst of reeds, near a lion and a tiger, a River and two Naiads, leaning upon urns, raise their eyes to the sky.

Round-shaped. Diameter: 1,36 m. C. — Half-life-size. — Engr. by Beauvais, Filhol and Landon. — This picture was placed above the mantle-piece.

 595. — *Love bids Mercury announce his power to the whole world.

On the right, Love, half-lying on clouds, in profile, to the left, leans with one hand on the goddess of Youth, having as emblems a crown of roses and a cup of nectar, and, with the other, on the goddess of beauty, who carries a lance and a mirror; on the left, Mercury wings his flight in the air.

1 m. h. ; 2,50 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,80 m. — Engr. by Landon and Filhol.

597. — Phaeton asks to drive the chariot of the Sun.

In the middle distance, Apollo, in front of his palace, in the middle, crowns his son stooping before him. On the right, the Hours check the impatient coursers, put to the chariot of the Sun, and, in the air, Aurora shakes a torch with one hand and, with the other, roses. On the left, Time and four goddesses representing the Seasons; at the feet of Ceres, a Love chains up a lion. In the foreground, the winds heap up clouds and blow out a tempest.

2,82 m. h. ; 3,55 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Dupuis. "I think", says M. de Caylus in his Vie de Le Sueur, "that it is the most glowing picture that he ever painted. It is pervaded by a kind of golden tone which wonderfully expresses the heat which must needs reign in the house of the Sun. The order of the composition is magnificent."

* 603. — Ganymede carried up by Jupiter.

The eagle soars high in the open sky, holding in his talons Ganymede, who, terror-stricken, clings to the bird's neck. The child is draped in violet cloth; in the upper part of the picture, the earth is desried.

1,27 m. h. ; 1,10 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Beauvais, Landon and Filhol.

The Muse sits, on the right, under high trees, leaning her elbow on the earthly globe, her body in three quarters profile, to the left; her head, begirt with stars, is inclined to the left. She is dressed in a white robe, with a red cloak on her knees. She raises her right arm to the sky and holds compasses in her right hand.

1,12 m. h. : 0,75 m. br. W. — Half-life-size. — "The ground of this picture and of the four following ones were done by Patel. In these compositions, Le Sueur, while borrowing nothing from the painter of Parnassus, invents varied and exquisitely elegant subjects. The groups of Muses are brought out on a ground of smiling landscapes in which it is impossible to discern the hand of Patel, so great is the harmony between the essential part and the rest, so fitly do the trees, the background prospects and the sky answer to the composition and nature of the subject." (Charles BLANC.)

* 598. — Clio, Euterpe and Thalia.

Under a clump of trees, on the bank of a brook, the three Muses are sitting, girt with wreaths of flowers. On the left, Clio, with a white robe and a yellow cloak, in full face, leaning on a book, holds in her right hand a trumpet; on the right, Euterpe, wrapped in a blue toga, in three quarters profile, to the left, plays on the flute; in the centre-foreground, Thalia, sitting down, on a blue cloak, dressed in a soft blue robe, the head in profile, to the right, looks at a mask of comedy. A landscape in the background.

* 601. — Terpsichore.

The Muse is sitting at the foot of a big tree, the body in three quarters profile to the left, the head bound with a crown of flowers, inclined to the right. She is dressed in a blue robe and a pink cloak, and she strikes with a wand on some rings passed in a metal triangle. Landscape in the background.

1,12 m. h.; 0,75 m. br. Oval-shaped. W. — Half-life-size. — Engr. by Picart, Laurent, Audouin, Landon and Filhol.

* 599. — Melpomene, Erato and Polyhymnia.

The three Muses are represented under a clump of trees, crowned with flowers. On the left, Melpomene, sitting on the ground, in a yellow robe and a green cloak, in three quarters to the right, sings, while reading in a music-book open on her knees. On the right, Erato, draped in a blue robe which leaves her right breast uncovered, in full face, her eyes raised to the sky, plays on the violoncello. In the middle distance, in the centre, Polyhymnia, leaning on a book, dressed in a pink robe, in three quarters profile, to the left, listens to her two sisters. Landscape in the background.

1,32 m. h.; 1,38 m. br. W. — Half-life-size. — Engr. by Audouin, Landon and Filhol.

* 602. — Calliope.

The Muse sits on a knoll shaded by a clump of trees. Her head, in profile, to the left, is bound with a crown of flowers. She is dressed in a white robe, with a red cloak on her knees, and she plays on the harp. Landscape in the background.

1,12 m. h.; 0,75 m. br. Oval-shaped. W. — Half-life-size. — Engr. by Picart, Laurent, Audouin, Landon and Filhol.

Pictures recently come to the Museum and placed on a partition in the middle of the hall.

2561 bis. — Ruysdael (JACOB). — Dutch. — The Outskirt of a Wood.

On a wayside, near a forest, a woodcutter fells the branches of a blasted tree; on the right, some copsewood and a brook; afar off, a village. Cloudy sky.

0,55 m. h.; 0,63 m. br. C. — Bequeathed by M. Léon Moreaux, in 1892.

2405 bis. — Hondecoeter. — Dutch. — Eagles swooping down a poultry-yard.

In a landscape crossed by a river, on the right, an eagle flies off, holding a hen in its talons; in the middle, another eagle swoops down a cock: pigeons and hens run and fly about; in the background, a crumbling castle, and, on the right, a village. — Signed, on the cross-bar of a ladder: M. D'HONDECOETER, 1673.

2,05 m. h.; 2,55 m. br. C. — Bequeathed by M. Léon Moireaux, in 1892.

0,96 m. h.; 1,25 m. br. — A present from M. J. Maciet in 1891.

The great Sea-ports, by Joseph VERNET.

In the month of October 1753, king Louis XV bespoke of Claude-Joseph Vernet a set of pictures representing the great sea-ports of France, at a price of 6000 livres each. M. de Marigny drew up a list of twenty-four subjects, which the painter was to treat. Fifty pictures were executed within nine years. After Vernet's death, Hue was entrusted with the care of continuing the work.

940. — View of the entrance of the harbour, at Marseilles, from the Mountain called the Head of the Moor ("la Tête de More").

In the foreground, on the beach, a group of walking people; on the left, a lady, in a yellow dress, shows an old man, who is a hundred and seventeen years of age, to the painter, engaged in drawing. On the right, the citadel Saint-Nicolas. In the centre, the fort Saint-Jean, which defends the entrance of the harbour; afar off, the town. Under the old man, the inscription: Annibal né en 1658. One reads upon the picture: « Peint par JOSEPH VERNET, à Marseille, à 1754. »

In a landscape, on the right, a little boy, bare-headed, clad in crimson velvet with a lace collar, sits on the pedestal of a large vase, in three quarters profile, to the right. He looks to the left, while putting flowers on the head of his little sister, standing by his right side, dressed in white, holding with both hands her apron full of flowers; before the little boy, a dog; behind the little girl, her brother's black hat. In the background a river and a clump of trees; behind the vase, a red drapery.

1,67 m. h.; 1,24 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Amédée Greux. — Comes from the John Wilson sale, where it was knocked down at 3810 francs. Presented by the journal l'Art, in 1881.

She stands in three quarters profile, to the right, in a white dress with golden embroidery and a blue cloak, edged and lined with ermine, kept around the waist by a girdle; round the neck, a pearl necklace; in her fair hair, flowers. On the left, a throne, covered with red stuff. On the right, on a red-carpeted table, a blue cushion bearing the sceptre and the royal crown, upon which the princess lays her left hand, while her right hangs along her body. In the background, a column.

2,44 m. h.; 1,60 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Given to the Louvre in 1882 by the journal l'Art.

1816. — Opie (JOHN). — The Woman in white.

She is sitting in a park, the body in three quarters profile, to the left, the face looking to the right in a white dress, with short sleeves, blue-edged on the breast, and a sash of the same colour. On her brown hair is a straw hat lined with mauve-coloured silk, the ribbons of which wave over her bare shoulders. In the background, a landscape; on the left, a pond.

1,13 m. h.; 0,98 m. br. C. — Knee-piece; life-size. — This picture, which had been bought 2800 francs in 1873, at marquis de La Rochebrune sale, comes from the John Wilson sale, where it was knocked down at 780 francs. Given to the Louvre in 1887 by the journal l'Art.

HALL XIV

FRENCH SCHOOL OF THE 17th CENTURY

This hall, which is a part of the new Louvre, is situated above the Mollien gallery, where the king's stables and the gymnasium of the pages were formerly placed. The decorative paintings are by Denuelle.

* 730. — Poussin. — Bacchanal.

In the middle, a woman, seated on the ground, in profile, to the right, with a blue dress, plays on the lute; by her right side, another woman, lying down, listens to her, with a style in her hand, and leans on the leg of a satyr, seen from the back, crowned with vine-branches, who lifts up his glass. Close to them, two Loves, standing, one of whom seeks to frighten the other by hiding his face behind a mask. In the middle distance, a fawn pours wine into a cup that is held out by a child, and keeps a bunch of grapes; on the left, near the musician, a child is asleep, and, at the foot of a clump of trees, two young fawns come near Bacchus lying on vine-branches, the one spilling wine on his head, the other bringing him a he-goat. Landscape in the background.

1,21 m. h.; 1,75 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,70 m. — Engr. by Erlinger (1685), Filhol and Landon. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — Was placed, in 1710, in the king's little apartment, at Versailles.

* 78. — Bourdon (SÉBASTIEN). — Portrait of René Descartes, a philosopher (1596-1650).

In three quarters profile, to the right, the face set in a long wig; clad in a black cloak; the right hand leaning on a stone balustrade; in the left hand, a black hat.

0,87 m. h.; 0,69 m. br. C. — Breast-piece, life-size. — Bought of M. Letronne, in 1848, for 400 francs.

* 631. — Mignard. — Ecce Homo.

Christ is seen in full face, crowned with thorns, his eyes raised to the sky, a violet cloak thrown over his left shoulder.

0,72 m. h.; 0,59 m. br. — Oval-shaped. — Breast-piece; life-size. — This seems to be the picture mentioned by Thierry, which decorated, along with n^o 632, page 260, the church of the Jacobine monks. The painter is said to have represented himself under the shape of Christ. — Musée Napoléon.

685. — Patel (Attributed to), THE YOUNGER. — The Month of April.

In the foreground, three fishermen spread their net in a canal shut by a sluice upon which several people are standing; on the left, near a clump of trees, the ruins of a temple; afar off, a hunt; on the horizon, the canal disappears into a forest. — Signed, on a stone: Avril AP. PATEL, 1699.

0,44 m. h.; 0,68 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,04 m. — This picture, which is entered into the inventories as coming from an ancient coll., was perhaps one of the set of twelve pictures mentioned by Thierry and representing the Months, in the church Saint-Louis-la-Culture, whence they were transferred to the Museum in the year III.

 543. — Le Nain (THE BROTHERS). — *Portraits in an Interior.

In a room, on the right, an old man and his wife who carries a distaff, both in dark clothes, sit at a table on which a jug of wine and a glass are placed; behind them, a servant-girl stands; in the middle, two little girls, upright, in pink dresses and white aprons, the one brown-haired, the other wearing in her fair hair a pink feather; on the left, seated on a stool, a shock-patted young lad, with a pink vest worn out at the elbow, plays on the flute; in the middle distance, a woman, wearing a red bodice and a blue petticoat, listens to the musician, while a man in black clothes looks at her; in the background, a chimney, with kitchen utensils upon a stand. — Signed and dated: LE NAIN, fecit 1647.

0,27 m. h.; 0,37 m. br. Copper. — Fig. 0,21 m. — Acquired in 1888, for 3000 francs.

57. — Le Valentin (JEAN DE BOULONGNE, called). — The Judgment of Solomon.

Solomon, sitting on a high throne, in three quarters profile, to the left, orders a soldier to strike with his sword the child that one of the mothers, seen from the back, holds in her arms: on the right, the other mother, in profile, pressing her two hands to her breast, entreats the king; at the foot of the throne, the corpse of the other child; in the shade of the background, several bystanders.

1,76 m. h.; 2,10 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Bouillard. — Was entered into cardinal Mazarin's inventory for an amount of 1000 livres. It was probably bought of his heirs by Louis XIV.

 742. — Poussin. — *Apollo in love with Daphne.

On the left, Apollo sits on a knoll, in profile, to the right, looking at a group of nymphs, in the midst of whom Daphne stands, on the right, near the river Peneus; by the side of Apollo, a Love shooting an arrow, two nymphs in the foliage of a tree, and Mercury trying to steal an arrow from the god; in the middle distance, the flocks of Admetus. In the background, a landscape with a lake and mountains.

1,55 m. h.; 0,02 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,60 m. — The last work of Poussin, who sent it, unfinished, to cardinal Massimo. It figured afterwards in the collections Lethière, Erard, Gouvello, and was acquired in 1869 by the State.

 75. — Bourdon (SÉBASTIEN). — *A Halt of Gypsies.

On the left, at the foot of a ruined column, a woman in rags is sitting, in profile, to the left, suckling an infant. A little boy and a little girl stand by her side; on her right is a cask, against which a cuirass and various ustensils are leant. In the middle, a horseman, seen from the back, a red cloak thrown over the buttock of his white horse, looks at an old man, in the middle distance, who consults the cards for some soldiers; a dog quenches his thirst in a brook; on the left, a tree; in the background, a decayed monument and some rocks.

0,43 m. h.; 0,58 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,18 m. — Engr. by Laurent, Filhol and Landon. — Ancient coll.

76. — Bourdon (SÉBASTIEN). — The Beggars.

In the middle of a road, a beggar-woman, carrying a child upon her back, in profile, counts up her money; near her stands a ragged little girl; on the right, is a carriage, of which one wheel only is visible, and to which a little boy is going, holding out his hand to beg; on the left, round a table, a group of beggars; a nobleman in black, passing under a crumbling arch, comes up to them; in the background, the apsis of a church.

0,49 m. h.; 0,65 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,18 m. — Ancient coll.

56. — Le Valentin (JEAN DE BOULONGNE, called). — The Innocence of Susanna, made out.

On the left, on a high throne, sits Daniel, in profile to the right; he stretches out his arm towards Susanna, who, accompanied by two children, crosses her hands on her breast; in the middle distance, the old men; a soldier, armed with a cuirass, lays hold of one of them.

1,75 m. h.; 2,11 m. br. C. — Knee-piece, life-size. — Engr. by Krüger. — Ancient coll. — “ From this picture one can judge the vigour and originality of the painter; it contains his distinctive qualities. It may serve as a basis to support an accurate definition of his talent. ” (Charles BLANC.)

513. — Le Brun (CHARLES). — The entrance of Alexander into Babylon.

The conqueror, in profile, to the left, draped in a golden cloak, with a helmet on his head, holding his sword and sceptre, is in chariot embellished with gold and ivory, and drawn by two elephants. In the foreground, a horseman speaks to some slaves who carry on a barrow a chiselled vase. On the right, the Macedonian army; on the left, near a statue, a family looks at the procession, which disappears under a gate, preceded by musicians. In the background, the ramparts of the town, and altars on which incense is burning.

4,50 m. h.; 7,07 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Audran (Chalc. of the Louvre). This picture, as well as nos 509, 510, 511, 512, was executed by Le Brun from 1661 to 1668, at the Gobelins, to be reproduced in tapestry-work. The five pictures were exhibited in 1673, in the court of Brion palace; they were, in 1709, in the gallery of pictures, in Paris. Later on, they were transferred into the gallery of Apollo. “ The same year (1660), the king, being at Fontainebleau, gave M. Le Brun the order to work about some subjects of the history of Alexander. He had him lodged in the castle, near his apartment, and he would visit him unawares. ” (Mémoire sur Le Brun, read to the Academy by M. Guillet de Saint-Georges.)

*558. — Le Sueur. — Jesus appears to the Magdalen.

On the left, Christ, wrapped up in a red cloak, the body facing the front, the head in profile, stands, on a road, before the Magdalen, kneeling, on the right, dressed in a blue robe and a yellow cloak, her fair hair flowing over her shoulders, who presents a vase of perfume to him; with his right hand, Christ points out the heavens to the sinner; he blesses her with his right hand; at the Saviour's feet, a spade; in the left background, the Holy Sepulchre; on the right, Mount Calvary; on the horizon, Jerusalem.

1,48 m. h.; 1,21 m. br. C. — Half-life-size. — Engr. by Filhol, Landon, Petit and Courbé. — Was formerly in the church of the convent of the Chartreux, in Paris. Having been transferred to the Louvre under Napoleon I, it was clumsily repaired by Martin de la Porte.

440. — Jouvenet. — View of the high altar of Notre-Dame, in Paris.

In the middle, near the altar, abbé Delaporte, a canon « jubilee », that is, of fifty years standing, turns to the congregation and blesses them; by his sides, two singing boys hold burning candles, and a deacon comes down the steps of the altar: in the foreground, a female servant with a child, a woman in a black dress, two noblemen and two monks are kneeling; on the left, against the balustrade of the choir, a deacon, at prayers.

1,62 m. h.; 1,41 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,32 m. — Engr. by Réville, Benoist, Leroux, Filhol and Landon. — This picture, ordered by the chapter, in memory of the numerous presents given by canon Delaporte to the church, was brought to the Louvre under Napoleon I. It is supposed that the details of architecture are by Feuillet, who often assisted Jouvenet in his compositions.

*718. — Poussin. — The Assumption of the Virgin.

The Virgin, dressed in a red robe and a blue cloak, with a white veil floating above her head, her eyes raised to the sky, her arms stretched out, is carried up in the air by four angels who gaze on her with adoration; two of them hold up her arms. In the lower part of the picture, a town, the monuments of which stand out on a cloudy sky.

0,51 m. h.; 0,40 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,40 m. — Engr. by Pesne (Chalc. of the Louvre), Duquey, Bettelini, Filhol and Landon. — Painted at Rome, in 1650, for M. de Mauroy, ambassador of France. It was afterwards acquired by the Crown and, in 1710, exhibited in the king's little gallery, at Versailles.

*556. — Le Sueur. — The Bearing of the Cross.

Christ walks to the right, overwhelmed by the weight of the cross; Simon the Cynerean, behind him, comes to help him in his walk; on the right, St Veronica, in profile, turned to the left, kneeling on one knee, dressed in a pink robe and a chestnut-brown cloak, with a blue ribbon in her fair hair, has come near to the Saviour and holds out a towel. In the background, a rock; on the left, the fields.

0,61 m. h.; 1,26 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,60 m. — This picture, executed for the chapel of the Le Camus family, in the church Saint-Gervais, Paris, was brought to the Louvre under Napoleon I. "No picture brings out Le Sueur's genius more strongly than this composition so simple, with its colouring, affectingly pale." (Th. GAUTIER.)

*713. — Poussin. — The Holy Family.

In the middle, the Virgin, draped in a blue cloak, sits, in three quarters profile, to the left, holding in her lap the Child Jesus. This one fondles St John, who is introduced to him by St Elizabeth, kneeling on the left, in profile, wrapped in a brown cloak, with a piece of white cloth on her head. In the middle distance, between the two mothers, St Joseph, draped in a red cloak, is standing, his hands clasped. In the background, a landscape, with a town on the banks of a river.

0,68 m. h.; 0,51 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,44 m. — Engr. by Pesne, Massard, Filhol and Landon. — This picture, executed in 1651 for the Duke of Créqui, the French ambassador, at Rome, was acquired later by the Crown. In 1710, it was placed in the cabinet, near the king's little gallery, at Versailles.

*494. — Le Brun (CHARLES). — The Adoration of the Magi.

In the middle distance, in a stable, the Virgin draped in a blue cloak, sits near a fire of stubble, holding the Child on her knees; behind her, St Joseph, standing; the cow and the ass. In the left foreground, shepherds look at the divine group. On the right, an old man bows, a mother with her children stretch out her arms, and other shepherds come forward. In the sky, angels unfold a streamer, and others play on the harp; on the right, an angel soars, pointing to Heaven.

1,51 m. h.; 2,13 m. br. C. — Life-size. — This picture, executed for the king in 1688, was, in 1710, placed in the cabinet of pictures, at Versailles.

*740. — Poussin. — Orpheus and Eurydice.

In the middle of a meadow, Orpheus, crowned with laurels, is sitting on a stone, in profile, to the left, his eyes raised skyward, playing on the lyre; two women at his feet and a young man, standing, listen to his song. In the middle distance, Eurydice lets a basket of flowers drop from her hands, and runs away in a fright, as she perceives a snake in the grass; a fisherman turns round, hearing the girl's scream. On the right, a clump of trees, in front of which are draperies, vases and flowers. The river Peneus flows in the background; bathers are on the bank; several men are towing a barge to the left. On the horizon, St Angel Castle in full light.

1,20 m. h.; 2 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,30 m. — Engr. by Baudet (Chalc. of the Louvre), Bovinet, Desaulx, Filhol and Landon. — This is likely the picture that Poussin executed in 1659 and gave as a present to Le Brun, En 1720, it was placed in the cabinet of the pictures at Versailles.

*562. — Le Sueur. — French. — St Scholastica appears to St Benedict.

In a lonely plain, in the right foreground, St Benedict, clad in a white frock, his hood half raised over his head, with a mitre and a crosier at his feet, is kneeling, in profile, to the left, opening his arms. He gazes at St Scholastica, in the air, draped in a wide blue cloak, her two hands laid on her breast, her head in profile, to the right; at her feet, two angels seem to uphold her; a third one, behind, disappears in the folds of her cloak. She is attended, on the left, by two young maidens, in profile, crowned with flowers, carrying palms in their hands, and, on the right, by two apostles: St Peter, in full face, stretching out his arms and looking at St Benedict; St Paul, in three quarters profile, pointing at Heaven.

1,44 m. h.; 1,50 m. br. — Fig. 0,75 m. — Engr. by Guérin. — Comes from the abbey of Marmoutiers, near Tours.

*502. — Le Brun (CHARLES). — Christ, dead, upon the knees of the Virgin.

He is lying on the stone of the tomb, in three quarters profile, to the left: the Virgin, in the middle distance, draped in a blue cloak, upholds on her knees the Saviour's head, stoops forward and lifts up a corner of the shroud. On the right, the crown of thorns, and, on a white sheet of paper, an inscription in several languages; on the left, a bit of a landscape.

1,46 m. h.; 2,22 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Le Brun painted two Depositions, one in Rome, for chancellor Séguier, the other, when coming back from Rome, at Lyons, where he stayed for some time. It is not known which of the two pictures has come to the Museum. We only know, from the inventory drawn up in 1792, that it came from St Elizabeth's church.

On a public place, the Philistines are a prey to the scourge; in the middle, a woman is lying, dead; close to her, the corpse of one of her children, and her husband, endeavouring to suppress his tears, and wanting to remove his second child, still alive. On the right, a man, stopping his mouth with his hand, accompanied by a woman and a child whom he pushes back, looks at the dead woman; near the shaft of a column, sick people wait for death. On the left, a young man turns round, to see a poor wretch who is giving up the ghost. In the middle distance, the temple of Dagon, between the columns of which one sees the Ark of the Covenant of the Israelites, and an idol thrown down on the ground; in the middle, dismayed Philistines gaze at the prodigy; on the right, a staircase that two men ascend, carrying a corpse away. In the background, a street bordered with edifices.

1,43 m. h.; 1,92 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,40 m. — Engr. by E. Picart (Chalc. of the Louvre), Baronius, Tolosani, Filhol and Landon. — This picture, executed at Rome, about 1670, for a sculptor named Matteo, was sold 1000 crowns to the duke of Richelieu, who sold it back to the king. In 1710, it was placed in the king's little apartment, at Versailles.

434. — Jouvenet. — The Awakening of Lazarus.

In the middle, Christ, draped in a violet robe and a blue cloak, a halo around his face, comes down the steps of a staircase, to the left, surrounded by his disciples: Martha and Mary are kneeling before him. On the left, in a cave, men, one of whom carry a torch, lift up the body of Lazarus, and gaze, in dismay, at the face of the dead man who awakes. In the right foreground, a crowd of bys-

3,38 m. h. ; 6,54 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Salon of 1704. — This picture comes, along with three others : nos 431, 432, 433. from the church of Saint-Martin-des-Champs, whence they were brought to the Louvre under Napoleon I. — By order of Louis XIV, they had been reproduced in a set of tapestries which were offered to the tzar Peter the Great, when he visited the Gobelins in 1717.

*560. — Le Sueur. — St Paul preaching in Ephesus.

In the middle, on the steps of a portico, the apostle, standing, in full face, draped in a red cloak over a blue tunic, holds a book in one hand, and, with the other, points at Heaven ; on the left, a man, standing, in profile, looks at St Paul and tears away a big book ; on the right, townfolks bring other books ; an old man, wrapped in a blue cloak, stoops and throws his load into a fire, that is kept up by a slave kneeling in foreground ; around the apostle, disciples, some of whom endeavour to gain the crowd over, the others listening to, and treasuring up, the words of the master. In the left background, a temple in the Ionic style ; in a niche, the statue of Diana, to whom the town was dedicated. — Signed : E. LE SUEUR, 1649.

3,44 m. h. ; 3,22 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Picard, Massard, Martinet, etc. — Bought 400 livres of the artist by Philippe Renault and Gilles Créon, in the name of the goldsmiths of the town of Paris, to be offered by the corporation, on the 1st of May 1649, to the chapter of Notre-Dame. During the Restauration, it was estimated 250 000 francs. There is a small repetition of it, with some alterations, which, after belonging to M. Le Normand, chief clerk (greffier en chef) of the Great Council, was sold in 1892, at Paris, in the coll. of M. Giron de Buzareingues.

541. — Le Brun (CHARLES). — The Family of Darius at the feet of Alexander the Great.

Followed by Ephestion, Alexander comes, from the left, to the tent of the conquered king, in front of which the female captives fall on their knees. Draped in a yellow cloak, the mother of Darius seeks to kiss the conqueror's feet ; the queen holds out her son to him ; a maiden, weeping, dries up her tears. On the right, slaves and eunuchs stoop forward to see Alexander ; on the left, the tents of the camp.

In the foreground, on the beach, various groups: on the left, travellers sitting on their luggage, and a musician playing on the guitar; in the middle, two sailors fighting, and a nobleman who draws his sword to part them; behind the fighters, a man surrounded with bales and casks. On the right, the sea, with barks under sail, and two galleys at anchor: in the middle distance, on the left, a temple preceded by a portico, and a building; in the centre, the harbour, defended by a tower; the sun, the orb of which is on the point of disappearing, lights up the top of the waves. — Signed, on a cask, to the right: CLAUDIO, inv. Romæ, 1639.

1,03 m. h.; 1,37 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,15 m. — Engr. by Lebas and Filhol. — This picture, executed for Pope Urbano VIII, was paid 5000 fr. in 1768 at the Gaignat sale, and 15 000 fr. at the Praslin sale; it was valued 120 000 francs during the Restauration. There is a repetition at the duke of Northumberland's.

312. — Lorrain (CLAUDE). — The Village Holiday.

In the middle of a meadow, a man and a woman are dancing; on the left, a gentleman and a village girl hold each other by the hand; peasants are sitting on a knoll and horsemen are at a stand. In the right foreground, two musicians play, the one on the flute, the other on the bag-pipe, and a woman skakes a tambourine. Under a clump of trees, villagers take a rest, and shepherds lean upon their staves, near their lying cattle; in the background, a river, with a five-arched bridge, and on a hill, a castle. — Signed, in the middle, on the trunk of a tree: CLAUDIO, inv. Romæ; 1639.

1,30 m. h.; 1,35 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,15 m. — Engr. by Haldenwang, Lebas, etc. — Painted for Pope Urbino VIII. — Coll. of Louis XIV. No 13 of the Liber Veritatis. A repetition is in the Hermitage Museum, in St Petersburg.

* 726. — Poussin. — Young Pyrrhus, saved.

On the left, near a river represented by a figure lying down, two men throw over a lance and a spear to the Megarians grouped on the other bank, to ask for help. A warrior, in the middle, shows young Pyrrhus, whom another soldier holds in his arms. In the foreground, a woman, kneeling, seen from the back, and two others, who turn, dismayed, to the right, and gaze at the fight engaged between their escort and the rebels; in the background, a mountain; on the left, the town, above which towers a statue of Hermes.

1,16 m. h.; 1,60 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,45 m. — Engr. by Audran (Chalc. of the Louvre), Guillaume Chasteau, Filhol and Landon. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — In 1710, this picture was placed in the king's little apartment, at Versailles. There is a repetition, smaller, in the coll. of lord Darnley, in England.

59. — Le Valentin (JEAN DE BOULONGNE, called). — A Concert in a room.

Around a table, on the right, sit a man playin on the hautboy, a woman with her hands on a spinet, and two children who sing; on the left, a military man, seen from the back, plays on the theorbo, and another, upright, holds a violoncello; in the middle distance, two musicians in the shade, one of whom plays on the violin, while the other sings.

1,75 m. h.; 2,16 m. br. C. — Half-fig., life-size. — Engr. by Filhol and Landon. — Ancient coll.

433. — Jouvenet. — The miraculous Draught.

In the middle of the foreground, a heap of fish; a woman, seated on the sand, in a red bodice and a yellow petticoat, takes a fish from the hands of a girl who comes forward, in a blue dress, carrying on her head a wicker basket; a man, clad in red, seen from the back, beckons to a fisherman who lands from the boat, on the left, to bring him his load; on the right, another fisherman fastens a rope to a pole; a third one holds nets in his hand. In the middle distance, Christ, standing, in a violet robe and a blue coat, surrounded by his disciples, raises his eyes to the sky. In the background, a boat, the sails of which are swollen by the wind, and the lake.

3,92 m. h.; 6,64 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Audran (Chalc. of the Louvre).— See the note, n^o 434, p. 239. In order to paint fishers from life, Jouvenet went to Dieppe, where he composed this picture.

724. — Poussin. — *The Rape of the Sabines.

On the left, on a raised platform, Romulus, in profile, to the right, accompanied by two Romans, raises the left hand, who supports the folds of his cloak, and gives the signal of the fray. In the foreground, on the same side, two lictors; a maiden, carried away by a soldier whose helmet has fallen down, pulls out her ravisher's hair, and a mother, on her knees, entreats Romulus. On the right, a soldier snatches a Sabine from her mother's arms. In the middle, a scene of slaughter; a Sabine man flees, a soldier lays hold of a girl's garments, a horseman carries another away on his horse. In the background, a temple and other edifices.

1,50 m. h.; 2,07 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,70 m. — Engr. by Girardet, Bonnet, etc. — The painter has treated this subject twice; one of the pictures belonged to cardinal Alviği Omodei, the other to the duchess of Aiguillon, and afterwards to M. de Ravoit. It is not known which of the two came to the collection of the Crown. Abbé Guibert, in a description of the Fontainebleau palace, says, however, that the Rape of the Sabines having belonged to M. de Ravoit was brought to the palace in 1723. In 1710, it was placed in the cabinet of pictures, at Versailles. The other picture on the same subject has been engraved by Audran.

25. — Blanchard. — *Charity.

On the left, a young woman, in three quarters profile, the head to the left, dressed in a half-opened yellow bodice and a blue cloak, is sitting on the ground, and leans with the right hand on the shaft of a column. She looks at a child standing against her shoulder, gives her breast to another, and holds on her knees a third one, who ports with two others, seated on the right. In the background, a portico supported by columns.

1,40 m. h.; 1,36 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Garnier and Landon. — Placed in 1710 in the cabinet of pictures, at Versailles, it was brought to the "salle de Mercure" in 1741.

* 972. — Vouet (SIMON). — The Virgin, the Child and St John.

Sitting at the foot of a tree, the Virgin, dressed in a pink robe, a blue cloak and a yellow veil, in three quarters profile, to the left, stoops to the Child, lying on her knees. On the right, little St John, girl with a lamb's skin and carrying a cross surmounted with a streamer, holds in his hands the Saviour's foot.

1,41 m. h.; 0,95 m. br. C. — Knee-piece, life-size. — Engr. by Filhol and Landon. — Belonged to the duke of Penthièvre; was acquired by the State under Napoleon I.

* 501. — Le Brun (CHARLES). — The Crucifix with the Angels.

In the middle, Christ, nailed up on the cross, in three quarters profile, to the left, his eyes skyward, breathes his last. At the foot of the cross, in the foreground, a blue cushion bearing the coat of arms of France, on which a crown is laid; on both sides, angels kneeling, at prayers; others come down from Heaven, their hands clasped, their eyes fixed on the cross. Landscape in the background.

0,74 m. h.; 1,28 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,70 m. — Engr. by Gérard Edelinck and Pierre Drevet. — This picture, the subject of which was suggested to the painter by Anne of Austria, decorated, at first, the queen's oratory in the Louvre; it was afterwards brought to Versailles, in the cabinet of pictures. "When Le Brun had completed his picture, he came and submitted it to the queen, who, being pleased at seeing her own idea expressed so well, gave her portrait in a box set with diamonds to the painter, and was so kind as to attach it to him with her own hands." (Mémoire read to the Academy by Guillet de Saint-Georges.)

* 728. — Poussin. — Mars and Rhea Sylvia.

In the middle of a meadow, Sylvia, the daughter of Numitor, is asleep, leaning against a knoll, in three quarters profile, to the right; at her feet, a vase, and, in the folds of her blue robe, a child lying; on the left, two Loves shoot arrows, and a third one soars in the air. In the middle distance, on the right, Tiber, under the shape of an old man, seen from the back, is sitting, with Romulus, Remus and the She-wolf by his sides. In the air, Mars comes forward in a chariot drawn by two lions. Landscape in the background; on the left, a clump of trees.

0,74 m. h.; 1,46 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,60 m. — Engr. by Filhol and Landon. — Ancient coll.

In the middle, an ecclesiastic wearing a black gown, a cloak and a calotte of the same colour, with a white band, stands in three quarters profile, to the right. He turns his head to the left, and seems to point out, with his hand brought forward, some object to his pupil. The latter, dressed in black, with a guipure collar, his left hand on his breast, holding with his right hand his hat on his hip, his auburn hair in disorder, stoops to look, in profile, to the right, where are a red-carpeted table and a column, upon which an escutcheon is painted; landscape in the left background.

1,34 m. h.; 1,40 m. br. C. — Knee-piece, life-size. — This picture, sold 602 livres in 1779 at the La Live de July sale, was acquired by the Crown in 1782, at the Sainte-Foix sale, for 900 livres.

* 315. — Lorrain (CLAUDE). — David, anointed by Samuel.

On the left, under the peristyle of a temple, surmounted by an attic decorated with statues, Samuel, among bystanders, anoints David, who leans on a staff. In the middle, a man is going to the temple, followed by two dogs and by sacrificers, who prepare a stake where they will immolate a ram; on the right, in the shade of spreading trees, three women, sitting, one of whom holds a child, and a shepherd standing; afar off, flocks grazing, a bridge thrown over a river and leading to a town, and mountains which limit the horizon. On a fragment of bas-relief, in the foreground, one reads : Romæ, 1647.

1,19 m. h. ; 1,50 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,30 m. — No 69 of the Liber Veritatis. — Engr. by Filhol.

In a vault faintly lighted by a lamp hooked on the arch, to the left, the body of the saint is standing, in three quarters profile, to the right, the hands crossed on the breast, the head raised to the sky; the pope, kneeling, dressed in a white rochet, a crimson velvet camail, and a calotte of the same colour, lifts up the russet gown of the monk, to gaze at the marks on his body. By the left side of the pope, two figures, at prayers; behind him, cardinal Aslergius in a red gown, and a man, still young, who is believed to be the painter; in the right foreground, two monks, kneeling, in profile, the one holding a kindled torch, the other carrying a field-glass to his eyes. — Signed on the pedestal, to the left : L. de LAHIRE. IN. et F., 1630.

2,31 m. h. ; 1,64 m. br. C. — Under life-size. — Engr. by Forster, Filhol and London. — Was in the chapel of St Francis, in the church of the Capuchin Friars, rue d'Orléans; brought to the Louvre under Napoleon I. — "It is the best work of the painter. The effect of the light is well managed, the colouring is firm and true; but the flesh tones in the face of the saint is not sufficiently different from the hue of life." (Guzot.)

* 317. — Lorrain (CLAUDE). — View of a Sea-port.

In the left foreground, on the beach, a group composed of a man and a woman, sitting, and two children, standing; in the middle, two warriors, in the Roman garb, attended by a page holding a dog, prepare to enter a boat, in which there are already a rower and a servant who greets them. In the middle distance, on the left, a fort with two towers, backed by high mountains, and a pier. On the right, a temple, with Ionic columns, topped by a terrace. Ships lie at anchor, and boats are sailing and rowing; the glow of the sun is weakened by a mist. — Signed on the stone, to the left : CLAUDE in Roma, 1646.

In three quarters profile, to the left, his face set in a grey wig, he wears a dark green velvet garment, with cuffs, and a violet cloak; round his neck a white cravat loosely tied up, and the cross of the Holy Ghost; his right hand, brought forward, seems to show a table which supports a volume that he holds with his left hand, and on which several instruments of architecture are displayed; on the left, a green arm-chair.

1,18 m. h.; 0,90 m. br. C. — Knee-piece, life-size. — Engr. by Drevet (Chalc. of the Louvre). — Acquired in 1860. — Coll. of Napoléon III.

* 557. — Le Sueur. — The Deposition.

In the middle, before the cross, Joseph of Arimathea, St John and Nicodemus lift up the body of Christ, whose feet, on the left, are kissed by the Magdalen, stooping to the right. In the right foreground, a Holy Woman, draped in a yellow cloak, kneeling, in profile, and an apostle, standing, spread out a shroud. The Virgin, in a pink robe, her head covered by a blue cloak, is kneeling farther and looks at the dismal ceremony. Mary Salome stands by her side, her hands clasped; against the cross, two ladders are set up; a man comes down one of them, and puts a hammer into a basket, that a child holds out to him. Landscape in the background; on the left, Jerusalem.

1,34 m. h.; 1,32 m. br. C. — Under life-size. — Engr. by Duflos, Filhol and Landon. — This picture, which was placed above the altar in the chapel of the Le Camus family, in St Gervais church, was transferred to the Louvre under Napoleon I.

547. — Le Nain (the BROTHERS). — St Peter's Denial.

0,97 m. h.; 1,52 m. br. C. — Half-fig., life-size. — Bequeathed in 1870 by M. H.-L. Vallée.

510. — Le Brun (CHARLES). — The Battle of Arbela.

Among the combatants, Alexander, on horseback, comes forward to the right, sword in hand, followed by the soothsayer Aristander, in a white robe, who shows to the Greeks an eagle soaring above the king's head; on the right, Darius, in a chariot, draws his bow; in the middle distance, the army of the Persians and the fighting elephants; in the foreground, a heap of corpses, from which an officer clad in a gorgeous costume withdraws with terror.

4,70 m. h.; 12,65 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Audran and Filhol. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — See the note, no 513, page 235.

* 636. — Mignard. — Hope.

In the middle, a young woman sits on an anchor placed upon a beam. In three quarters profile, to the left, wearing a sky blue dress, a yellow cloak floating behind her shoulder, a crown of wild flowers in her fair hair, she raises her head to the right and crosses her hands forwards, in a praying attitude. On the right, two Loves are seated, embracing each other; one of them holds a snake biting its own tail, the emblem of immortality; on the left, a Love, carrying a palm, offers to the goddess a crown of white flowers. — Signed, on the left: P. MIGNARD, pinxit 1692, Ætatis suæ, 80.

* 52. — Boulogne (BON) or de Boullongne. — St Benedict raising a child from the dead.

In the foreground, the corpse of a child is lying on the floor; on the right, the parents, turned to the left, are on their knees, the father stretching out his arms to his child, the mother offering up her prayers, the sister hiding her face in her hands. Behind the child, St Benedict, his face encircled in a luminous halo, falls upon his knees and implores the Lord; on the left, two monks, standing, look dismayed. In the left background, the fluted columns of a temple; on the right, a landscape.

1,08 m. h.; 2,35 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,75 m. — Engr. by Filhol and Landon. — Ancient coll.

* 555. — Le Sueur. — Angel's Salute.

On the right, on a prayer-stool, the Virgin, dressed in a pink robe, a blue cloak and a yellow veil, is kneeling in profile, to the left; she listens, with her eyes lowered, to the archangel, who presents her with a branch of lily and points at Heaven. In the clouds, the Holy Ghost, two angels at prayers, and heads of cherubs.

2,97 m. h.; 2,27 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Landon. — This picture, which had been painted for the church of Mitry, near Paris, as a token of the friendship that the artist entertained for a landlord of that place, M. Durand de Linois, was exchanged, in 1804, for a picture by Doyen, and transferred to the Louvre.

* 318. — Lorrain (CLAUDE). — A Sea-port.

On the right, at the foot of a staircase, two barks, moored; in the middle, on a terrace, a group of figures to whom a fisherman, on the right, is coming up; on the left, near a temple, of which one Corinthian column only is to be seen, a family, seated; ships are cruising in the road; on the horizon, a tower, a town rising like an amphitheatre, and a high mountain.

*727. — Poussin. — Mars and Venus.

On the left, the goddess, entirely naked, is stretched out on a blue drapery, in three quarters profile, to the right; she is about to embrace Mars, who, lying by her side, his helmet on, takes up her chin. In the middle distance, Venus's chariot, close to which are Loves, the one holding a torch, the other letting a dove fly away; in the middle, a Love, mounted on a stag, with an arrow in his hand, rushes to the left, on a group of Loves who carry the shield of Mars and kindled torches. In the background, a landscape, lighted up by the setting sun.

0,81 m. h.; 1,45 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,60 m. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — Formerly in the cabinet of pictures, at Versailles.

In the middle, on the banks of the Jordan, St John, in three quarters profile, to the right, girt with the skin of a beast, baptizes two men kneeling before him; on the right, a mother presents her child; near her, a group of three women and a lad wearing a rich drapery; on the left, near a tree, two men, seated on the ground, pull off their clothes; in the middle distance, three old men standing, as rapt in thought, and a horseman, gaze at the ceremony. A bark with passengers crosses the river, and is reflected by the water. Hilly landscape in the background.

0,94 m. h.; 1,20 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,38 m. — Engr. by Audran (Chalc. of the Louvre), Filhol and Landon. — This picture, painted about 1640, for cavaliere Cassiano del Posso, belonged to André Le Nôtre before coming to the king's collection; Poussin executed a repetition of it, of a smaller size, which he sent, in 1648, to M. de Chantelou the elder.

*739. — Poussin. — Winter, or the Great Flood.

The water rushes as a cascade into a rent between two walls of rocks; in the foreground, a horseman and a wrecked man, clinging to a plank, struggle against the stream. On the right, a boat handled by a man, into which a swimmer endeavours to hoist himself, comes alongside the shore; a woman, standing in the boat, holds ont a child to her husband who is on the rock already. On the left, the tempter serpent rises, hissing; on the cascade, a bark is shattered into pieces; two passengers have been thrown overboard; two others have taken refuge on the stern, and pray to God; afar off, the ark of Noah floats upon the waves and appears in the fog through which lightning flashes.

1,17 m. h.; 1,60 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,28 m. — Engr. by Audran (Chalc. of the Louvre), Pierre Laurent, etc. — See the note, n^o 736, page 245 " Nothing is equal to the cold and ghastly horror of this black picture; it is impossible to bring out a greater effect with more simple means." (Th. GAUTIER.) Valued 15 000 francs during the Empire, and 120 000 francs during the Restauration.

789. — Rigaud. — Portraits of unknown people.

On the left, a man, clad in a yellow dressing-gown and a yellow and red turban, is turned in three quarters profile, to the right, towards two brown-haired women, both in three quarters profile, to the left. The one, in the foreground, wears a violet dress and a blue velvet cloak, the folds of which she draws up with her right hand; the other, in the middle distance, younger, with a white tucker and a grey drapery, has a grey fillet in her hair, and carries her right arm forward.

975. — Vouet (SIMON). — *The Entombment.

Two angels, upholding Christ under the arms, seat him on the stone of the tomb, wrapped up in a shroud, in three quarters profile, to the left. In the left foreground, the Magdalen, kneeling, holds in her hands the feet of the Saviour: in the middle distance, the Virgin, standing, in tears, and St John, his hands clasped, are at prayers; on the right, in a basket, a hammer, nails and a rope.

0,55 m. h.; 0,43 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,40 m. — Bought in 1818 of M. Bertaut for 1000 francs.

554. — Le Sueur. — *The father of Tobias giving instructions to his son.

In the middle, young Tobias, with a blue robe, a pink cloak, and a staff in his hand, comes down a flight of stairs; he turns in three quarters profile to the left, to listen to his father, who, draped in a yellow cloak indicates the way he has to go; on the left, a house; on the right, a terrace which looks on the country.

1,48 m. h.; 1,16 m. br. C. — Under life-size. — Was probably one of the set of pictures relating to the history of Tobias, that the painter had executed for the house of M. de Fieubet, treasurer of the Royal treasury (trésorier de l'épargne), situated rue des Lions, not far from the Arsenal.

* 788. — Rigaud. — Portraits of unknown characters.

In the middle, a man, sitting, in a white wig, a chestnut-brown garment and a violet cloak, in three quarters profile to the right, turns to a young woman and lays his hand on her shoulder. The latter, with pale yellow hair, in a blue dress, sits on a stone bench covered with a rich drapery, in three quarters profile, to the left, and holds out a bunch of cherries to a little boy who is seated and plays with a dog.

* 720. — Poussin. — The death of Sapphira.

On a terrace, on the right, St Peter, in three quarters profile, in a blue tunic and a yellow cloak, accompanied by two apostles, stretches out, to the left, his hand to Sapphira, who, clad in a brown gown, a red bodice and a blue cloak, falls dead; a woman assists her, while a man, upholding her, seems to intercede in her behalf; in the middle distance, a mother, having her child in her arms, tries to draw away a dismayed woman who gazes at the corpse, and a man runs off, terror-stricken. In the background, a sheet of water, surrounded with edifices.

1,22 m. h.; 2 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,70 m. — Engr. by Pesne and Massard, Filhol and Landon. — Before belonging to Louis XIV, who had lodged it at Meudon, this picture was in the coll. of M. Fromont de Veines.

* 495. — Le Brun (CHARLES). — The Child Jesus, asleep.

In the middle of a room, behind a little bed, the Virgin sitting, holds in her lap the Child Jesus, asleep; she turns in three quarters profile, to the left, and commands silence to St John, who crawls on his knees, upheld by St Elizabeth. In the middle distance, St Joseph. On the right, St Anne holding a swaddling-band; behind her, Jehoiakim; on the right, under a lighted stove, a cat. Through the window, a bit of a landscape and a tower appear. — Signed, in the right, with the three letters C. L. B. blended together, and dated 1655.

0,87 m. h.; 1,18 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,65 m. — Engr. by Poilly, Filhol and Landon. — This picture, known under the name of le Silence, belonged to the count of Armagnac, master of the horse, who gave it in 1696 to Louis XIV; it was placed, at Versailles, in the little cabinet near the little gallery of the king.

On the right, Hagar, in a white robe and a yellow cloak, sits on a stone, in three quarters profile to the right; at her feet, a bottle-gourd; by her side, a staff and a bundle; she turns round, in profile, to the angel who soars in the air, and points out to her the spring of water, at the foot of a tree; on the right, Ishmael, asleep. Landscape in the background.

1.59 m. h.; 1.14 m. br. C. — Half-life-size. — Engr. by Cotwyck. — This picture formerly decorated the room of M^{me} de Tonnay-Charente, in her house of the rue Neuve-Saint-Médéric. Bought 5000 francs. in 1813, of M^{me} Jouffroy, by Louis-Philippe.

* 544. — Le Nain (attributed to the BROTHERS). — A Procession inside a church.

The procession marches to the right; at the head of it two singing boys carry lighted wax-tapers; a deacon holds the episcopal crosier; another, by his side, holds out the Gospel; a third precedes the bishop by a few paces. The latter, having on his head a mitre set with gems, wears a rich dalmatic and red gloves, embroidered with gold; two choristers, gorgeously attired, bring up the rear; a brocade curtain is drawn up in the background. On the right, one perceives, above an altar, a Deposition, and, in the shade, a group of worshippers.

0.34 m. h.; 0.65 m. br. Copper. — Fig. 0.38 m. — Ancient coll. — Formerly attributed to Pourbus, the younger; was in the cabinet of bailiff de Breteuil, who sold it 1003 livres in 1785.

* 733. — Poussin. — The Concert.

In a landscape, three Loves are seated on the ground, singing; one of them holds a music-book; a fourth one, standing, plays on the violoncello; in the foreground, a fifth one comes forward to the right, carrying in each hand a crown of flowers. Hilly background.

0.57 m. h.; 0.52 m. br. C. — Fig. 0.35 m. — Ancient coll. — Poussin, later on, executed a large picture representing the same scene, which was engraved by Fabrizio Chiari, in 1674.

* 782. — Rigaud. — Portrait of Philip V, King of Spain (1683-1746).

He stands in three quarters profilé, to the left, with a fair wig, black clothes, the ribbon of the Holy Ghost crosswise, the Golden Fleece round the neck. He keeps his left hand on his hip, above the hilt of his sword; his right hand leans on a crown placed, to the left, on a table covered with a red carpet; on the right, an arm-chair; in the background, red hangings, drawn up.

2.70 m. h.; 1.55 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — This picture, painted in 1700, when Philip V was going to take possession of his throne, figured in the Salon of 1704, and was placed at Versailles, in the king's cabinet.

* 716. — Poussin. — The Adulteress in the presence of Christ.

In the middle of a public place, the adulteress has fallen on her knees. In three quarters profile, to the right, drawing up the folds of her blue robe, she implores Jesus, who, standing, draped in a red cloak, stretches out his hands to her. On the right, a group of five bystanders, three of whom stoop to read the words that Jesus has written on the ground. On the left, three other persons look at this scene, and a fourth one, laughing, points at the guilty woman's accomplice, who runs away; in the middle distance, a woman comes forward, holding a child. Architectural decoration and rich edifices in the background.

1,22 m. h.; 1,95 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,52 m. — Engr. by Audran (Chalc. of the Louvre), Fonbonne and Landon. — This picture, which was executed in 1653 for Le Nôtre, comptroller of the buildings, was, in 1710, in the new castle of Meudon.

* 714. — Poussin. — The Holy Family.

Sitting at the foot of a clump of trees, near a pedestal, the Virgin holds in her lap the Child Jesus. Both look, on the right, at St John, who, upheld by St Anne, holds out a streamer, on which one reads: Agnus Dei; behind St Anne, St Joseph is rapt in thought. On the left, houses; on the right, ruins upon a hillock. Hilly background.

* 314. — Lorrain (CLAUDE). — Cleopatra landing at Tarsus.

On the right, Cleopatra, with her female attendants, ascends the steps of a flight of stairs, leaning on the arm of an officer. Antony comes out of his palace and advances to her, followed by a page who carries his sword. In the foreground, two persons, the one standing, the other sitting, and a young man, leading dogs in a leash, are present at the interview; on the left, two galleys lie at anchor, and from one of them precious objects are transported into a boat; on the sea, boats; afar off, a tower. The sun is reflected by the waves.

1,19 m. h.; 1,70 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,28 m. — No 63 of the Liber Veritatis. — This picture, executed in 1647 at Rome for cardinal Angelo Giovo, came afterwards to the coll. of king Louis XIV. — Valued, during the Restauration, 120 000 francs. — A repetition was sold in England, in 1795.

* 735. — Poussin. — Time shelters Truth from the attacks of Envy and Discord.

In the middle, among clouds, Time, under the shape of an old man, a blue drapery round his waist, in three quarters profile, to the right, locks his arms round Truth, a blonde young woman, entirely naked, who opens her arms, in profile, to the right; by her side flies a Genius, carrying a bill-hook, and a serpent which bites its own tail. In the lower part, leaning on a circular balustrade, on the left, Discord, in three quarters profile, to the right, a red cloak thrown over a half-unhooked blue robe, angrily looks at the centre-group, while brandishing a poniard and a lighted torch; on the right, Envy, in three quarters profile, to the left, her body naked down to the waist, the lower part wrapped up in a green drapery, snatches off the snakes which twist in her hair and round her arms.

Round-shaped. Diam. 2,97 m. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Audran (Chalc. of the Louvre), Picart, Devillers, Filhol and Landon. This ceiling was executed in 1641 for cardinal Richelieu. It afterwards belonged to the Crown, and, in 1710, was in the great cabinet of the king, in the Louvre. "At the moment when, persecuted by criticism, he left France to settle in Rome, Poussin wanted to express what he felt in his heart and painted this allegory, a homage that his disregarded genius paid to itself." (Charles BLANC.)

* 316. — Lorrain (CLAUDE). — Ulysses restores Chryseis to her father.

On the left, in front of the temple of Apollo, at the top of a broad flight of stairs, high priest Chryses, surrounded by a great crowd of people, receives her daughter at the hands of Ulysses. In the foreground, the sacrificers and the oxen, adorned for the ceremony, are in a boat. On the quay, several groups: a child seated speaks to two young men standing; a negro offers a little chest to noblemen; porters transport goods; two Turks are talking together. On the right, near the peristyle of a temple, two barks sheer off; in the harbour, Ulysses's galley lies at anchor near a polygonal tower; on the horizon, the offing. The sun shines on the waves.

1.19 m. h.; 1.50 m. br. C. — Fig. 0.17 m. — Engr. by Barrière (1664). — This picture, the figures of which are by Filippo Lauri, was painted about 1648 for prince de Liancourt. It was acquired afterwards by Louis XIV. — No 8 of the Liber Veritatis.

559. — Le Sueur. — St Gervase and St Protase, brought before Astasius, refuse to sacrifice to Jupiter.

On the left, a statue of Jupiter is erected, close to which are the high priest and a sacrificer, kneeling, who holds a ram crowned with flowers; in the foreground, two men are standing: the one, bare-headed, draped in a blue cloak, carries in his hand an unfolded roll; the other, with a turban, in profile, to the right, looks at the two saints, in chains, dressed in white robes, whom soldiers drag along to the altar that is pointed out to them by general Astasius, sitting on a throne under a portico, surrounded by his escort; on the right, the crowd, in a street of Milan.

3.57 m. h.; 6.84 m. br. — Life-size. — Engr. by Audran (Chalc. of the Louvre), Baquoy, Filhol and Landon. — Was formerly placed in the nave of the church Saint-Gervais, at Paris, above the churchwardens' seat, opposito the pulpit.

* 734. — Poussin. — The Shepherds in Arcadia.

Near a clump of trees, three shepherds, leaning on long staves, and a young girl stand before an ancient tomb. In the middle, one of them, in profile to the right, kneels and spells an epitaph: Et in Arcadia Ego; his left companion, in a meditative attitude, looks at him; the one on the right side turns round, in three quarters profile, and shows the inscription to the maiden, in profile to the left, dressed in a blue robe and a yellow cloak with white fillets in her fair hair, her left hand leaning on her hip, her right hand laid on the young shepherd's shoulder. Hilly landscape in the background.

0.85 m. h.; 1.21 m. br. C. m. — Fig. 0.58. — Engr. by Picart the Roman, Mathieu Albert, Reindel, Filhol and Landon. — In 1710 was in the king's little apartment in the Louvre. A repetition, with a slight alteration, is in the coll. of the Earl of Devonshire. — This picture expresses, with a melancholy candour, the shortness of life. Never an epitaph of the Antology, summed up in one distich by Meleager, was softer or lighter." (TH. GAUTIER.)

arm-chair, in three quarters profile, to the left; she holds in her lap the Child Jesus, laid on a green cushion and clothed in a white shirt, and she presents a bunch of grapes to him. The child takes the bunch with the right hand, and, with the left, shelters himself under his mother's veil; on the left, upon a table, a basket with fruit; in the background, a column, and a curtain sliding on a rod.

1,23 m. h.; 0,95 m. br. — Knee-piece, life-size. — This picture, executed in Rome, belonged to count de Matignon, then to his son, the count of Valentinois; in 1710, it was at Versailles, in the cabinet of pictures.

* 741. — Poussin. — The Judgment of Solomon.

In the middle, Solomon, in a white robe and a red cloak, sits, in full face, on a throne raised between two columns in serpentine; he stretches out his hands towards the two mothers, kneeling in the foreground; she who is on the right side, carrying the corpse of her child, in profile to the left, seems to ask for the execution of the sentence; the other mother, seen from the back, raises her arms to the sky and implores Solomon; on her left, a soldier will pierce with his sword the child, that he holds by a foot; in the middle distance, a group of bystanders, one of whom, leaning on a shield, turns his head aside; on the right, two men, three women and a child, whose gestures express terror.

1 m. h.; 1,50 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,55 m. — Engr. by Chasteau, Dughet, etc. — This picture, executed in 1649, belonged to M. Pointel and to president de Harlay, before entering the collection of Louis XIV. In 1710, it was at Versailles, in the cabinet of pictures.

* 781. — Rigaud. — Portrait of king Louis XIV (1638-1715).

On a raised platform, at the foot of his throne, the king stands, in three quarters to the left, the head almost facing the front, with a brown periwig. He is clad in the royal blue cloak, strewn with flower-de-luces, lined with ermine, and wears round the neck the order of the Holy Ghost. His left hand leans on his hip, above his sword; with his right hand, he holds the sceptre; on the left, upon a stool, the crown and the hand of Justice; above the throne, a red drapery is drawn up, showing a column, on the pedestal of which one reads: Peint par HYACINTHE RIGAUD, 1701.

2,76 m. h.; 1,06 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Drevet (1712). — This picture, destined at first to the king of Spain Philip V, was found so strikingly like, that Louis XIV ordered the painter to make a copy of it for his grand-son, and placed the original in the hall of the throne, at Versailles.

* 705. — Poussin. — Moses rescued from the Waters.

In the middle, on the bank, the daughter of Pharaoh, standing between two of her female attendants, leans on the shoulders of the younger one; she is dressed in a yellow robe, clasped on the shoulders, and wears a white veil on her plaited fair hair; turning in profile to the right, she beckons to one of her attendants to take the child, that a fisherman holds out in a wicker cradle. On the river, a boat, with three figures in it, moves away to the opposite bank, where two men are standing; on the left of the centre-group, the Nile, under the shape of an old man, lying, seen from the back, holds a cornucopia; in the background, a bridge, a pyramid, and, on the horizon, a hill, on which a town is built.

0,85 m. h.; 1,20 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,58 m. — Engr. by Mariette, Laurent, etc. — Before belonging to the Crown, this picture figured in the collection of the comptroller of the buildings, Le Nôtre.

* 452. — La Hyre. — The Virgin and the Child.

Upon a cushion laid on a stone socle, the Child Jesus is lying; on the left, the Virgin, in profile, with a red robe and a blue cloak, stoops to the Child, who holds in his right hand a piece of her veil, and kisses it; in the background, in a landscape, a bit of a wall in ruins. — Signed: L. DE LA HYRE, in. et F., 1642.

1,14 m. h.; 0,92 m. br. C. — Half-fig., life-size. — Engr. by Filhol and Landon. — This picture, placed in a Parisian church, was brought to the Louvre under Napoleon I.

She sits in a red arm-chair, in three quarters profile, to the right; over her dress, in burnished gold brocade, she wears a blue cloak, lined with ermine; a green veil covers her brown hair. Her right hand is laid on her breast; with her left hand, she holds a book half-open; on the right, upon a table, an hour-glass.

1,30 m. h.; 0,96 m. br. C. — Knee-piece, life-size. — Painted in the last years of the painter's life; was destined to the community of Saint-Cyr.

* 563. — Le Sueur. — The Mass of St Martin, bishop of Tours.

On the right, before the altar, St Martin, in profile, his hands clasped, officiates, having by his sides two deacons, one of whom looks at the globe of fire that appears above the head of the saint; at the foot of the altar, a priest raises the patine, a monk holds the mitre, and another, the crosier, and, on the right, a singing boy brings the censer; on the left, some bystanders, and, in the foreground, two women, kneeling; in the background, arcades, closed with a curtain.

1,12 m. h.; 0,84 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,45 m. — Engr. by Laurent, Filhol and Landon. — Painted in 1651 for the monastery of Marmoutiers; brought to the Louvre under Napoleon I. There is a repetition in the Museum of Tours. The sketch belongs to the king of Bavaria (Museum of Munich).

* 605. — Le Sueur (attributed to). — Christ, tied up to a column.

In the middle of a gallery, two tormentors tie up to a column, with his hands behind his back, Christ, whose naked body sinks down to the left, and whose head, in profile, expresses pain; in the right foreground, a third tormentor brings a rope.

1,28 m. h.; 0,66 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,58 m. — Engr. by Masquelier junior. — Entered into some inventories as being the work of Simon Vouet.

* 498. — Le Brun (CHARLES). — The entrance of Jesus Christ into Jerusalem.

Jesus, in a blue robe, his eyes raised to the sky, mounting an ass, comes forward to the right. He is surrounded by a great crowd of people, who bow before him; some spread out pieces of cloth on his passage, others strew the ground with flowers; in the left foreground, a man, standing, draped in a red cloak; on the right, near a window, an old man sitting on the ground, a little child playing with a dog and a mother suckling her babe and turning round to talk with an old woman; in the background, the gate of the town.

1,52 m. h.; 2,14 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,65 m. — Engr. by Simonneau and Landon. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — This picture, presented to the king on the 13th of April 1689, was, in 1710, placed in the cabinet of pictures, at Versailles.

* 722. — Poussin. — French. — The Ecstasy of St Paul.

The saint, in ecstasy, turned in three quarters profile to the right, opening his arms, is carried up by three angels, two of whom uphold his legs; the third one takes his arm with one hand, and, raising the other, points at Heaven. In the lower part, at the entrance of an edifice, a book, and a sheathless sword. Landscape in the background.

1,48 m. h.; 1,20 m. br. C. — Under life-size. — Engr. by Chasteau, Dughet and Laugier. — This picture, painted at Rome in 1650, was bought by Louis XIV of Jabach, who had got it from Scarron, for whom Poussin had executed it. There is in England another picture on the same subject, painted by Poussin in 1648 for M. de Chantelou, which passed afterwards into the gallery of the duke of Orléans.

505. — Le Brun (CHARLES). — The Magdalen.

In three quarters profile, to the right, the head in full face, lifted towards the sky, she is kneeling before a piece of furniture on which is a mirror. She seems to snatch off her blue cloak, while, above her head, a luminous cloud is coming down; at her feet, stuffs and a jewel casket; in the background, through a window, one descries a tower in the country.

2,52 m. h.; 1,71 m. br. — Life-size. — Engr. by Edelinck. — This picture, given by M. Le Camus to the convent of the bare-footed Carmelite nuns of the rue Saint-Jacques, was brought to the Louvre under Napoleon I. — It is said that the painter had taken Mlle de La Vallière as the model of his Magdalen.

* 530. — Lefebvre (CLAUDE). — Portrait of a man.

In three quarters profile, to the left, he wears, over a brown wig, a little black calotte, and is dressed in black with a white frill. On a stone sill, one reads, to the left: A° 1667.

* 540. — Le Nain (the BROTHERS). — A Farrier in his smithy.

In the middle, near his forge, lighted up by the fire, stands, in three quarters profile, to the right, the farrier, holding an iron bar, that he is going to place on the anvil. By his right side, a woman standing, in full face; and, in the foreground, a workman sitting, in profile, to the left, holding in his hands a glass and a wicker bottle, and having a child near him; on the left, in the shade, close to the forge, two children stand, one of whom pulls the chain of the bellows.

0,69 m. h.; 0,57 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,55 m. — Engr. by Levasseur, Claessens, Carré (Chalc. of the Louvre). — Ancient coll. — Figured in the sale of the duke of Choiseul (1772), where it was knocked down at 1008 livres, and in that of prince of Condé (1777), where it reached 2460 livres.

* 500. — Le Brun (CHARLES). — Jesus, raised on the Cross.

In the middle, tormentors raise, to the right, the cross upon which Christ is nailed up. On the left, the Virgin kneeling, at prayers; by her sides, the Magdalen, the Holy Women and St John. In the foreground, soldiers, who share the clothes of the sufferers; on the right, a horseman draws back the lookers-on. In the background, the escort, of which the pikes only are to be seen; on the horizon, Jerusalem.

1,56 m. h., 2 m. C. — Fig. 0,53 m. — Engr. by Benoit Audran in 1706, and Landon. — This picture, composed on a desire of Louis XIV, was presented on the 27th of June 1685, to the king, who rose from the council to come and admire it. He had it placed in his little apartment, at Versailles.

* 311. — Lorrain (CLAUDE). — View of Campo Vaccino, in Rome.

In the foreground, a beggar, who drags himself along, common people who are talking, and three noblemen, who look out in the country; on the left, the arch of Septimius Severus, the colonnade of the temple of Antoninus; in the background, the Capitol; on the right, surrounded with trees, the portico of the temple of Concord; farther on, the columns of the temple of Jupiter Stator; in the Forum, downwards, people walking.

0,56 m. h.; 0,72 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,10 m. — Engr. by Bovinet. — There is an etching of it by Claude Lorrain himself. — Painted for M. de Béthune, ambassador of the king in Rome, as well as n^o 310. These two pictures were a part of the collection of countess de Verrue; they were bought together 3500 livres at her sale, then 6200 at the sale of Gaignat (1768), 11 904 at Blondel de Gagny's (1779), and 11 003 at Poulain's (1789), by the duke of Brissac, from whose cabinet they went to the Louvre.

* 732. — Poussin. — The Triumph of Flora.

In a chariot, that two winged Loves draw to the left, sits Flora, with a white robe and a red cloak. In three quarters profile, to the left, she looks at a warrior, who presents to her flowers upon a shield; above her head, two Loves carry crowns; round the chariot, lads and girls dance and offer flowers; in the foreground, a woman kneeling, plucks flowers; a River and a Naiad, lying, look at the goddess.

1,63 m. h.; 2,41 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,80 m. — Engr. by Fessard (Chalc. of the Louvre), Audran, Herthemets, Filhol and Landon. — Painted about 1630, for cardinal Omodei; was bought by Louis XIV, who placed it in the cabinet of pictures at Versailles, whence it was brought to Fontainebleau in 1723.

* 310. — Lorrain (CLAUDE). — View of a Harbour.

In the foreground, on the sandy beach, several groups of figures: some are talking; others surround a merchant, seated on a chest, with earthenwares before her. On the left, a galley, the flags of which bear the arms of France. On the right, a triumphal arch, under which walking people pass, and an edifice to which leads a wide stair case, near to a building surmounted by a signal-mast; afar off, the sea and ships at anchor. — Signed, on a cask, to the right :

CLAUDIO, inv. Romæ, 1639.

1,03 m. h.; 1,37 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,15 m. — Engr. by Lebas and Filhol. — Painted for Pope Urbino VIII. — It was paid 5000 livres, in 1768, at the sale of M. de Gaignat, and 15 000 livres in 1793 at that of M. de Praslin. Valued 120 000 francs, during the Restauration. A repetition is in the collection of the duke of Northumberland.

* 496. — Le Brun (CHARLES). — The Holy Family (the " Bénédicité ", or the Grace before meat).

Sitting on the right, behind a table covered with a table-cloth, on which are placed a loaf and a plate containing fruit, Jesus, in a white tunic, clasps his hands with self-collectedness, and, in three quarters profile, to the left, looks at St Joseph, who stands, leaning upon a staff. In the middle distance, behind Jesus, the Virgin, smiling, draws up her blue veil; in the foreground, on the floor, a ewer and carpenter's tools. Through a wide opening, the country is seen in the background.

1,39 m. h.; 0,89 m. br. C. — Half-life-size. — Engr. by Edelinek, Gandolfi, etc. This picture, executed by Le Brun, after he had returned from Italy, before 1661, decorated, in St Paul's church, the chapel erected by the carpenters of the brotherhood of St Joseph. — Musée Napoléon.

* 69. — Bourdon (SÉBASTIEN). — The Presentation in the Temple.

In a circular edifice, the Virgin in profile, to the right with a pink robe, a blue cloak and a white veil, ascends the steps of the altar, and puts the Child Jesus into the high priest's hands. On the left, several bystanders; one of them brings doves in a basket; on the right, a woman, stretched out on the ground, with a child by her side; farther on, a singing boy swings the censer. On the ceiling hangs a seven-branched chandelier. — Signed, to the right :—

C. — Breast-piece, life-size. — This is perhaps the picture that decorated, together with No 631, page 233, the church of the Jacobine Friars, and is mentioned by Thierry. The painter's daughter, marchioness of Feuquières, served, it is said, as a model to her father. It was brought to the Louvre under Napoleon I. En 1854, it was, by order of the emperor Napoleon III, placed aboard the flag-ship of the Baltic fleet

In the middle, Rebekah, dressed in a blue robe, that she draws up with her left hand, keeping the other hand on her breast, turns, in three quarters profile, on the left, to Eliezer, who, in an oriental garb, with a turban on his head, and a knife and arrows on his side, offers jewels to her. On the right, three maidens, leaning on the margin of a well; on the left, nine other maidens, one of whom pulls up the well's rope; another, turning her head, pours out water into a vase; the others carry vases; two young girls, seated, talk together; in the background, a large building in a landscape.

1,17 m. h. ; 1,98 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,68 m. — Engr. by Rousselet (Chalc. of the Louvre), Audran, etc. — This picture, painted at Rome, in 1648, for a banker, Pointel, a friend of Poussin, passed, on its owner's death, into the cabinet of the duke of Richelieu, then became property of the Crown. En 1710, it was in the cabinet of pictures, at Versailles. There are several repetitions with alterations. — Valued, during the Restauration, 100 000 francs.

* 499. — Le Brun (CHARLES). — Jesus bearing the Cross.

In the middle, Christ, in a violet robe and a blue cloak, whom tormentors try to raise up again, sinks under the weight of the cross; he turns on the right to the Virgin and St John, who hold out their arms to him. Before them, a woman, with a child, kneeling, and a horseman, seen from the back. In the left foreground, two men show Christ to a third man, sitting. In the background, horsemen sounding trumpets; Mount Calvary; on the right, a gate of Jerusalem.

1,56 m. h.; 2,14 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,50 m. — This picture, executed in 1687, was presented to the king, the following year, during the Holy Week; it was, in 1710, in the cabinet of pictures, at Versailles.

* 717. — Poussin. — Jesus Christ instituting the sacrament of the Eucharist.

In a room, lighted up by a lamp hanging from the ceiling, Christ, in a blue robe and a red cloak, at a table, in three quarters profile, to the left, holds in his hands the bread, that he is going to distribute to his disciples, some of whom, in the foreground, are kneeling, while the others stand by his sides. In the background, Ionic columns.

3,25 m. h.; 2,50 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Lombard and Landon. — The composition of this picture, ordered by king Louis XIII for the chapel of Saint-Germain-en-Laye, was given to the painter by M. Sable de Voyers, the superintendent of the buildings.

HALL XV

(“ Salon Denon ”, called also “ salle des Portraits ”)

This hall, which is on the east of the hall XV, is a part of the new Louvre. Among the paintings which decorate the dome, we remark the compositions of Muller representing the four periods of the art in France: under St Louis, François I, Louis XIV and Napoleon I. Around the hall are the busts of some French artists: David, by Rude, Bouchardon, by Schœnewerck, Perrier, by Pradier, Rigault, by Pigalle, etc. On the walls is exhibited the collection of the portraits of the artists of all countries, painted by their contemporaries or by themselves. This collection, instituted by a ministerial order of the 26th of December 1887, on the motion of M. Castagnary, the Director of the Fine Arts, was inaugurated by the President of the Republic, on the 14th of February 1888.

HALL VIII

(The ancient States' Hall, or "Salle des États")

FRENCH SCHOOL OF THE 19th CENTURY

This hall, which one enters either by the great gallery, or by the hall N° XI, is a part of the buildings of the new Louvre. The opening sitting of the Chambers was held there yearly from 1859 to 1869, except in 1864. The place was altered afterwards by M. Edmond Guillaume, the architect of the Louvre, who replaced the solide ceiling by a glass one, and composed the details of the decoration. Among the most remarkable sculptures, Modern France, by Hiolle, and the Genii of the ceiling, by Delaplanche, are worth to be mentioned.

In the middle of a boat, Virgil stands, wrapped up in a red drapery, the head bound with laurels ; on the left Dante, with a red hood on his head, stretching his arms out, looks in dismay at the damned who writhe in the waves; on the right, the boatman, seen from the back, shakes his oar; afar off, the flames of Hell.

1,80 m. h.; 2,40 m. br. C. — Fig. 1 m. — Engr. by Bournel, Henriot and Masson (Chalc. of the Louvre). — Salon of 1822. — Bought 1200 francs by the State. — Musée du Luxembourg. Delacroix executed this picture in a few weeks. "I have just ridden myself of a doggish toil, he wrote to his friend Soulier, which has taken up all my minutes for two months and a half. I have made, within this time, a rather considerable picture, that is going to figure in the Salon. I was very anxious to have something exhibited this year, and the more I make may be a decisive one." — "No work discloses the futur career of a great painter more plainly than this picture. The author casts his figures, groups them, bends them, at his will, with the boldness of Michael Angelo and the fecundity of Rubens." (A. THIERS.)

* 212. — Delacroix. — Don Juan's boat.

In the middle of a boat lost in the Ocean, a group of shipwrecked people, having put their names into a hat, wait with anxiety to know him that fate will designate to be the victim; on the bow, three starved men seem to be quite spent; on the right, near a dead woman, a ship-boy leans on his elbow, and an officer, wrapped up in his cloak, hides his face. — Signed on the left: 1841.

1,90 m. h.; 1,95 m. br. — Salon of 1841. Univ. Exhib. of 1855. — The subject is taken from lord Byron's poem. — Given to the Louvre by M. Adolphe Moreau (1883). — There is a sketch of this picture, which was knocked down for 7500 francs, at the Durand-Ruel sale, in 1881.

* 141 bis. — Corot. — A Recollection of Italy.

On the bank of a lake, in the shade of spreading trees, a little shepherd is sitting, and plays on the flute; two goats are close to him; in the right background, a town rises like an amphitheatre; in the foreground, the trunk of a cut down tree; in the sky, long streaks of clouds, the outlines of which are tinged with rosy colour by the sunset. — Signed on the left: COROT.

0,62 m. h.; 0,76 m. br. C. — View taken at Albano. — Given by M. Lallemand in 1892.

* 643. — Millet (JEAN-FRANÇOIS). — The Gleaners.

In a field which has just been reaped, three women, in profile, to the left, are gleaning the ears of corn; the one in the foreground is scarcely bent; the two others, stooping to the ground, pick up the ears with one hand, and with the other hold bundles of gleaned corn, already tied up. In the background, the harvesters heap the crop in stacks; on the right, in front of a farm-house, a man on horseback. — Signed on the right.

0,82 m. h.; 1,58 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,48. — Salon of 1857. — This work was much discussed; some saw in this painting of country manners a charge against the distress of the low people. "These are, said Paul de Saint-Victor, the Parques (Fatal Sisters) of Pauperism." Most critics, however, appreciated the grandeur and serenity of this canvas. — "The Gleaners, said Edmond About, neither appeal to charity nor to hatred; they glean their bread mite after mite, with the acting resignation that is the virtue of the peasant." Bought 2000 francs by M. Binder, this canvas was sold, for a very high amount of money, by M. Bischoffsheim to M^{me} Pommery, of Rheims, who bequeathed it to the Louvre in 1881.

* 208. — Delacroix. — Scenes of slaughter, in Chios.

In the foreground, a group, of wounded people, who wait for death; in the middle, two lovers clasping each other, close to a dying man who his upheld by a young girl, kneeling, her breast uncovered: on the left, a palikar, standing in an attitude of resignation, and, at his feet, a woman embracing her child; on the right, an old Greek woman, looking wild, and a child crawling to the bosom of his dead mother. In the middle distance, a Turkish horseman draws his sword to strike a soldier, who clings to his saddle; at the tail of the prancing horse, a young girl is fastened, who tries to hide her face.

Afar off, fighting in the plain, and, on the horizon, the sea. — Signed : EUGÈNE DELACROIX.

4,22 m. h. ; 3,52 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Masson and Laguillermie (Chalc. of the Louvre). Salon of 1824. — Bought by the State 6000 francs. The studies for this picture are numerous. One of them, which was exhibited in the salon of 1824, is composed of the mother and child. It was knocked for 3650 francs to M. Auguste Vacquerie at a sale which took place at the Hôtel Drouot in 1876. “ Beautiful as one of Niobe’s daughters, affecting as a Christian martyr, the maiden dragged along by the rider, takes, in the middle of those scenes of horror, the divine aspect of an allegory. She is Greece, spoiled and violated, struggling with the oppressor.” (Paul DE SAINT-VICTOR.)

* 830. — Rousseau. — A Marsh in the “ Landes.”

In the middle of a swampy plain comes, to the right, a drove, seeking to reach a wood of fir-trees; on the horizon, the Pyrenees.

0,63 m. h. ; 0,97 m. br. C. — Engr. by Gœux (Chalc. of the Louvre). — Hartmann sale. It was in 1849 that the painter, in a journey with Jules Dupré, conceived the first idea of this picture.

* 770. — Regnault (HENRI). — General Prim (October 18th 1868).

The general, coming from the right, stops short his nag, a splendid black Andalusian, that stands stiff on his fore-legs, and covers his bit with foam. He is bare-headed, with his hair stuck on his forehead, in three quarters profile, on the left; he is dressed in breeches, a tunic of a very dark blue colour, with golden cuffs, and a red sash; he reins up his horse with the left hand, and, with the right, holds a gold-laced dark blue cap. A band of peasants in arms, bearing standards, are moving about in the background. — Signed : H. REGNAULT, Madrid, 1869.

3,15 m. h. ; 2,58 m. br. C. — Life-size. — This portrait, commenced in Madrid directly after the events of October 1868, did not please the general who did not keep back his discontent from the painter. “ Unwilling to make any alteration in the picture”, wrote Regnault to a friend. “ and unwilling, likewise, to condemn the general to the suppliance of unceasingly seeing himself under the shape of an indecent man who has not washed his face (these are his own words), or to take away, by changing his head-dress, the heroic and legendary touch that I have sought to give him, I beg him kindly to forget his portrait as if it were a dream.” The painter sent the picture to Paris in the Salon of 1869. — Musée du Luxembourg.

C. — Arch-shaped. — Fig. 0,68 m. — Acquired for 6799 livres at the sale of Randon de Boisset in 1777. — This canvas is a reduction of the painting executed on a large scale at Rome, in 1745, for St Peter's church, where it has been replaced by a copy in mosaic, and whence it has been removed to the church Santa Maria degli Angeli.

Near a clump of trees, the young mother is sitting on a rock, in three quarters profile to the left, in a white gauze dress kept up by a red sash, her fair hair flowing over her shoulders; in the left hand she holds two arrows; her right arm, partly hidden by a black mantlet, encircles the waist of her daughter, standing by her left side, in a white dress, over which a blue sash is tied up, and bending a bow with her two hands. Landscape in the background. — Signed on a rock, to the left: ANGELICA KAUFFMAN, pinx. Romae, 1786.

1,30 m. h.; 1,04 m. br. C. — Kneec-piece, life-size. — Coll. of Napoléon.

* 99. — Chardin. — The female Caterer.

Standing on the right, the body facing the front, the head in three quarters profile to the left, a servant-girl, in white cap and bodice, with a lilac apron and a striped petticoat, lays a loaf on a kneading-trough; with the right hand, she holds a leg of mutton wrapped up in a napkin; in the foreground, on the floor, two bottles and a dish; on the left, in a room, a lady's maid, in a yellow dress, talks, on the threshold with a visitor whose face only is to be seen. — Signed, in the middle, on the wall: CHARDIN, 1729.

0,46 m. h.; 0,37 m. br. C. — Under life-size. — Engr. by Guérard and Lépicié, in 1742, with this quatrain: A votre air, j'estime et je pense, — Ma chère enfant, sans calculer, — Que vous prenez sur la dépense — Ce qu'il faut pour vous habiller. — "From your look, I deem and think, dear child, without any calculation, — you deduct from the household expenses — what you want for you finery". — Salon of 1739. — Sold 164 livres to chevalier de la Roque in 1745. Collections of Dr Maury and Giroux senior in 1831. Bought in 1867 of M. Laperlier for 4050 francs. There is a repetition, with alterations, of this picture, in the Lichtenstein gallery, at Vienna. "M. Chardin is always like to himself and always matchless, for such amusing little subjects. Everything he produces is liked by all; but what seems to be preferred this year is a Cook coming back from the shambles and bread-market (Cuisinière revenant de la boucherie et du marché au pain)." (Description raisonnée des tableaux exposés au Salon du Louvre, 1739).

* 221. — De Marne (JEAN-LOUIS). — A road.

On a paved road, bordered with trees, to the left, a cart is drawn by two oxen and an ass, a countrywoman calls her cattle together, and, close to the frame, a mail-coach wheels away; on the right, before a farm-house, the door of which is open, a small public square with a Calvary; a man standing, talks there with a woman, seated; a cow comes back to the stable, and a knife-grinder is at work, while a young workman turns the wheel. Landscape in the background.

*370. — Greuze. — A Father's curse.

In a room, on the left, the father of family is sitting near a table, in profile, to the right. He thrusts his hand forward, as if to curse his son, who has just enlisted: a young girl, on her knees before him, endeavours to soothe his wrath. In the middle, to the right, the son, whom his mother keeps in her embrace, turns in three quarters profile to his father, and lifts up his arm as if to check the curse; on both sides, a child clings to his clothes. In the middle distance, the servant clasps her hands, and a little boy stands with a frightened look; on the right, against the open door, the crimp grins.

1,30 m. h.; 1,62 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,80 m. — Engr. by Robert Gaillard. — Salon of 1765. — This picture and the Chastised Son (" le Fils puni ", no 371) had been sold 21000 livres in 1785, at the sale of count de Verri, and 13000 francs at that of M. de Laneuville, in 1813. They were bought by Louis XVIII of M. de Ville-Serre, in 1820. for 10 000 francs. Two pen drawings of these pictures, washed in Indian ink, relieved with white on blue paper, came to the hammer in the sale of M. de Saint-Maurice, in 1786. A painted sketch of the mother's head was sold 700 francs at the Durand Duclos sale, in 1835. "Every thing is well understood, ordained, characterized, in this picture: the grief and even the weakness of the mother to a child that she has spoiled, as well as the passion of the old man, the insolence of the ungrateful wretch, and the shame of the old soldier, who cannot help shrugging his shoulders at the sight of what is going on." (DIDEROT.)

* 368. — Greuze (JEAN-BAPTISTE). — The Emperor Severus reproaches his son Caracalla with having plotted to murder him.

In the middle of the room of a palace, the Emperor, lifts up on his bed, and stretches out his arm to Caracalla, standing on the left. On the right, at the head of the bed, two councillors of Severus talk together. In the background, a wall decorated with fluted pilasters, and a drapery, hanging.

846. — Sigalon. — St Jerome's Vision.

Three angels appear to St Jerome lying on a rock; one of the three points at Heaven, the other two sound in his ears the trumpet of the last doom; at the feet of the saint, on the right, a lion; on the left, a red robe and hat. — Signed, on the left : X. SIGALON, 1829.

4,38 m. h.; 2,65 m. br. C. Arch-shaped. — Over life-size. — Salon of 1831. — Bought 4000 francs by Charles X.

0,74 m. h.; 0,60 m. br. C. Oval-shaped. — Breast-piece, life-size. — Engr. by Bordes. — Sold 300 francs at the sale of La Live de Jully in 1769, this picture was bought 2000 francs by king Louis XVIII of M. Spontini, in 1820.

*922. — Vernet (CLAUDE-JOSEPH). — Coming back from Fishing.

In the foreground several people stand looking at fishes, that fishers bring from their boats to the beach; a man drags on a ray with a hook; on a rock, a Turk, seated, with a woman by his side, is smoking his chibouk, and an other walks about, with a woman in an oriental dress. On the right, the citadel, near which a great fire is burning; in the left, a tower, on the top of which a flag is waving. On the sea, a three-masted ship, with all sails set, and a boat; a light-house, at the entrance of the harbour. — Signed : J. VERNET, f. 1772.

0,98 m. h.; 1,62 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,14 m. — Ancient coll. — Salon of 1773. — One of the Quatre parties du Jour, bespoken by countess de Barry in 1770, and delivered in 1771 and 1772: Vernet touched, for them, at M. de Beaujon's, who was the banker of the court, 18 000 livres.

*34. — Boucher. — A Pastoral subject (The Nest).

On the right, under a tree, two shepherdesses are sitting in profile, to the left; one is bare-headed; the other wears a straw hat, with tucked up edges. A shepherd, upright, in the middle distance, offers to the latter a nest of birds, that he has just taken on a tree against which he is still leaning; at the feet of the shepherdesses, a red cloak, a basket of flowers and a cage; in the middle, a third shepherdess, kneeling, in full face, surrounded with ewes, is about to shear one of them, that she holds in her arms. Landscape in the background, with a lake and a fountain surrounded by two Loves who overturn an urn. — Signed : F. BOUCHER.

On the right, Belisarius, blind, is sitting on the steps of a temple, in profile, to the right, begging alms. On a stone, against which his staff is leant, one reads : DATE OBOLUM BELISARO. He has between his knees a child, who holds out a hat, into which a woman, wrapped up in a great white veil, is about to lay her mite; on the left, a soldier, knowing Belisarius, marks his wonder by a gesture, and two persons are talking together. Landscape in the background. — Signed, E. DAVID, faciebat anno MDCCLXXXIV, Lutetiæ.

1,02 m. h.; 1,15 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,50 m. — Engr. by Morel under David's direction. — Salon of 1785. — This canvas is a reduction, executed by Fabre and Guadet, and touched up by David, of a large picture exhibited in the Salon of 1781, bought by the Elector of Trier, brought back to France, during the wars of the Revolution, by a contractor of the army, then sold to Lucien Bonaparte.

* 367. — Granet. — Sodoma, a painter, is brought to the Hospital (1549).

In a gloomy hall, lighted up on the left by a narrow window, the painter lifts himself up on his wooden bed; on the right, three men standing, and a fourth one, seated on a hand-barrow, in Florentine costumes, are looking at him; near the bed, attached to a beam, a pallet, a sword and a cloak. — Signed: GRANET, ROMA, 1815.

0,75 m. h.; 1 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,28 m. — Bought by King Louis-Philippe in 1846, for 2000 francs.

1,14 m. h.; 1,40 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,60 m. — Got the second prize of painting in the competition of the Academy, in 1771. — Musée Napoléon.

* 469. — Lancret. — Innocence.

To the right, on a circular stone bench, with a fountain above, a young woman is sitting, in three quarters profile to the left, wearing a light green satin dress, a low-cut bodice and flowers in her fair hair; she looks at a bird flying about at the end of a string which she keeps in her hand; by her side, a little girl, in a red robe and blue petticoat. On the left, a young man is sitting, in three quarters profile to the right, clad in a shot-coloured costume, with a red cloak and a red flat cap; in the foreground, a cage and a basket of flowers. Landscape in the background.

0,85 m. h.; 0,96 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,40 m. — Cut in profile; frieze-panel of a small drawing-room, in the palace of Fontainebleau. The fellow to no 468.

* 369. — Greuze. — The Betrothed Country-girl.

In the middle, the betrothed girl, looking very nervous, wears a white dress and cap, a yellow petticoat, and a rose in her bodice, cut on the breast; she slightly bends her head, and gives her arm to her affianced husband, who, turning in three quarters profile to the right, receives a purse from the old father, behind whose arm-chair a sister of the bride stands. In the foreground, at a table, the notary, seen from the back, holds the marriage contract; on the left, the mother is seated, weeping, in profile to the right, and sadly squeezes the hand of her daughter, on whose shoulder a young girl, in tears, is leaning; behind the mother's chair, three children; close to her, a little girl feeding hens, which are pecking about, in the foreground. In the background, a staircase leading to the upper story, a white wall, on which a fowling-piece and a lantern are hooked, and an open press.

0,90 m. h.; 1,18 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,50 m. — Engr. by Flippart. — Salon of 1761. Painted to order for M. Randon de Boisset, who gave it up, for 9000 livres, to marquis de Marigny. At the sale of the Marigny coll., in 1785, Joullain bought it 16 650 livres for the king. A drawing of this picture was paid 422 livres at the sale of M. de La Julienne. and a head of the betrothed girl, which is thought to be M^{lle} Ducreux's likeness, was knocked down at 300 livres, at the Mariette sale, in 1775. "This is certainly the best thing Greuze ever painted. This canvas will do him honour, both as a painter skilled in his art and as a man of wit and taste. The subject is pathetic, and one feels overcome by a sweet emotion, when looking at it." (DIDEROT. — Salon of 1761.) — "The success of this work was very great. The public did not choose to see the want of harmony in the colours, the disagreement of the tones, the inadequacy of the execution; they were fascinated, enraptured, taken up by the scene, the idea, the emotion, pervading the canvas." (DE GONCOURT.)

* 468. — Lancret. — The Music Lesson.

On the left, before a marble pedestal, a maiden, in a red dress and a blue bodice, is sitting in profile to the right; she sings, looking at a music-book presented to her by her friend, sitting lower, in a greenish dress and an embroidered yellow bodice. Both wear flowers in their fair hair; in the middle distance, on the right, a young musician stands in profile, to the left, in chesnut-brown clothes and flat cap, and plays on a mandolin, which is supported by his right leg; at his feet, his cloak. Landscape in the background, with a small lake on the right.

0,88 m. h.; 0,98 m. br. C. Cut in profile. — Fig. 0,40 m. — Frieze-panel of a little drawing-room, in the palace of Fontainebleau. The fellow to no 469.

* 884. — Troy (JEAN-FRANÇOIS DE). — Esther, dressing.

The queen is seated on a stool, in three quarters profile to the left, wearing very ample white clothes; one of her attendants dries up her feet; on the right, two others clasp on her right arm a pearl bracelet; on the left, another takes a cloak out of a chest, another holds out a mirror; a third one carries in her hands a white and blue flat cap, adorned with an egret; a fourth, behind the queen, smooths her fair hair. Mordecai, in rich oriental clothes, stands in the middle distance, looking at a mirror in which the face of Esther is reflected. — Signed: DE TROY, 1738.

3,20 m. h.; 4,70 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Salon of 1738. — Coll. of Louis XV. — One of the seven models for tapestry-work, forming the set of the History of Esther, which J.-F. de Troy was ordered to execute in 1736. — Esther, dressing as the Fainting away and the Crowning of Esther, was painted at Paris; the four other pieces were executed in Rome, where G.-F. de Troy settled in 1788, as the Director of the Academy.

2,34 m. h.; 1,64 m. br. C. — Coll. of Louis XIV. — "Some time after Louvois's death (1691), Parrocel having sent in the Crossing of the Rhine, which had been ordered for the gallery of Marly, the king thought it so worthy of his attention, that he had it placed in the Council Chamber at Versailles." (Mém. de l'Acad. royale.)

* 969. — Voiriot (GUILLAUME). — Portrait of the painter Jean-Marc Nattier (1685-1766).

He sits in a green arm-chair, in three quarters to the right; powdered wig; red velvet clothes; white lace sleeves and frill. He supports on his left knee a portfolio for drawings; in his right hand, which rests on a table loaded with papers, a copper pencil-case. On the right, in the middle distance, on an easel, a picture representing the Triumph of Venus.

1,20 m. h.; 0,95 m. br. C. — Knee-piece, life-size. — Reception piece for the Academy (1759).

479. — De la Porte (ROLAND). — Musical Instruments.

1 m. h.; 0,81 m. br. C. — Reception piece for the Academy (1763). — Musée Napoléon.

Before an altar, erected between two columns, on a raised platform decked with a red carpet, on the right, Coréus stabs himself, to save Callirrhoea, lying insensible on his left, with her breast uncovered. Four young men, terror-stricken, surround the high priest, towards whom an old man hastens, coming from the left. In the foreground, on the same side, a woman, accompanied by a child, throws herself back, full of fright, and two men hide themselves behind a column; in the upper part, in the midst of clouds, two figures symbolize Love and Vengeance.

3,09 m. h. ; 4 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Salon of 1765. — Ordered by Louis XIV, at a price of 2000 livres, and destined to be reproduced in tapestry work at the manufactory of the Gobelins. There is a sketch, that the painter had given to his friend Bergent, a receiver-general of Finances.

* 440. — Hilaire (JEAN-BAPTISTE). — Reading.

In a park, a young woman is seated on a bench, in three quarters to the left, with a pink dress and a white kerchief on her head, holding a fan and some flowers; by her side, an open book and a parasol; at her feet, a bundle of letters. She turns her sorrowful face on the right to a young woman, seen from the back, in a white dress, a black mantlet and a black straw hat adorned with white feathers, who reads a letter to her. Landscape in the background; on the left, a fountain, and, upon a pedestal, a basket of flowers.

96. — Chardin. — Kitchen Utensils (A Menu for a flesh-day).

On a kitchen table are a copper caldron, a strainer, an earthen flask, two bottles, chestnuts, a loaf. On the wall hangs a piece of raw meat. — Signed, on the table: CHARDIN, 1731.

0,33 m. h. ; 0,41 m. br. C. — Purchased, in 1832, of M. Laneuville, together with nos 95 and 97, for 3000 francs. This picture and its fellow (no 95) had been bought by Thoré, at Vendôme, for 10 francs, and, in a public auction, in 1845, by Baroilhet, for 155 francs.

* 247. — Desportes (FRANÇOIS). — Dogs watching over game.

In the foreground, red partridges, a duck and snipes are laid on the earth; on the left, a dog, sitting, turns to the right and looks at a spaniel hidden behind some brushwood, the muzzle of which only can be seen. Landscape in the background. — Signed in the middle, on the rock: DESPORTES, 1718.

1,10 m. h. ; 1,36 m. br. C. — Square; was oval-shaped originally.

* 899. — Van Loo (CARLE). — A Hunters' Halt.

In a glade, a meal has been served up on a table-cloth spread on the earth; in the middle of the foreground, a sportsman, bare-headed, with two coupled dogs at his feet, takes hold of a bottle of wine; a young nobleman, wearing a pearl-coloured coat with golden cuffs, turns, in profile, to a lady on the right, gorgeously attired in a white and yellow dress, trimmed with silver ornaments, a velvet ribbon tied round her neck, her hair powdered, and holds out a plate to her; on the left, a lackey searches in a small chest, and a negro removes a basket; on the right, a wipper-in unloads a richly caparisoned mule; in the middle distance, a guest cuts up a pie, three young men are attentive to a horsewoman; a young woman stops eating, to glance at this group, and a young man helps himself with wine. In the background, a landscape with hunters and dogs; on the left, a clump of trees. — Signed, in the middle, on the ground: CARLE VAN LOO, 1737.

2,22 m. h. ; 2,50 m. br. C. — Formerly curved at the top and bottom. — Fig. 0,70 m. — Salon of 1737. — After being bought and placed in the little apartments, at Fontainebleau, it happened that this picture was not comprised in the sale of the Fontainebleau paintings, which had not been found beautiful enough to be kept (Return of the 17th of Prairial, year II), and was cast aside in the garrets; it was transferred to the Tuileries in 1846, after being new-canvassed, and definitively ascribed to the Louvre in 1848. — "It is an animated and charming composition, a most cleverly arranged scene, and most ingeniously executed. To be sure, the landscape is rather blue, the grounds too much remind one of the sceneries that van Loo painted for the Opera; but the costumes are most elegantly coquetish, all the attitudes are natural, the colour is luminous and cheerful." (CHARLES BLANC.)

95. — Chardin. — Kitchen Utensils (A Menu for a Lenten-day).

Upon a table, a copper caldron, a small stove, a dish, a gridiron, some eggs; on the wall herrings are hung. — Signed, on the edge of the table: CHARDIN, 1731.

 982. — Watteau. — *Embarking for Cythera.

On the right, on the top of a hillock shaded by a clump of trees, near a Term representing Venus, on which wreaths of flowers, a bow and a quiver hang, a maiden is seated, showily dressed in white and pink satin, holding a fan, and casting her head down; on her left side, a pilgrim, with his staff and his bottle-gourd at his feet, wearing a blue camail over a red garment, whispers in her ear; before her, a small Love, sitting on a quiver, a black cape over his wings, pulls down the lower edge of her dress; on the left side of this group, a gentleman gives a hand to a maiden, seen from the back, who rises from the lawn on which she was sitting, and another gentleman leads away her companion, round whose waist he has put his arm; in the middle distance, below the hillock, pilgrims, gorgeously attired, leaning on their staff, clasp girls in their arms, and go to a golden bark, on the left, the prow of which bears a chimæra; two half-naked rowers manage her; Loves are ready to spread out a red drapery, while others flutter about. In the background, a landscape with a lake surrounded by bluish mountains.

1,27 m. h. ; 1,92 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,30 m. — Engr. by Tardieu. — Reception piece for the Academy (1770). A repetition, painted later on and more carefully finished off, is in Berlin. " But by the charm of the light in the distance, by the enticing beauty of the whole, the Paris picture triumphally excels the other; it is the very cheerfulness of the most lovely colours on earth, caught through a sunbeam." (GONCOURT.) "Which words would be able to express this tender, aerial, ideal colouring, so well fitted to a dream of youth and happiness, permeated with fresh azure and luminous mist in the distance, warmed up by blonde transparent tints in the foreground, as true as nature, and bright like an apotheosis in an Opera." (TH. GAUTIER.)

405. — Hallé (NOEL). — The Quarrel of Minerva and Neptune.

Standing on a conch, which two tritons push to the right against the shore. Neptune, with a green cloth round his loins, in three quarters profile to the left, brandishes his trident and looks at Minerva seated on a cloud, clad in a white cuirass with a blue cloak over it, and a white-plumed helmet; the goddess stretches out her left arm to Neptune, and bears in her right hand a sceptre with which she points at the olive-tree that she has caused to spring from the earth; on the right, the horse that Neptune has just created and whose hoofs are still buried in the ground; afar off, the walls of Athenes.

1,56 m. h.; 1,96 m. br. C. — Half-life-size. — Reception piece for the Academy (1748). — Comes from the castle of Fontainebleau.

 91. — Chardin. — *The industrious Mother.

In a room, on the left, a woman is sitting, in profile, to the right, with a yellow-striped white dress, a white apron and a white neckerchief. She holds in her lap a tapestry-work that a little girl, standing by her side, in a white dress and cap, is going to take; in the foreground, on the left, a small chest and a pug-dog; on the right, a wooden tool, on which wool skeins are rolled up. In the background, a chimney and a green screen.

0,48 m. h.; 0,38 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,38 m. — Salon of 1740. — Engr. in 1740 by Lépicié, with these lines: Un rien vous amuse, ma fille. — Hier, ce feuillage était fait. — Je vois, par chaque point d'aiguille, — Combien votre esprit est distrait. — Croyez-moi, fuyez la paresse, — Et goûtez cette vérité, — Que le travail et la sagesse — Valent les biens de la beauté; "A trifle amuses you, my girl, — Yesterday, this foliage was already done. — I see, from every stitch of your needle, — How absent-minded you are. — Believe me, shun idleness, — And understand this truth: — Work and Wisdom — Are worth the blessings of Beauty." — Bought 30 livres at the Chardin sale, for king Louis XV. An original repetition is in the Museum of Stockholm.

 279. — Favray (le chevalier ANTOINE). — *Ladies of Malta on a round of visits.

In a room, a Maltese lady, richly attired in a flowered dress and a white and gold veil, in profile to the left, takes up the hand that is held out to her by a lady wrapped up in a black mantle, under which nothing is seen but a bit of a white whimple and a pearl necklace; between the two, an elderly woman, whose face only is visible. In the middle distance, three women clad in mantles, and a fourth one, seen from the back, in a light-coloured dress, near whom a dog is yelping; on the right, a negro-woman shows an apple to a babe that a nurse lulls asleep near a cradle. In the background, a bed, and on the walls, pictures. A door is open on a garden. — Signed, on the cradle: A. FAVRAY. A Malte, 1751.

0,49 m. h.; 0,65 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,32 m. — Reception piece for the Academy (1763).

894. — Vallayer-Coster (M^{me} A.). — The Attributes of Music.

Upon a table covered with a gold fringed blue carpet, are sundry musical instruments, and, upon a desk supporting a flat candlestick, an open score.

0,72 m. h.; 1,40 m. br. C.

* 803. — Hubert Robert. — The Portico of Octavia, used as a fish-market, in Rome.

In the left foreground, merchants, and, against a brick arcade, a stall, whither a man and a woman carry, on a hand-barrow, two fishes; in the middle distance, the portico, surmounted with an iron railing, on which two children lean their elbows; afar off, a street, seen in perspective, with merchants in the open air.

1,64 m. h.; 1,16 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,18 m. — Salon of 1785. — Coll. of marquis de Montesquiou.

* 810. — Hubert Robert. — Within a Park.

On the right, before a piece of water, two women and a dog; on the left, a palace, on the balcony of which a woman spreads out linen to dry, and a fountain from which a servant-girl draws water; in the background, on a pedestal, a statue, and a large flight of stairs leading to a garden and a terrace adorned with a balustrade.

1,44 m. h.; 0,73 m. br. C. — Ancient coll. — Comes from the palace of Saint-Cloud.

* 266. — Drouais (FRANÇOIS-HUBERT). — Portraits of Charles-Philippe of France, count of Artois (afterward Charles X), at six years of age, and of Marie-Adélaïde-Clotilde-Xavière of France (afterwards queen of Sardinia), when four years old.

In a garden, in the foreground, mounted on a goat, in profile to the left, with a pink ribbon round her neck, the little princess is in full face, wearing a white dress adorned with lace, her powdered hair covered with a cap, and having under her left arm a basket of flowers. On the left, behind the goat, the prince stands, in three quarters profile to the right, the head facing the front, in a grey garment with frogs, the ribbon of the Holy Ghost crosswise, his hair powdered and curled, he lays his left hand on his sister's shoulder, and holds in his right hand a bundle of grass, which the goat eagerly looks at. A landscape in the background: on the left, two sheep, lying down; on the right, a clump of trees. — Signed: DROUAIS le fils, 1763.

535. — Le Moyne (FRANÇOIS). — Olympus.

Gods and goddesses are sitting upon clouds; Mercury takes his flight; the chariot of the day sets itself in motion.

0,49 m. h.; 0,65 m. br. C. — Sketch of a ceiling. — Ancient coll.

* 372. — Greuze. — The broken Jug.

A maiden, with a white dress and a low-cut white bodice to which a rose is fastened, is seen in full face; she wears round her neck a gauze kerchief, and, in her auburn hair, a violet ribbon and a flower; she keeps with both hands, in the folds of her dress, a bundle of flowers, and carries a cracked jug, the handle of which is passed under her right arm; on the right, in the middle distance a fountain, with a squatting lion.

1,40 m. h.; 0,85 m. br. C. Oval-shaped. — Knee-piece, life-size. — Engr. by Massard and Desvachez (Chalc. of the Louvre). — Bought 3001 francs in 1785, at the sale of marquis de Verri. Mme du Barry possessed a repetition of it. "Greuze, whenever he paints an innocent girl, takes care to half-open the gauze and disclose the round of a rising throat; he puts in the eyes a glossy flame and on the lips a moist smile, which suggest that innocence might very easily turn into lust." (TH. GAUTIER.)

800. — Hubert Robert. — View of the bridge over the Gard.

In the foreground, countrywomen come to draw water from the river, which a boat crosses; on the opposite bank, a group of walking people have stopped near a horseman; the bridge, with its three superposed rows of arcades, is seen in full face; a number of peasants enter, on the right, under an arcade. Landscape in the background; stormy sky.

2,42 m. h.; 2,45 m. br. — Fig. 0,18 m. — Salon of 1787.

403. — Hallé (NOËL). — The Genii of Poetry, History, Natural Philosophy and Astronomy.

In a garden, on the right, at the foot of a bust of Pallas, a group of children, one of whom holds out an inkstand, while another gets ready to write on an open book which is supported by three other children; on the left, two children, near an instrument of natural philosophy, look through a telescope placed on the ground; in the middle distance, a group of three children, one of whom holds a desk. In the clouds, figures dancing in a ring, and Pegasus, near which a Love, crowned with a star, holds a lyre. Landscape in the background; on the left, a circular temple. — Signed: HALLE, 1761.

3,20 m. h.; 3,20 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Salon of 1761. — Ordered by the king, to be executed in tapestry-work, at the Gobelins.

923. — Vernet (CLAUDE-JOSEPH). — A Landscape (The Building of a High Road).

In the foreground, journeymen work on a road; engineer Perronnet, on horseback, in the middle of an escort, reads a paper that a servant holds out to him; afar off, a mill, and a town upon a hill; on the left, a torrent over which a bridge is thrown. — Signed on the parapet, to the left, near a mile-stone bearing the n^o 259: J. VERNET, f., 1774.

0,97 m. h.; 1,62 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,13 m. — Salon of 1774. — Ordered by abbé Terray, at the same time as a picture of the same size, the Outskirts of a Fair, which is now in the

638. — Portraits of the « Grand Dauphin », the son of Louis XIV, and of his wife and children.

Museum of Montpellier. J. Vernet writes down, in his diary, that he has received, on the 7th of November 1774, a sum of 6000 livres, and, on the 12th of January 1775, a sum of 4000 livres, on account, towards the payment of these two paintings. Abbé Terray sale (1779). — Musée Napoléon.

* 45. — Boucher. — A Pastoral.

Near to a tree, a young shepherdess, with a white and yellow satin dress, the bodice of which is open, and a shepherd in a yellow waistcoat, having on his knees his red vest, are sitting on a knoll; the girl, who wreathes flowers to make a crown, is facing the front, and turns her face in profile to the young man, who presents her with a dove; on the left, sheep; on the right, the bird's cage; in the foreground, a basket of flowers. — Signed on the stone, to the right: F. BOUCHER, 1763.

0,94 m. h.; 0,74 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,62 m.

* 921. — Vernet (CLAUDE-JOSEPH). — A Landscape (Girls, bathing).

On the right, maidens take off their clothes on the strand; others, near to a tree, have a lunch; in the foreground, a man sits on the bank, with a dog by his side; in the river, three girls bathing, and a boat in which are several maidens. In the background, a waterfall, and a bridge which connects the two steep banks commanded by houses and ruins; on the left, men hidden in the brushwood, look at the bathing girls. — Signed, on the right: J. VERNET, f., 1772.

0,98 m. h.; 1,62 m. br. C. — Fig. 0,13 m. — Ancient coll.

* 638. — Mignard. — Full-Length portraits of Louis of France, the son of Louis XIV (the Grand Dauphin) (1661-1711), his wife (1660-1690) and his three children, in an early age.

In an open gallery, on the left, the Grand Dauphin is seated, in three quarters profile, leaning his elbow on a table and fondling a greyhound; clad in a blue garment, with a large red cloak over his shoulders, he turns his face, set in a blonde perwig, to the Grande Dauphine (Marie-Anne-Christine-Victoire of Bavaria), sitting, on the right, close to the table, wearing a yellow dress with blue sleeves, and a string of pearls in her brown hair. She has near her, seated on a cushion, with a chemisette as only garment, her youngest child, the duke of Berry, whom she upholds, while looking, on the right, to the duke of Burgundy (Louis XV's father) who, clad in red, brandishes a lance; in the foreground, seated on a red cushion, the duke of Anjou (afterwards king of Spain, under the name of Philip V), in a blue costume, fondles a dog. In the background, two Loves in the air draw up a drapery; on the horizon, a garden.

2,32 m. h.; 3,04 m. br. C. — Fig. Life-size. — This picture, placed, in 1710, in the communication gallery, at Meudon, was brought afterwards to Versailles. During the Revolution it was stolen, and, in 1815, sold by an amateur to king Louis XVIII.

* 467. — Lancret. — The Nest of birds.

On the left, under a clump of trees, a shepherdess is sitting upon a bench, in a red dress with a blue bodice; leaning on a cage, she turns in three quarters profile to a shepherd, on the right, clad in grey, who puts his arm round her waist and shows her a nest of birds. Landscape in the background, with a thatched cot on the right.

0,16 m. h.; 0,21 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,10 m. — Bought 300 francs of M. Argiot by king Louis-Philippe in 1834.

* 466. — Lancret. — The Turtle-doves.

On the right, a shepherd, in yellow clothes, shows to a shepherdess, sitting before him, in a grey and yellow dress, both seen in profile to the left, turtle-doves perched in a tree. Landscape in the background.

0,16 m. h.; 0,21 m. br. W. — Fig. 0,10 m. — Bought 200 francs of M. Argiot by king Louis-Philippe in 1834.

* 36. — Boucher. — Vulcanus exhibits to Venus the weapons destined to Æneas.

On the right, Vulcanus is seated on the skin of a tiger, leaning his elbow on an anvil; he turns his head to Venus on the left, and holds out a sword to her; near the god, various instruments and a quiver are put in a heap. The goddess, reclining on a cloud, in profile, to the right, leans on a Nymph lying at her feet; two others fly through the air, as well as Loves, two of whom carry a helmet adorned with blue feathers; in the left foreground, Venus's chariot, doves and a Love who wreathes flowers. — Signed: F. BOUCHER, 1757.

3,20 m. h.; 3,20 m. br. W. — Life-size. — Salon of 1757. — Acquired by king Louis XV, to be reproduced in tapestry-work at the Gobelins.

* 90. — Chardin. — Fruits and Animals.

Upon a circular stone table, partly covered with a table-cloth, fruits are laid over one another in a basket, oysters in a plate, with a knife, and a lemon which has been cut; on the right, a bowl and two decanters: on the left, two glasses and a ewer; in the background, a parrot sat on a vase; in the foreground, near a bucket in which two bottles keep cool, a dog lifts up his head to the parrot. — Signed on the right, below the table: J. CHARDIN, F., 1728.

1,90 m. h.; 1,28 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Reception piece for the Academy (1728). — This picture, which had been placed by Napoleon I at Compiègne, was brought back to the Louvre in 1831.

89. — Chardin. — Interior of a kitchen.

Upon a table, on the right, a knife, an earthen pot, a skimmer, a caldron and a pan are placed on a table-cloth; on the left, two fishes, oysters and leeks; a cat glances at these things with a greedy look; on the ceiling a skate hangs.

- * 249. — Desportes (FRANÇOIS). — Portrait of the Painter (1661-1743).

He is seated on a knoll, on the right, the body facing the front, the head bare, in three quarters profile to the right, dressed as a sportsman: grey cloak, violet breeches, blue vest, leathern gaiters; round the neck, a cravat, loosely tied up. In his right hand, he holds a gun, and with the left, fondles a dog which looks at him; at his feet, heads of game; on the left, a harrier of a sandy hue turns its heads to its master. Landscape in the background.

- * 230. — Desportes (FRANÇOIS). — Bonne, Nonne and Ponne, bitches of Louis XIV's pack.

On the left, three bitches, with black-spotted white coats, stop partridges that hide themselves in the grass, on the right. Landscape in the background, with hills on the horizon.

1,62 m. h.; 2 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Was formerly at Marly, in the apartment of Louis XV.

- * 869. — Tocqué. — Supposed Portrait of M^{me} de Graffigny (1694-1728).

Seen in full face, in a blue dress and a fur-trimmed red cloak; she wears on her powdered hair a white cap, and, over it, a black mantilla, tied up under the chin.

0,81 m. h.; 0,65 m. br. — Breast-piece, life-size. — Bought in 1832 by king Louis-Philippe of M. Payen, for 500 francs.

- * 180. — Coypel (CHARLES-ANTOINE). — Perseus rescues Andromeda.

In the middle, Andromeda, chained up on a rock beaten by the waves, stretches out her arms towards Perseus, who comes down from the sky, on the left, and is going to pierce the monster which turns to him its threatening mouth; in the foreground, five Nereids look at the fight; on the right, Andromeda's parents, Cassiopea, on her knees, and Cepheus, king of Ethiopia, upright, are praying on the shore; on the platform of a fortress, a crowd of people.

1 m. h.; 1,24 m. br. C. — Under life-size. — Ancient coll.

- * 959. — Vestier (ANTOINE). — Portrait of the Painter's Wife.

She is seated, in three quarters profile, to the left, the head facing the front, in a crimson dress with an open bodice, a yellow skirt and a white-feathered straw hat; on the left, a table on which her right arm is leaning, and on an easel, a portrait; in the foreground, on a red stool, a little boy fondles a dog. — Signed: VESTIER, pictor regis, 1787.

1,76 m. h.; 1,32 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Bequeathed by M. Vestier, the painter's grandson, in 1875.

She is sitting on a knoll, naked, in three quarters profile, to the left, the head facing the front, the eyes cast down, holding in her right hand a white cloth with which she dries herself up; the left leg is bent up; the right one is stretched out; on the left, the basin of a fountain, surrounded with a stone wall; on the right, a red cloak thrown on the ground, and the two old men, hidden behind the trees of the garden.

2,05 m. h.; 1,15 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Porporati (Chalc. of the Louvre), Gandolfi, Landon and Filhol. — Reception piece for the Academy (1704). — "This is not, to be sure, the chaste spouse of the Scripture; it is quite a modern Susanna, brought nearer to us by her grace and her French countenance, charming in the seeming artlessness of a voluptuously modern attitude." (CHARLES BLANC.)

853. — Subleyras. — The Magdalen at the feet of Christ.

Dinner is served up at Simon the Pharisee's, in a large hall of his palace; in the middle, the table, round which the guests are reclining upon couches. On the left, Christ, in a red robe and a blue cloak, in profile to the left, turns to the Magdalen, on her knees, who wipes his feet with her fair hair; right and left, servants bring in dishes and flasks; before the table, a dog gnaws a bone, and two slaves, who were putting plates into a basket, stop in their work to gaze at the sinner. — Signed, on the floor, to the left: SUBLEYRAS; Uticensis pinxit Romæ, 1739.

2,15 m. h.; 6,79 m. br. C. — Life-size. — Engr. by Subleyras. — Painted for the convent of Asti, near Turin. Brought to the Louvre under Napoleon I. "It is not sturdy, tranquil and luminous, as the Wedding at Cana, but what a naturalness, fluency and pleasant colouring in a scale of silvery tones!" (TH. GAUTIER.)

BOTTICELLI (SANDRO DI MARIANI FILIPEPI, called)
1297. — Tornabuoni and the Three Graces (A fragment).

PALIER DARU

(The Landing of the Daru staircase)

On this landing, at the top of the staircase that leads from the Denon gallery to the first floor, four doors open, through which the visitor enters, on the east, into the vestibule of the Galerie d'Apollon; into the hall V, on the south-east; into the hall VI, on the south-west, and into the hall VII, on the west.

On the western wall, opposite the Victory of Samothrace, three frescoes have been placed, belonging to the Florentine school.

* 1297. — Botticelli. — An Allegorical subject: Giovanna Tornabuoni and the Graces, or Virtues.

On the right, a young woman, with a chestnut-brown dress, a white veil on her fair hair, a pearl necklace around the neck, and, at her feet, a child leaning on a shield, comes forward, in three quarters profile, to the left. She holds out with both hands a white linen cloth, into which four young women, dressed in tunics of softened hues, coming in pairs from the left, are throwing flowers.

2,12 m. h.; 2,84 m. br. — Life-size. — This fresco and the following one, acquired in 1882, at a cost of 46 500 francs, come from villa Lemmi (near Florence). They are said to have been painted on the occasion of the marriage of Lorenzo Tornabuoni with Giovanna Albizzi. The principal figure represents the bride, to whom the three Graces (or rather the four Virtues) bring presents.

* 1298. — Botticelli (SCHOOL OF). — Lorenzo Tornabuoni and the Liberal Arts.

On the left, a young man, whose long fair hair flow out of a red flat cap, clothed in a red-striped blue gown and a red cloak clasped on the right shoulder, in profile to the right, is led by a young woman, wrapped in a white tunic, to six women seated on the right in a semi-circle, one of whom, on a higher seat, presides over the others. Each of them holds in her hand a different attribute. In the background, a forest.

2,38 m. h.; 2,70 m. br. — Life-size. — See the note above.

Christ upon the cross stands out on a bluish ground. On the left, the Virgin is seen in full face, wrapped up in a violet cloak, the hands crossed, the head bent down; near her St Dominic, kneeling, the head in profile to the right, embraces the cross with both arms; on the right, St John, in three quarters profile to the left, clad in a long red cloak, twisting his hands, is sunk in grief.

1,25 m. h. ; 2,60 m. br. — Life-size. — Formerly in the dining-hall of the convent of Dominican friars, at Fiesole. — Bought in 1879. — See the note, no 1322. — This fresco is mentioned by MM. Crowe and Cavalcaselle and by Burckhart.
